G. E. Q. JOHNSON HITS ON WAY TO ROUT GANGLAND

U. S. Attorney Tells of War on Crime.

The surest way not to do something is to tell somebody you're going to do it.

It is harder to get into a gang than into polite society, because gangs go into your antecedents. You must have a criminal record. That is how thorough gang organization is.

Betrayal of trust in public office is treason in just as high a degree as Benedict Arnold's betrayal of his country was treason.

When the American people once understand an evil situation they correct it. That is the hopeful sign.

GEORGE E. Q. JOHNSON.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

"I would rather," said George E. Q. Johnson, "fight gangsters with indictments than with interviews."

Nevertheless, the United States district attorney for northern Illinois consented to this interview because it would be a convenient way of exhibiting to the people of Chicago what he calls "a cross section of organized crime."

For nearly four years Mr. Johnson has been living with the problem of organized crime. He originated, and thus far he is the only federal district attorney to employ, prosecutions for violations of the federal income tax law in the fight against gangdom. It was, he said, "a flank attack," and it has created panic in gangdom and hoodlumdom.

Gangsters in Income Tax Net.

For willful evasion of federal income tax Ralph Capone, brother of the notorious and ruthless Scarface Al, has been sentenced to serve three years in Leavenworth penitentiary and to pay a fine of $10,000.

For the same crime Jack Guzik, Al Capone's principal accomplice in the illicit booze traffic and in the maintenance of gambling hells, has been convicted and awaits sentence.

For the same crime Sam Guzik, Jack's brother and a Capone henchman; Terry Druggan, rich beer runner, and Frankie Lake, his partner, have been indicted and await trial.

To the same crime Frank Nitto, alias Nitti, confessed yesterday and was sentenced to serve eighteen months in Leavenworth and to pay a fine of $10,000.

Those three convictions and four indictments are part of Mr. Johnson's flank attack and they have struck at six of the most pestiferous and insolent malefactors in the field of organized crime in Chicago.

Their "Stock in Trade" Gone.

Of the significance of the convictions Mr. Johnson said:

"Ralph Capone and Jack Guzik can never again be leaders in organized crime. Their immunity—or gangdom's belief in their immunity—is gone. That was their stock in trade. They will not be able to count on old loyalties when they come out of prison. There is no friendship among the hoodlums. There are no ties such as bind honest men together and hold society together. There is no loyalty except the loyalty born of their common purpose. That purpose is easy money. Take their money away and they dry up like a weed that has been cut down."

So much for the convictions.

The indictments have been hardly less effective in spreading panic through gangdom, for in the federal courts an indictment is no idle gesture.

No Emotion with Uncle Sam.

"Here we are not emotional," said Mr. Johnson. "We prepare a case as a game of chess. We don't deal in theory or emotion. The work has often been slow and painful, but it has been effective. Our investigators are thorough. They will trace a check around the world."

That is why every step in the preparation of "the flank attack" has been difficult. That also is why every shred of the evidence obtained against leaders in organized crime not only has the highest value when it is offered in court but also is of prime importance in providing the community with a view of "the cross section of organized crime" to which Mr. Johnson thinks citizens ought to give heed.

"The more I study the operations of organized crime in Chicago," he said, "the more convinced I am that the greatest contribution I can make to my community is a presentation of a cross section of organized crime and

FIGHT OF LUCAS AGAINST NORRIS STIRS SENATORS

G. O. P. Aid Says He Opposed Nebraskan

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Cries of scandal and shouts of corruption were dinned about the heads of the leaders of the national Republican party today after disclosures before the Nye senatorial committee by and concerning Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the national Republican committee.

Lucas' plain statement that he had ordered and financed the printing and distribution of circulars in an effort to defeat his party's senatorial candidate in Nebraska, Senator George W. Norris, radical Republican, was denounced by Senator Norris on the senate floor. Lucas had said he opposed Norris because Norris was not a Republican—having fought for a Democrat for President both in 1924 and 1928.

Norris Makes Threats.

The Nebraska senator charged the leaders of the Republican party with connivance at fraud, perjury, and corruption, and promised that when the Nye committee had concluded he would bring forth charges which would send men from high political places to jail.

Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee, was asked whether Lucas would be made to resign. He declined to reply to the charges against his party, saying that he had no information concerning the Lucas matter and that he would not answer whether Lucas' resignation would be asked.

Will Lucas Be Chairman?

It was common report that Lucas was being groomed to take Senator Fess' place as chairman of the national committee. But the feeling was prevalent in some quarters in Washington tonight that the disclosures may have made him no longer an acceptable candidate for that office.

Opponents of the administration are enjoying the situation. Yesterday they were forced to bow to the will that came from the White House and pass relief measures in the form that Hoover wanted. Today they feel that they have put the Republican leaders in a hole with another exposure such as that which caused the resignation of Claudius S. Huston from the national committee chairmanship last summer.

Cutting Brings Up Subject.

The senate was considering the President's nominations to the federal power commission and charges about the power interests were flying when Senator Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, one of the radical Republican bloc, dragged in the revelations that the morning hearing of the Nye committee had brought out.

He asserted that the power trust had gone so far as to employ the services of the executive director of the Republican national committee in an effort to elect a Democrat running against a Republican candidate.

"I would like to ask the senator"—he turned to Senator Fess—"if there is any foundation to the rumor that Mr. Lucas has handed in his resignation. What stand on the matter is the senator taking?"

"I have no information on the matter," Mr. Fess replied, as he had replied earlier when Senator Gerald P. Nye [Rep., N. D.], chairman of the investigating committee, had asked him if he wished to testify.

Glenn Defends Party.

Senator Otis Glenn [Rep., Ill.], hurried to the defense of his party, with assertions that it was no worse for the Republican committee to attempt the defeat of a man they considered a Democrat politically than it was for the Democratic committee to help Senator Norris, as it had been reported.

His defense was the match that touched off the fireworks. Senator Robert B. Howell [Rep., Neb.], another of the radical group, leaped to the attack, declaring that the literature Lucas had sent out was of such nature that even he had not wished to have his name connected with it. He called on Lucas to resign.

And on his heels came Norris.

"Officials of a nation-wide reputation have been shown beyond a doubt to be guilty of perjury under their own sworn admission," he cried. "This literature that was sent out was not only false and malicious but it would be unworthy even of the meanest criminal."

"Since we are doubting propriety," —it was Senator Glenn again—"I doubt the propriety of Senator Norris

HE HURRIES TO PHONE BUT MEETS DELAY IN HOLDUP

The modesty of the manager of a loop hat store, two doors west of the Palace theater, last night delayed the sounding of a police alarm until a robber had escaped with $165 from the cash register.

William Sommerman, 6140 Rhodes avenue, the manager, was alone in the Gray hat store at 163 West Randolph street when the robber entered and ordered him into a back room at the point of a gun.

There he was ordered to remove his trousers, which the robbed rolled into a ball and hurled to the top of some high shelves. While Sommerman was piling boxes on which to climb to retrieve his trousers so that he could go to a telephone in the front of the store the thief emptied the cash register and disappeared. The robbery occurred at 8:10 p. m. while the street was crowded with late shoppers and patrons on the way to the theater.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 20.—(AP)—"Right here," said Edward Partington, "upon this very spot, an auto smacked me like a ton—I woke up on a cot. Two days ago it happened, friend, and grim hospital walls have just released me, on the mend, to make my Christmas calls."

Out on the street, with painful tread, limped Edward Partington. "I'll illustrate for you," he said, "just how the thing was done."

Then on the scene a swift machine bore down to aid the plot. Now Edward reeks of iodine; once more he's on his cot.

A robber posing as a florist's delivery boy, his pistol wrapped in fancy paper and a lily thrust in the muzzle, last night gained entrance to the home of Mrs. Sophie V. Kreml, 937 East 83d street, and robbed her of a $1,000 ring and $85 in cash.

North to Teach South in These Dixie Schools

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—The will of Harvey G. Woodward, steel maker, probated today, provides a trust fund of $7,500,000 to establish a chain of boys' schools throughout Alabama and the south.

One of the provisions specifically made in the will is that, for the first 75 years, all of the instructors in the schools must come from north of the Mason and Dixon line.

This is done, the will states, to teach the youth of the south that men of the north are essentially the same as men of the south.

Other provisions are that the schools shall not have over 200 students each; that there shall be one instructor to every ten students, and that the schools shall be at least 50 miles apart and none shall be in or near a city of more than 50,000 population.

For Boys in Teens.

Boys between 12 and 18 will be accepted, preference will be given applicants of 13 and 14, who plan to remain in school until they are 25. Admission is to be restricted to white children born in the United States of parents who are either native citizens or of British descent.

No inter-school athletic contests will be permitted and no secret fraternities or societies will be allowed.

The schools are to maintain their own farms and the students are to grow their own fruits and vegetables.

No Negro servants or workmen are to be allowed about the schools on the assumption that the boys might absorb some of the language and customs of the blacks. Each boy must take care of his own room and his own wardrobe.

Must Pay Own Tuition.

The boys must pay their own tuition of $200 a year. Later on, if they prove fitted for developments the will provides that loans shall be made to them to be paid without interest.

"The library of each school," the will says, "must contain a large open fireplace for the enjoyment and content of the boys."

No foreign languages are to be taught and there will be no examinations.

No religious exercises shall be held in the schools unless originated at the request of the students.

"The aim of the schools will be to teach students to teach themselves," the will says. "The value of the schools will be not in the subjects and things taught primarily but the way in which they are taught—in presenting the basic principles in their proper order and relation and, most important of all, in the training of the mind and body in good habits. It seems to be generally agreed by those who have made a study of the subject that the one thing of greatest value really possible to teach any one is 'to teach him to teach himself.'

What Founder Aims At.

"The school is not in any of its parts to become a preparatory school or a college nor a trade or technical school. Its purpose is to educate the average boy for the specific but broad purpose of making of him a better rounded man than usually results from so-called specific education."

Mr. Woodward provides that if after 75 years the schools have proven a failure, half of the funds shall be given to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the remainder become a loan fund for students in schools excepting those partly kept up by religious denominations. The First National Bank of Birmingham is made trustee of the fund.

CHICAGO TO GET COLD WEATHER AND SNOW TODAY

Chicago and vicinity will have a taste of real winter weather today and probably tomorrow, with light snow and lower temperatures, according to a forecast issued last night by C. A. Donnel, government weather man in Chicago.

Early this morning, Mr. Donnel said, the temperature will drop to about 15 degrees and probably will remain below the freezing point all day. The maximum yesterday was 38 degrees between 3 and 4 p. m. There were snow flurries during the day.

Mr. Donnel declined to make a prediction for Christmas weather in Chicago, saying that the date is too far ahead to make accurate forecasts.

Germ-Inoculated Rabbits Are Stolen from Hospital

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Physicians on the staff of St. Margaret's hospital issued a warning today that they hope will be seen by the burglars who ransacked the hospital laboratory and stole four live rabbits. The rabbits were germ inoculated, and to eat them would mean almost certain death, the doctors pointed out.

Spain's Rebels Rush for Jail to Worry King

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MADRID, Dec. 20.—The eagerness of a lot of people in this country to get into jail is one of the most surprising, and for the government one of the most embarrassing, features of the aftermath of the recent revolution.

Thousands of republicans, prominent in many walks of life, today signed documents accusing themselves of complicity in this week's abortive revolution in such a way as to invite not only prison but the firing squad.

Text of Documents.

These documents read as follows:

"To the military judge: We, the undersigned, in view of the charges brought against Alcala Zamora, Miguel Maura, Largo Caballero, Fernando de los Rios and others because of their revolutionary manifesto, declare formally that we morally and materially participated in the spirit and letter of the manifesto and attempted to obtain through military and civil uprisings the justice and political decency which it is only possible to obtain in Spain today under a republic."

This was carefully worded by legal authorities so there can be no quibbling about the guilt of the signers under the law.

Prisons Already Crowded.

With the prisons crowded with from 9,000 to 10,000 suspects, of whom there are 950 in the central prison in Madrid alone, it looks as though the people accusing themselves of an offense punishable by death may not even go to jail.

Among the distinguished names on the list is that of Ramon Valle-Inclan, novelist. Sanchez Roman, the professor who drew up the original republican manifesto, led off by announcing that fact to the military authorities. But he has not yet been arrested.

This is all part of a well organized campaign by the republican crowd to continue to embarrass the régime, which they believe cannot stand much more embarrassment, until such a time as they can manage another revolt.

"Time Is Greatest Asset."

"Time is the greatest national asset of Spain," one of the republicans said with a grin today.

Such is the bizarre situation which THE TRIBUNE correspondent finds on arriving at Madrid after an absence of several months, during which the position of the monarchy has become so dangerous. Reports from all parts of Spain tonight indicate complete calm—the lull after the storm, and which is very evident to everybody, the lull before the storm.

Despite the fact that thousands of republicans are in jail, the backbone of the movement has not been broken at all. The Socialist group, which got out from under when it saw the military preliminaries going awry, considers that its powder is still dry. It is coöperating actively with the republicans of all shades of opinion, except the communists, to keep Premier Berenguer and his king in a state of nerves until the next attempt.

Government in Dilemma.

Today's jamboree was cleverly directed at the most vulnerable spot, for the government's problem at the moment is its overcrowded jails. It is plain that wholesale executions would be a dangerous solution for overcrowding, and long term jail sentences for the republican ringleaders would be about as dangerous at such a moment.

The big naval transport, Admiral Lobo, arrived at Barcelona today pre-

THEN RECESSES; HOOVER SIGNS RELIEF BILLS

Congress Goes Home for Christmas.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Congress recessed for the holidays shortly before midnight tonight after completing action on President Hoover's $161,000,000 unemployment and drought relief program and disposing of other emergency matters.

The President signed both the 116 million dollar emergency construction bill and the $45,000,000 drought loan bill late this afternoon.

Besides acting on the emergency construction bill, the senate, in a continuous session of more than twelve hours, passed the house bill appropriating 150 million dollars for the farm board's revolving loan fund, thus bringing the day's relief appropriations to a total of 311 millions. The senate also confirmed the nominations of three of President Hoover's appointees to the federal power commission, rejected the conference report on the treasury and postoffice appropriation bill after a controversy over postal leases, and indulged in miscellaneous debates on political and economic problems.

House Merely Waits.

The house met intermittently during the afternoon and again convened late tonight with a handful of members present to adopt the resolution sent over from the senate for a recess until Jan. 5.

The farm board bill was the last item on the senate's program, receiving attention from 9 o'clock tonight until adjournment was taken.

From 4 o'clock this afternoon until 9 o'clock the senate had before it nominations for the federal power commission. For an hour and a half of the time the senators digressed into a political colloquy on the revelations before the Nye committee earlier in the day concerning the part played by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, in the futile effort to defeat Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.] in the recent election.

Hoover Again Under Fire.

Amendments not covered by the partial conference report on the emergency construction bill, approved several days ago, were before the senate from the time it convened at 11 o'clock this morning until about 1:30. Most of this time was taken up with attacks upon the administration unemployment relief policy. After the construction bill was out of the way the senate spent the next hour and a half until about 4 o'clock on the treasury and postoffice departments' appropriation bill.

The emergency construction bill was sent to the White House after the senate receded on three relatively minor amendments which the house had refused to accept. The drought relief loan bill, the conference report on which was approved by both houses yesterday, also reached the White House during the afternoon. Both were signed at the same time.

Building Bill Summarized.

The 116 million dollar emergency construction bill as signed by the President provides for advances totaling $80,000,000 to the states for highway construction, to be repaid from deductions from future federal aid contributions over a period of five years; $22,500,000 for river and harbor improvement; $3,000,000 for Mississippi flood control; $3,000,000 each for three different kinds of highways in national forests and on other federal reservations, and $1,560,000 for roads in national parks.

The President is given authority to transfer funds from one of these specified purposes to another. The money is intended to aid unemployment by its expenditure during the six months period from Jan. 1 to July 1, 1931. The highway loans to the states may be used up to Sept. 1.

The Drought Bill.

The $45,000,000 provided by the drought relief bill is for loans to be granted by the secretary of agriculture to farmers in the drought, storm and hail stricken areas for seed, feed, fertilizer and tractor fuel and "other purposes incident to crop production," and also for the purchase of these commodities for sale to farmers.

The three amendments to the emergency construction bill on which the senate receded included two relating to federal aid highway funds for the states of Alabama and Georgia, and the amendment of Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.] to require contra tors receiving money provided by this measure to employ only local labor and to pay the highest prevailing wage scales.

A motion by Senator Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.] to recede from the Alabama and Georgia amendments was adopted without a record vote and without discussion of the proposals, which the senate only a few days ago insisted upon in a roll call. A little later a motion by Senator Jones to recede from the Couzens amendment also was adopted without a record vote.

Senator Couzens gave up his effort to obtain approval of the amendment after expressing his opinion of the house.

"We might just as well abolish the senate when it comes to a disagreement between the senate and the house," said Senator Couzens. "This same situation always arises and we have to give in to the house in order to get legislation enacted.

"I am afraid that without this amendment the contractors may use this 116 millions to depress wages. But I know when I'm licked, and I am certainly licked in this case."

La Follette Has His Fling.

Before the senate receded on the three amendments Senators Robert M. La Follette [Rep., Wis.], and David I. Walsh [Dem., Mass.], made attacks upon the administration unemployment program. They read to the senate letters from mayors of various cities dealing with the unemployment situation. The letters were in reply to questionnaires sent out by both senators to cities of more than 5,000 population.

La Follette and Walsh both asserted that the responses showed conditions to be much worse than admitted by the administration, and that direct federal relief of destitution is warranted. They took issue with President Hoover's position that aid of this character should be handled by the Red Cross and by local communities.

Senator La Follette said that Mayor Thompson of Chicago had advised him that there are 250,000 unemployed in that city. The senator concluded that this meant over 20 per cent of the workers of the city were idle. In 12 cities in downstate Illinois Senator La Follette said that more than 12 per cent of the workers are unemployed. In Milwaukee, he said, the figure is 20 per cent, and in 14 other cities in Wisconsin, 11 per cent.

Program "Woefully Inadequate."

"The relief program sponsored by the administration and approved by the house is totally and woefully inadequate," said La Follette. "The government must make available to the Red Cross or some other agency a sufficient sum to provide relief. The so-called unemployment relief bill we are about to pass is but a drop in the bucket—a futile gesture. The government should not be less generous to these millions of innocent victims of the economic crash than it was to the corporations and income tax payers last year.

"A year ago we found the administration recommending the gift of 160 millions to the richest taxpayers and corporations. At that time storm warnings were written large. Various senators, including myself, attempted to resist that tax reduction on the ground that a depression was at hand and that a deficit in the treasury would be threatened.

"In the present critical hour the administration comes forward with a program which in its total does not equal the amount given to the rich taxpayers and corporations last year.

"All we have to base this program on is a few glittering generalities in a message from the President of the United States."

Walsh Takes the Hammer.

Senator Walsh also denounced the administration program as "entirely inadequate." In reading a letter showing unemployment conditions in Springfield, Mass., he drew fire from his colleague, Senator F. H. Gillett [Rep., Mass.], a resident of that city. Senator Gillett said that Springfield is able to take care of itself and that it would be unwise to establish a precedent of providing federal relief of destitution.

Sen. Johnson Renews War on U. S. Entry Into World Court

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Senator Hiram W. Johnson [Rep., Cal.], a leader of the group of senate "irreconcilables" who thwarted the attempt of Woodrow Wilson to involve the United States in the league of nations, tonight directed a fiery attack against the world court and those who are sponsoring the current move for American entrance into the tribunal.

In an address outlining his arguments, Johnson asserted American entrance into the tribunal would promote strained relations between this country and European powers, rather than world peace. He declared senate approval of the world court protocols of adherence would place this country in a humiliating position, make us meddlers in the affairs of other nations, and pave the way for American membership in the league of nations.

Extra Session Rumor Denied.

Calling attention to President Hoover's recent message submitting the court protocols to the senate for action, Senator Johnson asserted his opinion that "we should first remedy our own ills and relieve our own people" from economic depression, "before undertaking to become a part of an international machine whose aid to humanity thus far has been wholly illusionary."

The Johnson attack on the court came a few hours after the White House stated authoritatively that President Hoover would not call a special session of the senate to deal with the world court issue in the event the question of American adherence was not settled at the short session. As the senate foreign relations committee has postponed reporting out the court protocols until next December, the chances for a senate vote on the world court question for at least a year are considered remote.

Calls It Creature of League.

Senator Johnson scathingly denounced the world court as the creature of the league of nations, responding "to the dictation of old world diplomats." He asserted in his indictment of the tribunal that it was, in effect, no court at all, but simply a "diplomatic pawn of European politics." He attacked the court's power to hand down advisory opinions and asserted the present reservations do not safeguard the rights of this country. Once in this court, he said, it would be impossible for the United States to get out.

The California senator said the same group which backed the fight to put the United States in the league of nations were backing the present move to get the United States into the court.

After asserting that "it is an amazing intellectual stultification to assert that the so-called world court is not a part of the league of nations," Mr. Johnson swiftly summarized the fight on the court, when the matter was before the senate in 1926 and outlined the five reservations attached at that time as conditions of American adherence. He said the most important resolution was one providing that "the court should not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any requests for advisory opinions touching any disputed question in which the United States has, or claims, an interest.

Attacks Root-Hurst Substitute.

Senator Johnson attacked the Root-Hurst substitute for the fifth reservation, which permits the United States to withdraw from the court if the court insists upon rendering an advisory opinion against the wishes of this country.

"The argument that is now iterated and reiterated, that the United States, after joining, could withdraw if a controversy arose concerning advisory opinions, is the European diplomatic invitation of the spider to the fly," Senator Johnson said. "Once we're in this court, any endeavor to withdraw—and who would make it or how it would be made, no one knows—would be met with such storm of protest all over the world, and particularly from our own internationalist organizations, which are constantly seeking to take us into Europe, that withdrawal would be utterly impossible.

"If we attempted to withdraw, the same internationalists and the same internationalist press, that so loudly proclaim they express the sentiment of the country would, with the same propaganda now showered on us, prevent our withdrawal. But beyond this, for one who believes in America, proud of her long record of international fair dealing and good faith, determined to maintain a world position of candor and amity and justice, to forego what we know safeguards us, and accept instead a humiliating permission to run, is so repellent as to be unthinkable."

OCEAN AIRMEN OF ITALY TO FLY TO AFRICA TODAY

CARTAGENA, Spain, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The fourteen Italian seaplanes here on a squadron flight to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, will take off tomorrow morning for Kunitra, Morocco, their second halting place, Gen. Italo Balbo announced tonight.

Weather conditions were considered favorable and the Italian air minister, who is personally commanding the journey, said that he did not expect to meet with any difficulty.

The six planes which had been forced to seek shelter near Iviza in the Balearic islands rejoined the eight other planes at Cartagena today. They had an extremely difficult flight under bad weather conditions and in the face of a 66 mile head wind. Twelve planes will participate in the dash over the South Atlantic.

SENATE PASSES 150 MILLION BILL FOR FARM BOARD

Measure Is Under Fire of Radicals.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—President Hoover's federal farm board tonight safely rode out the first serious storm of opposition it has encountered in congress since its organization eighteen months ago.

After a bitter assault upon the board's wheat stabilization operations, made by a half dozen Democrats and insurgent Republicans, the senate passed the house bill making immediately available to the board another 150 million dollars of its 500 million dollar revolving fund. The bill will go to the White House for signature tomorrow.

So fierce was the attack on the bill, which the house had passed in nine minutes, that it appeared for a while that it might be defeated. At the showdown, however, the opposition collapsed and there were insufficient votes, following a quorum call, to secure a roll call.

Expected to Be Issue.

The debate showed, however, that the opponents to the Hoover administration plan to make the farm program an issue in the 1932 election.

The senate defeated several amendments, including one offered by Senator John J. Blaine [Rep., Wis.] for Senator Hugo Black [Dem., Ala.], providing that none of the funds should be used for futures buying.

With the 150 million dollars voted tonight, the board will have received a total of 400 million dollars out of its 500 million dollar revolving fund. It is anticipated that another 100 million will be included in the regular appropriation bill for the next fiscal year.

Jones Urges Passage.

Senator Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.], chairman of the appropriations committee, reported the bill and requested the urgent necessity of passing it. He quoted Chairman Alexander Legge as stating that, should the bill fail, it might be necessary for the board to throw its wheat and cotton on the market with "chaos" as a result.

Senator Jones was assailed with questions concerning the board's wheat stabilization operations. He yielded the floor to Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], who sought to explain that, even were the operations a failure in the end, they could not be blocked now.

A half dozen senators clamored for the floor to open the attack. Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] obtained it.

"It would be nothing short of a scandal to rush this bill through under these circumstances," he declared.

"The house passed it in nine minutes," Senator Jones interjected.

Mr. Borah waded into his argument which was to the effect that after nine months of experimenting the farm board has failed to solve the farm problem and that it does not know which way to turn.

"First," he asserted, "I want to know why the farm board last spring attempted to peg the price of wheat at $1.25 and bought 60,000,000 bushels and then why it stopped its heroic effort the day after Julius Barnes arrived in Washington. Then it started buying again this fall to peg the price at 70 cents. The farmer now is getting 43 cents a bushel, a figure at which he must ultimately be destroyed.

Cites Legge's Advice.

"The sum total of wisdom derived from the farm board's experience is that the farmer must save himself by reducing acreage. That is Mr. Legge's advice. Certainly we could get that advice for less than 500 million dollars.

"Mr. Legge and his compatriots are now engaged in piling up in sight of all the world more and more wheat. They are devising no way to get rid of it. There it is piling up. They are traveling in a vicious circle. Where is it going to end? They must get rid of it some time and then will be the day of reckoning. What does the future hold?"

"What do you think should be done with the 116 million bushels of wheat the board has?" Smoot persisted.

"I don't know," Borah replied. "I proposed the debenture but we got the farm board instead. When we ask Mr. Legge where we will be six months from now, he runs for shelter—says it's anybody's guess. "The only conclusion I can draw is that the day of disaster is merely being postponed and eventually the farmer must pay."

Buy More, Says Brookhart.

Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa began the assault on another tack. Instead of buying a little wheat, he said, the board should be given enough money to fix the price and buy all the wheat anybody has to sell. The same policy should be followed now as during the war, he urged.

"I would like to support the farm board," Brookhart added, "but I don't know whether they're aiding agriculture or trying to break agriculture."

Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem. Md.], echoed the Borah charges.

"Back in 1928," he said, "I remember that the Republicans told us: 'Put this great engineer, Hoover, in the White House and he will solve the farm problem. But has he? In my opinion we have wasted the first 250 million dollars we have put into this board. I do not intend to vote to it another cent. And I hope there is a roll call on this appropriation bill. It's going to make a good political document two years from now when the day of reckoning has come and the farmers have the veil torn from their faces.

"If we pass this bill, next year the board will be back for another 200 or 300 millions. They're going in deeper and deeper and going so deep that it's going to be the greatest scandal any of us has seen for a long, long time."

Senators T. H. Caraway [Dem. Ark.] and Burton K. Wheeler [Dem. Mont.], expressed doubts as to the success of the farm board program and said they feared that it was getting itself into a blind alley.

Senator Arthur Capper [Rep. Kas.], emphasized the achievements of the board in fostering marketing coöperatives.

HOW 10% DROP IN RETAIL FOOD PRICES IN YEAR

Further Decreases Seen for This Winter.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Declining retail prices of foodstuffs in Chicago in recent weeks have reached a point of saving the average household provider from 10 to 14 per cent as compared to prices of a year ago, according to figures announced yesterday.

Six months ago, the wholesale prices of most of the important foods, including meats, flour, sugar, coffee, butter and eggs, as quoted in local markets, foretold a drop in retail prices, which was said by economists to respond slowly to the "more sensitive wholesale trade influences."

Last week the federal government, through its department of labor, issued the statement that retail prices in November were 2 per cent less than in October and 11.5 per cent less than they were a year ago. Oranges, pork chops and a few other items were reported to have made even greater declines, while the price of fresh eggs and sugar had risen slightly.

Shows 27.3 Per Cent Drop.

With these figures as an indication of a trend that is benefiting Chicago's food buyers, further studies disclose that in December the wholesale prices of eleven basic foods, which in turn affect the values of many others, had declined 27.3 per cent from the same prices a year ago. This index of wholesale prices, prepared by E. L. Rhoades, editor New Era in Food Distribution, indicates that no increase in retail food prices is warranted in the next three to four months, and there is a likelihood that retail foods will be even cheaper during the rest of the winter than they have been so far this season.

The eleven basic commodities are butter, eggs, flour, sugar, coffee, potatoes, hams, beef, lard, canned peas and canned tomatoes, the average of them all on Dec. 15 being 12.31 cents a pound as compared with 16.95 cents a pound a year ago. These wholesale prices, it is explained, are quoted in "bulk commodity markets" and they take effect well in advance of retail prices, indicating still further declines in the cost of living.

Food Is Largest Item.

Food is the largest single item in the average Chicago family's living expenses, amounting to anywhere from 18.2 to 43 per cent of the family budget, according to a summary of available surveys conducted in this area in recent years. The average income of a Chicago family is about [illegible]. Of this amount, somewhat over $500 per family is spent annually for food. Considering the 840,000 families in the Chicago area, as disclosed by late census estimates Chicago's food bill is conservatively nearly a half billion dollars.

A canvas of typical buying areas in Chicago this week disclosed wide variation in food prices and in food quality in the same neighborhood. Some grocery prices reflected the lowered cost of foodstuffs in such items as sugar, coffee, lard, butter, flour, and the more staple items. Yet the managers declared that their total volume of business had declined, making it impossible for them to pass along other savings because their rent, labor, and other overhead costs have not dropped.

Other stores, notably those with lower overhead, doing a cash business or with chain buying power, were found to have a wider range of lowered retail prices. One large chain doing a national business reported an increase of about 5 per cent in volume or tonnage of foods handled, with a reduction of similar proportion in total cash sales, comparing an average week in November with such a week a year ago.

A survey of the published retail prices of special food items in December, 1928, with those in the last two weeks disclosed that eggs were 10 to 11 cents cheaper, butter was 8 to 13 cents less, leg of lamb dropped 11 to 13 cents and veal 5 to 12 cents, with bacon and ham unchanged.

Turkeys, even with yesterday's advance in price, were 8 to 10 cents and chickens about the same amount cheaper; cheese has declined 5 to 10 cents a pound and canned vegetables an average of 5 cents per No. 2 can. Bread and milk prices have remained unchanged in Chicago despite overproduction and low priced flour and low prices of milk at the farms. Apples are also bringing about the same prices as last year and two years ago, while some kinds of nuts even have advanced in price.

Other items, such as oranges, grapefruit, tangerines, potatoes, and breakfast cereals, were found to be all the way from 2 to 14 cents per unit cheaper, while coffee is retailing today at the lowest prices since before the war, the cost ranging from 23 to 50 cents a pound.

The retail prices quoted by the department of labor as indices of Chicago's food values show such declines as these between October, 1929, and October of this year: Coffee, 8.2 cents; sirloin steaks, 4 cents; round steaks, 14 cents; bread, half a cent; eggs (strictly fresh), 15 cents; lamb, 5.3 cents; and butter, 7.1 cents.

MONACO FEARS RIOTS ON PRINCE'S RETURN; MASSES ARMY OF 100

MONTE CARLO, Monaco, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The entire army of the principality of Monaco, nearly 100 strong, was mobilized tonight in order that disturbances may be prevented when Prince Louis arrives home in the morning, for the political pot again is boiling. In addition, special guards have been assigned to the railroad right-of-way from the French border and secret service men will accompany the monarch from Nice to the local station.

The present troubles grow out of the collapse of a real estate firm which was headed by the brother of Eugene Marquet, president of the national council and also known as mayor. The failure caused heavy losses to citizens of Monaco. The brother was placed in jail and Mayor Marquet faces court charges in connection with the same affair. Prince Louis has suspended both the national and municipal councils until the matter is cleared up.

And as elsewhere the world economic depression has something to do with it. The principality, which has a taxless population of about 700 persons, is maintained by revenues from the famous Monte Carlo gambling casino, which has suffered a decline in business. The Monagasques also are said to resent the long absences of Prince Louis, who lives much of the time in France, and police learned today a demonstration was scheduled for tomorrow.

SHEPARD JURY RETIRES AFTER 7 HOURS' WORK

Murder Case Study to Be Resumed Today.

Kansas City, Kas., Dec. 20.—(AP)—The jury in the case of Maj. Charles A. Shepard, accused of the poison murder of his wife, retired for the night at 10:03 p. m.

The jurors retired to deliberate at 2:58 p. m. after being charged by Judge Richard J. Hopkins.

The jurors were instructed that three verdicts could be returned—acquittal, conviction of first degree murder without recommendation, which means death, and conviction "without capital punishment."

"Put Away" His Wife.

District Attorney Sardius M. Brewster in making the prosecution's final plea declared that Shepard had "put away" his wife with bichloride of mercury because she stood in the way of his love for Miss Grace Brandon, blonde stenographer of San Antonio, who was a government witness in the trial. Brewster did not directly demand the death penalty.

Harry S. Class of Denver, chief of defense counsel, told the jury that Shepard had been "crucified" by the government in what he termed a trumped up case of circumstantial evidence. He asked the jurors not to "guess away a man's life."

The social life of the army formed the background for the trial.

Testimony recalled army affairs from Fort Omaha to Shanghai, from Texas to the Philippines as the 59-year-old medical corps officer fought the government's accusation that he poisoned his 34-year-old wife so he might be free to marry Miss Brandon.

The colonel's lady was there. So was Judy O'Grady, in the rows of witness chairs or in the hordes that battled for seats.

Officers and officers' wives, many of them intimate acquaintances of the Shepards, were among the 100 witnesses to testify concerning circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Shepard at Fort Riley, Kas., June 15, 1929.

To the government's accusation that Maj. Shepard poisoned his wife, the defense asserted it did not know the reason for her death.

YANKS SPEND 5 OF 7½ BILLION TRAVEL BILL FOR THIS YEAR

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—The world travel bill for 1930 was approximately $7,500,000,000, and two-thirds of this amount, or $5,000,000,000 was spent by Americans at home and abroad and visitors to our shores, according to a survey of the American Automobile association made public today.

Nearly $325,000,000 was spent in 1930 by Americans entering Canada in more than 5,000,000 automobiles.

More than 300,000 Americans went abroad.

Total expenditures by Americans for travel at home were decreased by shorter tours and a smaller per capita expenditure.

SUPREME COURT ASKED TO RULE ON DRY VALIDITY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Formal notice of an appeal from the decision of Judge William Clark of Newark, holding the 18th amendment invalid, was filed with the clerk of the United States Supreme court, late today, by United States District Attorney Philip Forman of New Jersey.

The high court was asked to grant a writ of certiorari, to review the case, and to reverse the decision of the lower court, on the ground that it erred in the ruling that the prohibition amendment is not a part of the constitution, because it was ratified by the state legislatures, rather than by constitutional conventions.

Filing of the appeal, which was accompanied by the record, came within four days after the announcement of Judge Clark's decision and made it further evident that the department of justice does not propose to lose a moment in hurrying the case through to a finish. The government attorneys will ask the Supreme court to set the date for arguments as early as practicable, thus advancing the case ahead of others which are pending.

The Supreme court now is in recess over the holidays and will reconvene on Jan. 5. As it can consider petitions for writs during a recess, it is possible that the date for arguments may be set immediately after the holiday period. This would allow the court to rule on the case before the present term of court ends in June.

It will be virtually mandatory upon the Supreme court to undertake a review of the case, it is said. Denial of the appeal petition would, in effect, sustain the Clark decision, with the result that constitutional prohibition would be at an end.

Although the prohibition enforcement officials are confident that the decision will be reversed by the high court, they are nevertheless worried over the agitation and confusion it has caused.

FIGHT OF LUCAS AGAINST NORRIS STIRS SENATORS

G. O. P. Aid Admits That He Opposed Nebraskan.

"But I did it aboveboard!" Senator Norris shouted across the intervening seats. "I didn't creep under an anonymous name. I don't mind somebody opposing me, but I want to do it in the light of day and not sneak around under cover, and put out anonymous literature under another name."

"He says he paid the bill in currency," Senator Norris went on, referring to Lucas' testimony that he had paid $4,237 in cash out of his own pocket for having the circulars issued.

Doubts Him, He Says.

"I wonder whether any one believes that! That's the way this man Lucas carries his money! I doubt whether a single man believes what he says.

"Why didn't he have the courage to come out under his own name? He had the order put on the books under another name. He knew that the committee had been looking for the man who ordered those circulars for months. He remained silent. Is that the position of an honorable, honest man? No. He never told until things got so close to him he had to. And how the other witnesses hummed and hawed.

"Horrible, damnable methods! To go before the people with such deception as that!"

Lucas Is Witness.

Lucas took the witness stand this morning. His inquisitors were Senator Nye, Senator Clarence C. Dill of Washington and Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York. Nye is a radical Republican. Dill and Wagner are Democrats, Wagner being politically close to Tammany and personally close to Al Smith. They made no secret of their satisfaction at having a high Republican party officer on the grill, and seized the opportunity to make a little political capital on their own account.

Mr. Lucas admitted freely that it was he who had ordered the printing of the anti-Norris handbills. One issue carried a cartoon of a bar room, called the scene the Smith-Raskob idea of happiness, and asserted they were supporting Norris. The circular which has caused the most stir, however, was a letter purporting to come from one J. M. O'Shea as head of a Tammany organization in New York showing that Tammany was working for Senator Norris' reëlection.

The reason Lucas gave for his efforts to beat Norris was that Norris was actually a Democrat.

Says Norris Is Democrat.

"Senator Norris is a Democrat," Lucas justified his action. "He opposed Coolidge in 1924 and Hoover in 1928, and made speeches in favor of Al Smith. If he isn't a Democrat, then there isn't one in the United States."

Pressed by the committee he was forced to admit that he had not inquired as to the letter's authenticity. He said he had no copy of it, and that a note from the person who had forwarded it to him had been lost. Senators Dill and Nye suggested that the letter was a fake, prepared in Lucas' office. This he denied, saying several copies of it had come through the mails. He denied having given the printing order under an assumed name or that he knew that the firm which did the printing also printed the Fellowship Forum, organ of the Ku Klux Klan. He admitted having kept the affair secret, but said he did so because he feared the Democrats, hearing of it, might redouble their efforts to assist Norris.

Twitted on Party Status.

The senators took occasion to twit him on his definition of party regularity. If Norris was a Democrat, why wasn't Hoover one, too, they asked, saying he supported Wilson and had been mentioned as Democratic candidate for the presidency.

William M. Murray, acting secretary to the Republican national committee during the campaign, also testified. He said the report he had made a trip to Nebraska last spring was not available.

"I didn't think it would be," said Senator Nye, then went on, "When you left here yesterday you went to a telephone booth, didn't you?"

Murray said he had tried to reach Lucas at Republican headquarters.

"Then where did you call?"

"I called the White House and tried to get Lucas, but he wasn't there," Murray replied.

Tells of Aid for Norris.

Albert F. Dawson, secretary of the Republican senatorial committee, asserted his committee had given Norris the usual aid. His testimony brought in the name of Victor Seymour, who was forced to resign as assistant to Senator Steiwer, vice chairman of the senatorial committee, following disclosures that a grocer named George W. Norris had been induced to run against Senator Norris in an effort to split Senator Norris' support. These were the witnesses who, Senator Norris claimed, had hemmed and hawed.

Norris did not answer Lucas' direct charge that he (Norris) was not a Republican. But Norris went on in his speech to talk about the so-called O'Shea letter some more. There was no such persons, he declared. The Tammany organization was fictitious. The man supposed to have forwarded the letter to Lucas was fictitious. The letter was intended, he said, to arouse religious and dry prejudice.

G. O. Smith Confirmed.

The matter under consideration which had furnished the starting point of it all—the senate confirmation of George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey, for membership on the federal power commission—was passed at last by a favorable vote of 38 to 22.

The confirmation of Frank R. McNinch of North Carolina for membership on the federal power commission brought up the issue of party regularity again. He was finally confirmed by a vote of 47 to 11, but not until after a two hour fight led by Senators Walsh [Dem., Mont.] and Hawes [Dem., Mo.], who charged that McNinch was being appointed as a Democratic member, but that he had supported Hoover in 1928 and was, therefore, an unacceptable member of the party. McNinch was defended by Senator Cameron Morrison in his maiden speech, following his appointment as successor to the late Senator Lee S. Overman of North Carolina.

Immediately afterward the senate, by a vote of 42 to 14, confirmed the appointment of Marcel Garsaud, Democrat of New Orleans, as the fifth and last member of the power commission named by President Hoover.

AL SMITH VISITOR AT ASTOR'S SICK BED AND PHONE GIRL'S, AS WELL

New York, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Vincent Astor and Florence Sheridan, a Bronx telephone operator, have been ill on the same floor of a New York hospital, but they'll be home for Christmas. Thus will end a series of visits to both patients by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Two weeks ago Smith called at the hospital to see Astor and wandered down a hall seeking an elevator, Miss Sheridan's nurse spied him and suggested he come in and speak to her patient.

"She's a good Democrat," the nurse explained.

So Smith visited the phone operator, much to her joy. When a few days later he called on Astor again, he talked with Miss Sheridan.

"I certainly am glad you are getting well," he said. "We can't afford to have any Democrats in hospitals."

NEGRO VOTE HITS PLANS OF SOUTH TO REAPPORTION

"Black in South if Alien in North" Is Argument.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Negro disfranchisement in the southern states is due for a further airing in congress this winter in connection with the controversy over congressional reapportionment.

Defenders of the apportionment scheme, which will be made effective automatically in the absence of further legislation, are prepared to show that some of the states which object to the scheme would be much harder hit if voting strength rather than population were used as the basis for cutting up congressional districts.

Those who are advocating new legislation are centering their efforts toward a statutory provision, which many regard as of doubtful constitutionality, for the elimination of aliens from the population totals before determining the number of representatives in congress to which each state is entitled.

How Alien Ban Would Act.

The effect of the elimination of aliens would be to reduce representation in such states as Michigan, which gains four seats under the automatic apportionment; California, which gains nine seats; Texas, which gains three seats, and New York, which gains one seat. It would mean increases or at least prevent threatened losses in many of the agricultural and dry states in the south and west.

To combat the anti-alien amendment there will be offered an amendment for reduction of southern representation as a penalty for disfranchisement of Negroes. Such an amendment, corresponding to the penalty provided in the constitution, was adopted by the house last year after an anti-alien amendment was approved. It became necessary for the leaders to get rid of both of them in order to secure legislation.

If voting strength were the basis Senator A. H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] has prepared figures showing that assuming the retention of the present house membership of 435, South Carolina would have its representation cut from 7 to 1, Georgia from 12 to 3, Alabama from 8 to 2, Mississippi from 8 to 2, North Carolina from 10 to 7, Virginia from 10 to 4, Florida from 4 to 3, Louisiana from 8 to 3, Arkansas from 7 to 2, Texas from 18 to 8, Tennessee from 10 to 4.

Alien Votes Tabulated.

Illinois, on the other hand, would increase its representation from 27 to 37, Michigan from 13 to 16, Indiana from 13 to 17, Wisconsin from 11 to 12, Ohio from 22 to 29, and New York from 43 to 53.

One of Senator Vandenberg's tabulations shows the five states with the greatest percentage of aliens and the five states with the fewest aliens, together with the percentages of the population which votes in elections.

New York with a 9 per cent alien population shows a voting strength of 35 per cent of its population. Pennsylvania with a 6 per cent alien population shows a voting strength of 32 per cent of its population. Massachusetts with a 12 per cent alien population shows a voting strength of 37 per cent of its population. Illinois with a 4 per cent alien population shows a voting strength of 41 per cent of its population. New Jersey with an 8 per cent alien population shows a voting strength of 40 per cent of its population.

FORMER NEW YORK ATTORNEY GENERAL SUES FOR $250,000

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Suit for $250,000 for alleged libel has been instituted here by Merton E. Lewis of Rochester, former attorney general of New York and former special assistant attorney general of the United States, against the Chemical Foundation, Inc., and Francis P. Garvan of New York. Mr. Garvan was formerly alien property custodian and president of the Chemical Foundation.

Argument on a motion by the defendants to have the complaint made more definite as between charges of libel and slander was made in Supreme court here today before Justice Marsh N. Taylor. The argument will be continued Dec. 27.

The complaint alleges libel in consequence of a statement charged to Mr. Garvan, in which it was asserted that Mr. Lewis, who served for four years as special counsel of the United States government in a suit to recover $5,000,000 for alleged conspiracy and fraud in the sale of the Bosch Magneto company, received his salary of $10,000 from German funds.

The statement is said to have been made by Mr. Garvan in this suit and later was printed and widely circulated. It is charged Mr. Garvan sent copies to thousands of persons. The statements were contained in envelopes of the Chemical Foundation, Inc., that being the basis for inclusion of the Foundation as a defendant in the alleged libel.

Sheriff Meyering Names Thomas Wren as Deputy

Thomas Wren, former labor editor of THE TRIBUNE, will be sworn in as a deputy sheriff tomorrow, Sheriff William D. Meyering announced yesterday. Wren will assist in establishing a highway police force of greater efficiency. Wren helped Meyering in his recent campaign. He is an ex-service man and lives at 2913 East 78th street. He is a lieutenant in the naval reserve.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY MADISON GAVE UP SOLD TO U. S.

President Wrote 15 Pages, Then Quit.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—(AP)—The unpublished beginning of an autobiography of James Madison, which the author did not finish because he found it too tremendous a task, has passed into the possession of the library of congress.

The fifteen page work of the fourth president, painstakingly penned by his secretary and annotated by the hand of his wife, Dolly, came to the library through an auction. Its experts regard the manuscript as a valuable historical find.

Through its recitations of biographical facts, many of them "see also—" references to volumes current in his time, come revealing glimpses of the man, Madison, beloved friend of Jefferson.

Blames Rum for Only Defeat.

He laid bitter blame on his own "unsuccessful experiment of the minimum of sleep and maximum of effort" to complete two years of college in one for the ill health which prevented his participating as a soldier in the revolutionary war.

Popular love of "spirituous liquors" he held responsible for the only political defeat he noted in his long public career—for the Virginia legislature in 1771.

Before the revolution, Madison said, it had been "the usage for the candidates to recommend themselves to the voters, not only by personal solicitation but by the corrupting influence of spirituous liquors and other treats having a like tendency."

Pays Tribute to His Wife.

Madison said he regarded this practice as "inconsistent with the purity of Republican principles" and therefore "trusted to the new views which he hoped would prevail with the people whilst his competitors adhered to the old practice. The consequence was the election went against him."

Meticulous was Madison's conduct in the house of representatives. He wrote of declining to "receive at the public expense articles of stationery provided for the members," a matter in which he believed he was "the sole exception."

He paid tribute to Dolly as having "added every happiness to his life which female merit could impart."

Jefferson Document Found.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Thomas Jefferson's original written account of a meeting of the board of directors of the literary fund of the University of Virginia in 1824 came to light here today.

The account was inscribed in Jefferson's own fine script, signed by himself as "rector." It is contained in an age yellowed book belonging to John F. Burdine, Atlanta business-man.

The book contains, in addition to the University of Virginia board report, a day by day account of an early meeting of congress, and a cypher letter apparently about Gen. Washington in 1782.

Movie Actress' Engagement Revealed

JEANETTE MacDONALD.

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 20.—(AP)—A large diamond ring on a finger of Jeanette MacDonald, movie actress and former star of the speaking stage in New York, led to the disclosure today of her engagement to Robert Ritchie, representative of artists of the film colony.

Rumor had been rife in Hollywood for a year that they were engaged and when Miss MacDonald recently made a vacation trip to New York the report was circulated that the actress had married Ritchie.

Miss MacDonald admitted the engagement and said the wedding would take place in the near future.

TREASURY BILL BLOCKED BY ROW ON POSTAL RENTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Senator John J. Blaine [Rep., Wis.] succeeded this afternoon in blocking final passage of the treasury and postoffice department's appropriation bill on the ground that it failed to place restrictions upon the postmaster general in the awarding of postoffice leases.

By a vote of 43 to 24 the senate rejected the conference report on the bill after Senator Blaine, in a torrid speech, attacked Postmaster General Walter F. Brown with charges ranging from neglect and carelessness to political favoritism.

Senator Blaine is chairman of a special senate committee which has been conducting an inquiry into postoffice leases in several cities, including Chicago, during the summer. He based his attack upon the disclosures made before this committee.

Resents Killing of Amendment.

In the appropriation bill as passed by the senate was an amendment inserted at the insistence of Senator Blaine providing for restrictions on the postoffice department in making leases for postoffice garages. This amendment was stricken out when Senator George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.] brought in the conference report to the senate, and Senator Blaine, after his verbal assault, demanded the roll call which sent the bill back to conference.

The Blaine amendment provided that all postoffice garage leases in the future contain clauses reserving the right of the government to cancel them whenever government owned facilities were favorable.

For the better part of an hour, Blaine held the floor, citing lease statistics turned up by the investigation of his committee and hurling at the postoffice department charges of "extortion," "conspiracy to defraud," and "political favoritism."

Assails Postmaster General.

"So far as the postmaster general is concerned," he declared, "the treasury of the United States has been an open bag into which the favorites have dipped and extracted unconscionable exorbitant annual rentals amounting to from 12 to 60 per cent of the value of the property.

"The abuses have been gross. They have not been here and there in scattered instances, but so general that they could have prevailed only where there were two parties entering into a conspiracy to defraud. The 400 or 500 leases involved mount up to an aggregate of 150 millions of dollars and in more than half of them there have been unjust exactions from the government. I dare say that the total amount of rentals paid in the eight years since this lease policy has been in effect would have purchased every foot of land and constructed every building leased by the government during this period."

In support of his charges Senator Blaine cited rentals and property values of seven garages showing rents ranging from 12 to 60 per cent of the property values.

"Here is one at Indianapolis," he said, referring to his notes, "where a garage is valued at $37,000. The annual rental is $20,100. From Indianapolis came very powerful political influences. This may explain why some friends of the postmaster general were given a garage lease under such handsome terms."

Senator Blaine dwelt upon the statements of President Hoover and Postmaster General Brown approving the acquirement by the government of its own post office facilities in all cases where the annual rental for a building is more than $6,500. In view of this attitude on the part of the administration, he said, he could not understand why committees of congress should allow his amendment to be stricken out.

"But," he went on, "here we find the senate conferees totally disregarding the interests of the tax payers and exercising the usual supine attitude of submitting to the house."

COURT RELIEVES ROY TOOMBS OF 2D PRISON TERM

Jefferson City, Mo., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Roy C. Toombs, Chicago banker, who is serving a three year sentence in the state prison here after being convicted of causing the failure of the International Life Insurance company several years ago, was freed from an additional three year prison sentence by action of the Missouri Supreme court, division 2, today.

The additional sentence came on another count.

The court upheld Toombs' attorney's plea of double jeopardy, ruling Toombs had committed but one offense and that he had been punished and was now serving his sentence.

NITTI GETS 18 MONTHS IN U. S. TAX FRAUD CASE

Capone Henchman Pleads Guilty; Also Fined.

Frank Nitto, alias Nitti, partner in Al Capone's booze and gambling enterprises and listed as a public enemy, pleaded guilty yesterday to charges of evading $158,823 in federal income taxes. He was sentenced to 18 months in Leavenworth penitentiary and fined $10,000 by Judge Charles E. Woodward.

The plea of guilty on Nitti's part represented the fifth successful conclusion of an income tax case in United States Attorney Johnson's campaign against gangsters and crooked politicians. Ralph Capone and Jack Guzik, two other members of "the Cicero syndicate," as the Capone organization was styled in court yesterday, also Legislator Lawrence O'Brien and County Assessor Gene G. Oliver, have been tried and found guilty of tax evasion.

Pleads Guilty; "Wants it Over."

Nitti pleaded guilty, he said, "to get it over with." His friends, Ralph Capone and Jack Guzik, are planning appeals, but Nitti said he didn't wish to go through months of worry and uncertainty.

The defendant was frank about his evasion of taxes and about the illicit sources of his income.

"But I have never committed a crime of moral turpitude," he said. "I have never done anything condemned by society as morally wrong. I didn't pay income taxes because the laws were not clear. I talked with half a dozen attorneys and they didn't know any more than I did. In '26 the Circuit Court of Appeals held that income from illicit sources could not be taxed. The next year the Supreme court ruled differently.

"I don't feel that I have committed a crime, but if society demands a penalty from me, I am glad to pay it."

Nitti, whose conversation is that of an educated man and whose appearance is that of an opera singer, wore a brown suit of expensive material, a green tie, gray hat and spats, and his shoes shone. He is a naturalized citizen, 45 years old, and has been in this country since he was 3 years old.

Calls Sentence Light.

Assistant United States Attorney Victor La Rue recommended the sentence for Nitti. He expressed the opinion that it was light for the offense alleged, but that it would satisfy the ends of justice. And it would expedite the disposition of similar cases pending in the courts, he said.

John C. Barnes, another assistant prosecutor, set forth Nitti's income for the years 1925, 1926, and 1927 as totaling $743,887, and the tax due, $158,823, plus interest and penalties.

"Most of Nitti's income was from the sale of alcohol," said Mr. Barnes. "There were also large receipts from gambling.

Judge Woodward sentenced Nitti to eighteen months on each of three felony indictments, charging willful tax evasion, the sentences to run concurrently, and fined him $5,000 each on two misdemeanor indictments, charging failure to file returns. A stay of execution until Jan. 10 was granted.

District Attorney Johnson gave credit to the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department for obtaining the evidence against Nitti.

Acting Commissioner of Police Alcock yesterday announced the awarding of extra compensation of $300 each to Sergts. Roger Powers and John T. Warren, who arrested Bernard O'Donnell, west side hoodlum, several days ago as he left a criminal courtroom where he had been on trial for perjury. A warrant charging vagrancy had been issued for O'Donnell.

SEIZES 2 KILLERS IN CAFE HOLDUP; WINS HERO PRIZE

Policeman Tyrrell Gets $100 Tribune Award.

Policeman Edward W. Tyrrell of the detective bureau chased two armed killers into a pitch black basement during a restaurant holdup on Nov. 29, disregarded their threats to shoot him if he followed, and brought them out, disarmed. For this act of bravery he is awarded THE TRIBUNE police hero prize of $100 for November.

The robbers both had records. They were holding up twenty-five patrons in the restaurant at 818 West Randolph street when Tyrrell and a squad stormed the place. Dan Clemente of 909 Sholto street and Philip Epstein, 1911 South Spaulding avenue, the bandits, fired upon him as he charged them, shouting that he was a policeman.

Restaurant Patron Killed.

They fired first and in the line of fire they killed Leonard S. Sanor, an egg candler who was drinking a cup of coffee. Tyrrell plunged after them nevertheless, his shotgun roaring, and they ran down the basement stairs, still armed, and protected by the dark of their hiding place. Tyrrell dashed headlong to the stair well.

"Come out of there, you," he shouted down. "I'll blow your heads off if you don't."

"Stick your head down here and you'll get it blowed off yourself!" a voice screamed from the pit of blackness.

"I will, will I?" shouted Tyrrell, and he stumbled down toward the voice. "Throw those guns away and come over here," he ordered. Presently two forms slunk to his side and he herded them back into the restaurant. Both are now in the county jail awaiting trial for Sanor's murder.

Police Waiting for Robbers.

The police had been informed by the Secret Six, crime fighting organization of the Chicago Association of Commerce, that the robbery of the restaurant was to be attempted. Patrolman Daniel Healy and Sergts. Joseph Haksa and P. McShane, with other forces, had been stationed across the street for several hours before the holdup, watching for the robbers. The policemen leaped out of hiding as the gang of five bandits halted before the door of the restaurant.

Four robbers entered the place and a fifth stayed in their car to facilitate a quick getaway. Healy shot at this man as he tried to drive away, and stains in the car, which was wrecked and abandoned, indicated he had scored a hit. The driver escaped, but his four companions were captured.

Tyrrell's award is the twenty-eighth recognition he has received for good work since he joined the police department nine years ago. He has been given creditable mention twenty-two times and on five occasions was awarded extra compensation—a $300 increase in salary operative during the remainder of the year in which it was awarded.

Some Other Acts of Heroism.

One of the acts which gained him previous recognition occurred four years ago when, with the present chief of detectives, John Norton, then Lieut. Norton, he shot two car barn bandits.

In August, 1923, while off duty, he heard a citizen complaining of having his pocket picked. He accompanied the man to Cicero and arrested Benny Lehmann, alias "Big Yonke, the Pickpocket." As he was taking his prisoner away three men stopped to argue with him and Lehmann slipped from his grasp. Tyrrell shouted at him to halt, but the man continued and the policeman shot him. Lehmann died on the way to the county hospital.

Again, two years ago, Tyrrell was sent after Frank Meccia, one of the Evergreen Park mail robbers, now serving a long sentence in Leavenworth prison. Tyrrell traced him to a room on Eddy street and collared him before any shooting took place.

Tyrrell is 31 years old, is unmarried, and lives with his sister, Miss Rose Tyrrell, at 2126 Millard avenue.

WARNS ALDERMEN TO USE AUTO TAX ON STREET WORK

Trade Board Objects to Diversion of Funds.

A warning that fees collected from the sale of automobile license tags may legally be used only for the repair and upkeep of streets and not for other purposes was delivered to the finance committee of the city council yesterday. The protest against diversion of the funds to other city departments came from the Chicago Association of Commerce.

In a communication to Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the committee, Beverly B. Vedder, chairman of the association's street traffic committee, repeated the protest that was made in October, 1928. Then it was shown that contrary to law only 63.7 per cent of the vehicle tax collections were being used for street maintenance, the balance going to other city departments and to administrative charges.

Calls for Police Action.

While objecting to diversion of the fund to other purposes "that offer little benefit to the taxpaying vehicle owner," Mr. Vedder also requested that the police department again be urged to take action against vehicle tax dodgers.

"While there has been a small improvement in the allocations of funds for street repair work since the protest of two years ago," wrote Mr. Vedder, "recent disclosures show that of the $5,250,000 paid by Chicago vehicle owners this year only approximately 66 per cent has been assigned for pavement repair purposes.

"It is the contention of the association that the entire tax should be used for street work with the exception of very limited charges for the cost of tax collection and administration expense."

Although City Controller Schmidt estimates that $5,777,509 will be available for appropriation from the fund for 1931, the bureau of streets has made a request for $6,594,725. Of this amount $4,500,000, or 68 per cent, is allotted by the bureau to street repair work. The other 32 per cent is divided between other city departments and administration charges.

In 1930 the expenditures of the street bureau were $5,565,000. Of this amount $1,258,345 was used by other departments or on administration activities in the street bureau, leaving $4,306,655, or 77 per cent of the total, for street repairs.

INDIANA BANK BANDIT SHOT IN RUNNING FIGHT

Banker Is Wounded by Robbers' Fire.

Etna Green, Ind., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Four desperadoes who created a wave of terror in Kosciusko county by breaking into one bank, robbing another and kidnaping an elderly mailman, ended their crime jaunt here today in a revolver and shotgun battle with vigilantes. The toll of the fight was:

ROBERT KNEPPER, vigilante, shot in the left knee.

RALPH MASON, vigilante, slightly wounded.

Garland Ives, 26 years old, and his brother, Russell, 28, of South Bend, Ind., and another man known only as John, said to be from Chicago, all robbers, were captured.

Attack Safe in Bank.

Shortly before dawn this morning two men, members of the gang, broke into the Etna bank and tried to open the safe with acetylene torches. They failed. As they were leaving they were sighted by Calvin Pressnal, 79, a mail carrier who operates between here and Warsaw, eight miles east. Pressnal was roughly bundled into the crime car, and driven 15 miles away, near Rochester, and trussed to a post.

The next attack of the crime crew was at Burket, Ind., 10 miles south of Warsaw. Four men walked into the Bank of Seward, leveled revolvers and shotguns at Mrs. Gaylord Doran, assistant cashier, and Mrs. Nancy Jones, 80, a patron, and escaped with $295.

By this time authorities of Kosciusko county were prepared, and vigilante groups sprang up in several communities. One group, organized at Etna Green, was comprised of Knepper, cashier of the Etna bank; Mason, his assistant, and Paul Hamlin, a merchant.

Bandits' Car Hits Tree.

At Etna Green the gunmen passed the machine of the vigilante trio and proceeded onward with added speed. The posse followed. The chase ended abruptly when the outlaw automobile, unable to negotiate a sharp turn, glanced against a tree and rolled into a ditch. The four gunmen leaped out and commenced firing at their pursuers.

Noted Orchestra Leader from Rome Comes to U. S.

New York, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Dr. Bernadino Molinari, director of the royal orchestra of Rome, arrived on the liner Conte Grande today on his fourth visit to the United States to conduct orchestras.

BANDITS ROB GOTHAM BANK OF $31,663, BUT MISS $5,000 MORE

New York, Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Seven shabbily dressed men drove up in front of the uptown branch of the Seward National Bank and Trust company, on the upper west side, in an automobile just after it opened for business this morning. One of them remained seated at the wheel. The other six entered the bank, where, with drawn automatics, they disarmed a special policeman, forcing him and ten other persons to face a wall in the rear of the tellers' cages with their hands held above their heads.

Within four minutes they had rifled the cash drawers in the cages, escaping with $31,663 in currency.

POLICEMAN KILLS FLEEING OUTLAW; SEVENTH IN WEEK

Shot as Two Pals Battle Pursuing Detectives.

Patsy Steffanelli, 23 years old, known as a leader of the "42" gang, died last night in the Bridewell hospital of bullet wounds received early yesterday during the eighth pistol battle of the week between gunmen and the police. He was the seventh lawbreaker slain since Monday in encounters with policemen and citizens.

Steffanelli was shot by Policeman James Doherty of the Maxwell station as he was attempting to escape from detectives after an automobile chase on the west side. Two men with Steffanelli escaped after the pistol fight.

Police Chase Gangsters.

Detectives Denis Mahoney, James Kojnar and Frank Vitek of the Lawndale station were waiting for a stoplight at Kedzie and Ogden avenues when Steffanelli's car roared past the signal and speeded northeast in Ogden avenue. The police took up the chase until the fugitive car stopped suddenly at Polk and Loomis streets. Steffanelli jumped out and disappeared in an areaway while his companions fired shot after shot at the police car.

Policeman Doherty, in uniform, was guarding the home at 746 South Loomis street of a witness in a murder case who had received threats. He saw the running Steffanelli and ordered him to stop, then fired. Steffanelli dropped with a bullet in his back.

Hunt Architect's Slayers.

An investigation was begun to determine whether Steffanelli or either of his two companions, who escaped, may have been involved in the slaying a few hours previously of Robert [illegible] Wallace, an architect, when he inadvertently drove his car into the gunfire of three bandits in a fight with a police squad.

Wallace was killed at Western and Ardmore avenues. A bullet, fired by one of the gunmen, pierced the windshield of his car and struck him in the forehead. He died instantly. The bandits escaped.

Wallace left a widow and two children, Robert, 13 years old, and Rosemary, 4 years old. The family home is at 2404 Ashland avenue, Evanston.

Holds Up Policeman; Shot.

John Carman, 17 years old, 2748 South Keeler avenue, was shot twice and probably mortally wounded last night when he and a companion attempted to hold up Policeman Frank Slak, private secretary to Capt. Patrick Collins of the Fillmore street station. The second robber escaped.

Policeman Slak, off duty and in civilian clothes, was sitting in his automobile at 26th street and Keeler avenue when Carman and his companion stepped up and commanded "Hands up!" Slak drew a revolver and fired four times. The two youths separated and fled.

Slak followed Carman. Meanwhile Policeman Harry Miller of the Lawndale station joined in the chase and seized Carman as he collapsed from his wounds in a grocery at 25th street and Kildare avenue. Two of the bullets fired by Slak had pierced his back. Carman was taken to the Bridewell hospital. He refused to name his accomplice.

No. Shore Voters Approve Bonds for Sanitary District

Voters of eight towns comprised in the north shore sanitary district at a special election yesterday approved the $1,200,000 bond issue to build sewage treatment plants and thus prevent further pollution of the lake water. The proposition carried by almost a three to one vote, there being 2,923 ballots for and 1,018 against. The towns are Highland Park, Highwood, Lake Forest, Lake Bluff, North Chicago, Waukegan, Zion, and Winthrop Harbor. Their frontage represents 25 miles of shore line. The issue provides for three new plants and three additions.

CHARGE WOMAN WITH ASSAULT IN STOLEN AUTO

Mrs. Margaret Albano, 30 years old, 1110 West 64th street, was charged with assault with an automobile yesterday as the result of an accident on Friday night in which a stolen car which she was driving struck and critically injured a pedestrian. The automobile was stolen last May from Paul Hartwick, 1743 North Karlov avenue.

Mrs. Albano surrendered to Englewood police after she had abandoned the car. In it the police found Patrick Bradley, 63 years old, 8041 South Ada street. He was taken to St. Bernard's hospital. Bradley was run down at 59th street and Racine avenue. The police were also looking for William McDaniels, 1411 Hyde Park boulevard, who Mrs. Albano named as her companion.

One death in Cook county yesterday increased the motor toll for 1930 to 1,080. The victim:

Mrs. Nellie C. Birge, 72 years old, 856 East 85th street. Died in the Southwest General hospital of injuries received on Friday when struck by the auto of Theodore Waibel, 6138 Evans avenue, while crossing 61st street at Cottage Grove avenue.

SURVIVOR TELLS HOW SEA, FIRE, COLD KILLED 37

Rescued Victims of Ship Crash Reach Port.

BY JOHN AHL-NEILSON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Dec. 20.—At a late hour tonight, with the Cattegat still shrouded in a heavy fog, hope was virtually abandoned for the 37 persons still missing as a result of the sinking of the steamer Oberon 24 hours earlier after being rammed amidship by the Arcturus off Laso island. Accounts from survivors revealed the victims died by drowning, fire and exposure. Some were trapped in their cabins, some sucked down by the wreck, others burned by flaming oil, and yet others died from cold.

At 9:30 this evening the damaged Arcturus crept into harbor here with her flag at half staff. On board were several survivors of the disaster, and in one of her lifeboats, covered with the Finnish flag, the bodies of five victims.

Brother Captains Silent.

The skippers of the two vessels are brothers, but neither Capt. Erik Hjelt, who was picked up as he swam away from the wreck, nor Capt. Ossi Hjelt would discuss the tragedy. When the Arcturus docked it was seen that she had a huge hole just aft her stem but above the waterline.

One of the women survivors, however, Miss Vera Hartman of Helsingfors, was willing to be interviewed.

"At about 10:20 o'clock last night," she said, "the other passengers having gone to bed, I decided to take a stroll on deck before turning in myself. I was one of the eleven passengers occupying third class staterooms. Ten are now dead.

"I had just reached the door to the stateroom to go for my stroll when I met another woman passenger who had just entered. Suddenly there was a terrific shock. I immediately ran on deck, but the other woman called me back. Heeding her call, I went to her, but when I made an attempt to grasp her she fell and the stateroom door slammed on her hand owing to the violent list of the ship.

Sees Boats Capsize.

"Then suddenly I saw the form of a mighty white vessel looming in the fog. I saw men running and women calling for help. So I jumped overboard and swam away from the ship. While swimming I saw two lifeboats capsize as they hit the water.

"I was finally rescued by the Arcturus with 35 others, but only three of us are women, the second mate's wife, Miss Phyllis Tipping, who is a British secretary at the American consulate at Stockholm, and myself."

"The Arcturus stood by all night searching for survivors," continued Miss Hartman, "but found only the bodies of two Finnish sailors. Two of the dead we have on board succumbed due to exposure in the icy sea. Later a Danish ship, Garm, arrived and found the body of Capt. Erik Hjelt's 4 year old daughter. She was placed in the lifeboat with the other dead. Capt. Hjelt's wife is among the missing."

Die in Blazing Oil.

The earliest eye witness account of the wreck was provided by four Finnish sailors who were the first survivors to be brought back here by the steamer Hengist. They had jumped into the sea as the Oberon sank and were swimming away from the suction it was causing when they managed to find an empty lifeboat and rowed away.

"When the water reached the ship's boiler room," said one of the men, "the boilers exploded and ignited oil that had escaped from the ship. Those who were trapped below must have died in the blazing water."

JUDGE REFUSES TO HALT DEATH FOR 2 SLAYERS

Judge Philip Finnegan in the Criminal court yesterday refused to change the death sentence which he imposed one week ago on Charles Rocco, 23 years old, and Joseph Popescue, 20 years old, who pleaded guilty to the murder of Courtney Merrill, 7321 Oglesby avenue, vice president of the Union State bank of Chicago. Public Defenders Wilbert Crowley and Benjamin Bachrach made a plea asking the judge to vacate his sentence and allow life imprisonment in view of the fact that the youths' pleas had saved the state the expense of a trial.

"It is not easy for a court to pass on the lives of his fellow men and sentence them to die," said Judge Finnegan. "But in this case I believe the evidence warrants the punishment. It would establish a peculiar precedent if these youths were allowed a new trial after they had a trial on a plea of guilty and were sentenced."

U. S. Attorney Tells of War on Crime.

an understanding of the problems organized crime creates."

Then came, with cold detachment and in the methodical manner of the chess player to whom Mr. Johnson had likened himself, the account of aspects of the cross section.

"When we proved," he said, "that Ralph Capone took $1,871,000 in three years from beer and gambling we showed under a blazing light the new factor in the problem of crime.

"That factor is crime with riches.

"We proved, too, that Jack Guzik took $1,049,000 from gambling in three years. Of course that's power. The measuring in dollars of that power gives the citizen at a glance the difference between normal crime and abnormal or organized crime. Of course there always will be crime, but it will be normal crime instead of abnormal crime.

"Normal crime sneaks down the alley.

"Organized crime drives down the boulevard in a costly car.

Tentacles of Organized Crime.

"Organized crime has appalling ramifications. The more vicious gangs are getting into the distribution of counterfeit money and narcotics. The hijacker is being paid off in counterfeit money. He can't complain. Obviously he does not dare to. But the bills are surreptitiously passed and are making a great deal of trouble for the government.

"The most disheartening thing has been the injection into our problem of the allegedly respectable citizen who comes to the front for gangs.

"For handling them there is just one rule in this office and my assistants have been trained in it. When the hints that 'perhaps this matter can be arranged' are made my assistants rise, open the door, and say, 'Get out!'

"We know that gangs make contributions to factions of political parties. The factions must pay for these gifts.

"They pay in 'privilege' and privilege—if you want the definition in a dozen words—is immunity to violate the law sold to organized criminals by public officials.

Linked Up to Politics.

"There is no place so high and no place so low that the money power of organized crime does not try to reach. From this source large sums of money which, in our great cities, run not into the hundreds of thousands but into the millions, are finding their way into politics. In many instances they are the decisive factor in crooked elections. Thus the political racketeer has made his appearance upon the American scene in a very definite manner. He delivers the votes of racketeer organizations and of organized crime in general to candidates who have made direct or indirect commitments that if elected they will be 'friendly' in office. A considerable part of the cash contributions of organized crime to political factions goes for the payment of thugs and sluggers to intimidate election officials, thus preventing an honest count of the ballot.

Big Bribes Offered.

"Organized crime—or crime with riches as distinguished from the normal crime that we shall always have with us—presents two other phases with which law enforcing agencies have to deal. First, it has huge sums of money for the corruption of officers of the law. Second, it has huge sums with which to defend itself in court and to terrorize witnesses. The effect of this is to undermine the very foundation stones upon which organized society and government rest.

"At his first point of contact with law enforcement the violator with money now attempts to corrupt the police, and when I use that term I mean all officers who do police duty.

"Bribes offered to prohibition agents have run from $10,000 to $50,000. I am speaking of specific instances. Bribes of $5,000 mean nothing to crime with riches.

"Petty bribes running from $500 to $1,000 are very frequent. When you remember that many deputies are paid only $1,500 a year you will see how cruel a temptation to the weak officer a bribe of only $500 is.

Hires High Priced Lawyers.

"Organized crime pays high for its lawyers. It buys skillful defense. I make no complaint of that, for the prosecutor's office must be organized to cope with counsel. But when its money is used to reach jurors, to reach witnesses, to reach evidence, and when it is paid out for murder to close the lips of some witnesses for the government then it becomes a real menace. In a number of cases where defendants have asked for leniency, I have suggested that they tell all the facts to the court and give aid to the government. Invariably they have refused to involve others, declaring that it would mean death to do so."

At first Mr. Johnson, who is the antithesis of the easy going, hail fellow type of public official—is, in fact, an earnest churchman—was dumfounded by the effrontery of malefactors of gangdom against whom he was preparing his flank attack.

Capone Russ Cigar Offer.

"When," he said, "Ralph Capone was brought in for questioning he expected to be treated with on terms of equality. He wanted to meet and talk as a gentleman with a gentleman. He asked whether he might smoke. He was told he could. He laid a handful of cigars on the table. Nobody accepted any. At the close of the examination he asked whether he might stay for the night in the custody of a marshal at a hotel. He was told that he must go to jail. At that he showed his teeth, snarling, 'Well, I guess you fellows won't smoke any of my cigars,' and gathered up the cigars he had laid on the table."

Throughout this examination—the following details of which were not imparted by Mr. Johnson but by another who was present—Capone did not realize that the new weapon of prosecution for violation of income tax was being brought to bear on him. He thought he was up for liquor violations. His lawyer was not with him and, lacking anybody to watch his step for him, he became loquacious. At times he was insolent, such being his notion of how to enforce his contention that he should be treated with on a basis of equality. Obviously he thought the federal district attorney was a simpleton and, to searching questions as to his bank deposits, he airily replied that he had accounts under five different aliases in the Pinkert State bank at Cicero. There was no talk about liquor violations and Capone proudly babbled his way toward Leavenworth.

"Did you," he would be asked, "deposit such and such sums under this name?"

"Yes, I did," he would reply. "What about it?"

Converse Gets the Evidence.

Present at the examination were A. P. Madden, chief of the special intelligence unit of the bureau of internal revenue, and Clarence Converse, an agent of that unit. Both have been invaluable aids to Mr. Johnson in uncovering income tax violations in gangdom and in the political underworld.

Throughout the questioning Mr. Converse, his writing hand hidden by a table, was making notes of all Capone said. The fact that his admissions were noted down was of vital importance when the case against him came to trial. For when Mr. Converse took the witness stand the court, upon an objection from the defense, ruled out his narrative of the hoodlum's admissions on the ground that it was based on remembered and not recorded conversation. When the prosecution had established the fact that Mr. Converse could testify from notes the judge promptly reversed himself and the evidence as to the bank deposits was admitted.

Capone, still airy: "Well, you don't have anything on me."

Having studied gangsters at first hand for nearly four years, and now thoroughly understanding their half crazed and altogether vicious mentality, Mr. Johnson cannot understand the disposition of sensation loving persons to look upon gangsters and gunmen as picturesque figures. From their stills, which he described as "unspeakably filthy," to the men themselves, who, he said, "are human in form only," he has found every phase of their activity to be loathsome and pitiless.

"They are," he said, "murderous mobs and they know they must live by the law of the tooth and fang. When robbed and betrayed they invoke their own tribunal of death without a qualm. They have no recourse to any other. And yet, in print and out, glamour is thrown over these thugs by description of them as 'beer barons,' 'crime kings,' 'alky kings, and 'leaders in the alky aristocracy.' Knowing what I do, this affects me with physical nausea."

Bad Effect on Immigrants.

It does indeed, for as the district attorney was speaking his countenance betrayed the physical disgust of a man revolted by a bad smell.

"The effect," he continued, "of this flashy terminology upon the untutored immigrant newly arrived upon these shores is often deplorable. If he is gullible he accepts the words 'baron' and 'king' and 'aristocracy' at their face value, with the result that rum runners, murderers, and purchasers of murder take a place in his mind as brilliant emblems of success in the new land.

"The most conspicuous and powerful criminals in gangdom are not bold Robin Hoods. They are cowards. The most powerful and most advertised of them is always one, two or three removes from the specific assassination that eliminates a rival. And yet over this coward and purchaser of murder the Robin Hood glamour has been thrown. That is his menace."

"Have you, Mr. Johnson, searched out the cause of this befuddled state of the public mind—or the mind of a part of the public?"

Slack Thinking Is to Blame.

"Yes," he replied. "The cause is slack thinking. We have left so many of the old milestones behind. We have had ten years during which the old and tried seem to have lost their place. Politically, socially and economically we have been groping.

"Slack thinking on the part of citizens leads to slack conduct on the part of officials. Every official in the state of Illinois as well as in the federal service who is charged with the administration of the law subscribes to a solemn oath to support the constitution of the United States. But there are officials who make mental reservations as to the parts of the constitution which they will support.

"I do not intend to be drawn into controversy as to whether prohibition is a good law or a bad law, but I do insist that it is the law, and as long as it is the law the office of the United States attorney is going to enforce it with all the power and all the ability it can command. I am firmly convinced that the roots of the situation created by organized crime are deep in the violation of the national prohibition act and that violators of it are a hotbed in which crime spreads. This growth can be uprooted by taking the easy money out of organized crime. In doing that it is not important what particular crime a hoodlum is convicted of, but it is important that we impress on this community that nobody is beyond the law.

His Policy Moves On.

"The policy of this office in taking the easy money out of crime is going forward—haltingly it may be true—but forward.

"That policy is also going forward in counties of Illinois where the state's attorneys and the sheriffs take and obey the oath of office without mental reservations. In those counties there is not a single case growing out of violation of the national prohibition act which reaches the federal courts. Nor has a state's attorney a great deal to do with reference to this situation after he has once established in the minds of the criminals who live by this violation that they will receive swift and sure punishment. Among the counties which are doing notably good work along these lines are De Kalb, Du Page, Grundy, Kendall, Lake, Boone, Stephenson, Carroll, and Ogle."

Mr. Johnson believes that the intimation that it is "a wide open town" is the most costly and most destructive form of advertising a city can indulge in.

Effect of "Wide Open Town."

"A manufacturer," he said, "will go where the cost of distribution is least, and the gangsters of organized crime go where resistance is least. Criminals congregate where standards are lax. News of a 'wide open town' brings to that town recruits in crime from all other cities which enforce the laws, and that is exactly what has happened in Chicago.

"Dozens of men tell me that they were invited by Chicago politicians to 'come back' in business through the medium of alleged soft drink parlors, which are really speakeasies. Dozens and dozens have told me that.

"As proof of the disaster a city invites when it permits itself to become known as 'a wide open town,' it should be noted that the most notorious characters in the underworld of Chicago are men who have been recruited from the gangs in New York. When profits are no longer to be made here the leaders will leave Chicago and with them will go the members of their gangs—men, it should be remembered, who are mostly ex-convicts and are the hardest criminals society has ever been called upon to deal with."

Like Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court, the federal district attorney has no patience with the reckless optimism of the slack thinkers who welcome every murder of a gangster by gangsters with the remark, "And a good riddance, too."

Problem Is More Complex.

"The problem," said Mr. Johnson, "is not so simple as that. The short-sighted view of it which the comment 'good riddance' implies has enabled these desperate men to convey a sense of security to those who take human life at their behest. It gives their murderers greater courage. Those who engage their services can point to the ghastly list of two hundred unsolved and unpunished assassinations and say, 'See how small the risk is.'

"The point that they would make is that there are honest occupations in which the hazards of injury and death are greater. It is an awful thing for a community when such a point can be made against it, for the point discloses the appalling ramifications of crime that is fostered by privilege and protection. From first to last we are confronted with this curse of protection. I am assured by police officials of high rank that it would be a simple matter to stop the distribution of liquor over the city if protection were denied the gangsters. The sequence is direct. Stop that distribution and you stop the infamy of the gang murders which have made the name of Chicago a synonym for violence throughout the civilized world.

"In short, law violation of one type breeds violations of other laws. I am sure that privilege and protection are at the bottom of lawlessness today."

Work Done without Fanfare.

As a personality the federal district attorney is the least known of the leading crime fighters of Chicago. This is partly because he has never held elective office and partly because his work has never been accompanied by fanfares. Nor has he ever been exploited by the press. That does not irk him. On the contrary, for he remarked in the course of this interview that he considered it a sufficient boon that never in the four years of his district attorneyship has he been attacked by a man or a newspaper.

To get a touch of his personality and of his forthright manner of thinking you have to give heed to a few lines of the parable of John Johnson's kitchen garden.

John Johnson's son — then plain George Johnson and not, for quaint reasons which you shall learn later, to become George E. Q. Johnson for many a year—went to work in that garden at the age of seven.

That was forty-nine years ago.

He's of Sturdy Stock.

The garden was part of a quarter section of land on the southern edge of Webster county, Iowa, which John Johnson took up in 1868. He had emigrated the year before from the ancient province of Smaland in Sweden, that province which bred the forbears of two of the most effective fighters of organized crime now functioning on the distracted Chicago scene—George E. Q. Johnson himself and his friend and near neighbor, John A. Swanson, state's attorney for Cook county.

When little George Johnson went to work in the kitchen garden of the Iowa homestead he was taught how to weed.

This, in his own words, was the substance of the lesson:

"I was taught very early that to keep the garden clean it was not enough to cut off the noxious weeds at the surface of the ground with a hoe.

"I was taught that the one sure way to kill the weeds was to pull them up by the roots and shake out in the bright glare of the morning sun every bit of soil that clings to the tendrils of the roots.

"I was taught that I could not clean the garden by a method of selection.

"I was taught that I must not say, 'I will take that weed out and leave this weed in,' but that the only way to clean the garden was to pull up all the weeds by the roots and shake them out to the sun."

Applies Lesson to Job.

That was the lesson of forty-nine years ago. In accordance with word by word of it George Johnson did his work weed by weed in the one acre kitchen garden for seven years. Then he was considered old enough—for the Smaland stock does not pamper its young—to go into the fields and follow the plow.

Today he applies the old lesson, word by word and weed by weed, to every new day of his work as the United States government's premier fighter of organized crime in the Chicago area.

He hammers on the theme that the crime situation in Chicago is not, as he puts it, "going to be cleaned up as long as public officials pluck up one kind of crime weed and ignore another."

And he added:

"If you are going to rid the city of crime you must take crime without any processes of selection. You will have to root it up wherever you find it and shake its roots out to the glare of pitiless publicity."

O'Brien Case Recalled.

Within two hours after those words were spoken on the eighth floor of the federal building news came from Judge Lindley's court on the sixth floor that a jury had just found State Representative Lawrence C. O'Brien guilty of income tax evasions and that consequently he faced the possibility of a sentence of eighteen years in prison and a fine of $60,000 if the maximum penalty were imposed. And the word ran through the corridors and offices under the great dome:

"Another victory for George E. Q. Johnson."

But all that George E. Q. Johnson said when the newspapers asked him for comment was:

"No comment is so eloquent as the fact itself."

Lawrence C. O'Brien was a rich contractor and a politician of considerable influence. But neither riches nor influence made him look any different from any other noxious weed when the weeder from Webster county reached him in the course of the day's work.

Talks Only with Verdicts.

Mr. Johnson's comment on the O'Brien verdict was intensely characteristic of him. When President Coolidge appointed him federal district attorney in February, 1927, he was asked to talk on plans and policies. "I will talk," he said, as he peered benignly at the reporters through his silver bowed spectacles, "only with indictments and verdicts."

Dropping his glance he added in his quiet, reflective way:

"If words could drive the official and criminal gangsters out of Chicago they would have been gone long ago."

Then he set himself to thinking, studying and planning how to combat organized crime in Chicago, and by "organized crime" he meant primarily the booze and beer running gangs and the racketeers.

His thinking, studying and planning constituted a slow process. For George E. Q. Johnson is slow. That, probably, is why he is inexorably sure when he finally swings into action. Once Senator Deneen said of him, "Yes, George E. Q. is slower than the Second Coming, but he grinds and grinds and grinds all the time."

Studies Problem 20 Months.

On his problem of how to fight organized crime the United States district attorney ground for twenty solid months, studying it from every angle, accumulating facts on gangdom's far flung operations, finding out where it was most vulnerable and where it had been most lax in covering its trail.

The result of his studies and his planning was that dazzling inspiration, the prosecution of gangsters for evasion of federal income tax.

But he credits the success of his battle to no inspirations of his own or of others. He credits it to what he calls "the absolute unreachability of the federal courts."

"They," he said, "are the foundation of whatever success we have had. I cannot too emphatically praise the high caliber of the federal judges. Some people talk of the harshness of the federal courts, but I have often said that, if innocent of a crime, I would rather be tried in the federal courts, and, if guilty, in the state courts."

Points to Citizens' Part.

As to the cure of organized crime he declares that the citizen has a part to play.

"We get," he said, "lots of information every day, but relatively little evidence, for citizens who will stand up and swear to information—thus making it evidence—are not so numerous. The seal of silence placed upon witnesses by the fear of death is the greatest handicap of a prosecutor."

This man has made sacrifices to fight crime. When he was appointed federal district attorney he relinquished a private practice that was bringing him $30,000 a year. Today his salary from the government is $10,000 a year.

The story of his battery of initials will leave you with rather a human side light on the man and his antecedents.

He was christened George Johnson.

Here's Why He Is "G. E. Q."

But when he was about twenty years old he and his father decided that, in an area largely occupied by Swedish immigrants and their children, the name George Johnson could hardly be considered a very sure means of identification. The father—and this is interesting when you know that John Johnson learned his English after his arrival in America—had a deep admiration for the writings of Ralph Waldo Emerson and that admiration his young son shared with him. So they decided on "Emerson" as a distinguishing middle name to go with George and Johnson.

But when George Emerson Johnson arrived in Chicago in 1897 to study law he found that there were a score of George E. Johnsons in the directory. So he, offhand, added Q. to his initials.

"And what," I asked, "does it stand for?"

"For nothing," said the federal district attorney, "except a saving of questions as to which George E. Johnson in Chicago you are looking for."

As to the Iowa farm where the little George Johnson of long ago learned those abiding lessons in weeding by which Chicago now profits, it was disposed of by the family in 1900, when John Johnson, the proficient teacher of weeding and lover of Emerson, died.

Today the little village of Lanyon straggles over it and the site of the momentous garden that grew character among its other valuable products is forgot.

CHARGE MURDER OF TWO BY ARSON IN FATAL BLAZE

Say Butcher Caused Fire to Collect Insurance.

Charged with starting the fire in the one story building at 3655 North Kedzie avenue which early yesterday caused the deaths of two children and seriously burned their mother, Harry Goldvarg, 4851 North Harding avenue, a butcher at the Kedzie avenue address, was recommended held to the grand jury on two charges of murder by arson by a coroner's jury yesterday.

The children burned to death were Jerome Israelson, 5 years old, and his brother, Homer, 4. Their mother, Mrs. Dora Israelson, is in a critical condition at the Martha Washington hospital. The Israelsons were trapped in their home in the rear of a notion store operated by Irving Israelson, the father and husband.

Sought Insurance, Charge.

According to testimony, the floor of the butcher shop had been saturated with either gasoline or naphtha. The motive, it is charged, was collection of insurance of $3,500.

The fatal blaze was investigated by Fire Attorney Scott M. Hogan and Policemen Harry J. Sullivan and Daniel Andrews, attached to his office. They said they discovered the traces of the fuel. Among the witnesses were Mrs. Gertrude Cohan, 4539 North Central Park avenue, owner of a pharmacy in the burned building; her clerk, Harold Schain, 2121 West Division street, and Mrs. Lucille McGowan, 3234 Waveland avenue.

Woman Tells of Fumes.

Mrs. Cohan said she noticed an odor like that of gasoline in her drug store about 5:35 p. m. Friday. The source appeared to be next door, in Goldvarg's butcher shop, she testified. She sent Schain, the clerk, to inquire, according to her testimony. Schain testified he asked Goldvarg if he knew where the fumes emanated, and the butcher replied, Schain said, that he could not detect any odor.

According to police, Goldvarg had been in business at the Kedzie avenue address only five weeks. Previously he operated a meat market at 1251 North Clark street.

SUSPEND 2 COPS WHO TESTIFIED IN GUN CASE ALIBI

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock yesterday suspended two policemen who testified as alibi witnesses in a trial which resulted in acquittal of a defendant who has a long criminal record and who was charged with robbery with a gun. The policemen are Edward J. Mulhern of the Grand Crossing station and James Sheehan of the Chicago Lawn station.

The policemen violated a department rule of long standing, Alcock said, by failing to notify the state's attorney of their intention to testify for the defendant. According to John L. Murphy, assistant state's attorney, the policemen's testimony was harmful to the state. Had the policemen complied with the rule, the defendant would have been tried on other charges, Murphy said.

The defendant was Hubert O'Donnell, who was acquitted on Dec. 12 before Judge E. I. Frankhauser in the Criminal court. O'Donnell's record, according to Alcock, dates back ten years and includes arrest on twenty occasions and two convictions of robbery with a gun.

KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

SAYS CHICAGOAN BREAKS OHIO'S INSURANCE LAW

Columbus, O., Dec. 20.—(AP)—C. S. Younger, state superintendent of insurance, today charged Darby Day of Chicago, as president of the Liberty Insurance company of Dayton, and other officers of the company, who also are officials of the Darby Day Investment corporation of Chicago, with switching securities in their operation of the Liberty Insurance company, which they purchased a few months ago.

He further charged "glowing irregularities" and violation of the Ohio insurance laws and demanded that officers return immediately to the Liberty Insurance company certain securities which they had removed for the purpose of sale.

In a letter to Day and associates, Younger said: "The Liberty Insurance company seems very much impaired" by reason of the switching of the securities.

Younger said the securities removed for sale consisted of $228,000 of federal land bank bonds; $269,500 of joint stock farm loan bonds; United States government bonds valued at $185,000, and $26,000 of Philippine Island government bonds.

HELENE URGES CAROL TO LET DIVORCE STAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 20.—So far as the Rumanian queen is concerned, King Carol may as well look for another wife. Queen Helene declares she has had enough conjugal life with him, and says so in a letter to the king. The gist of this letter is contained in a communique issued by the Rumanian legation in Rome today. The embassy's statement is occasioned by recent newspaper reports that Carol has been attempting a reconciliation and that he had every intention of annulling the divorce decree. The communique follows:

"King Carol received a letter from Princess Helene several months ago asking him not to undertake action for annulment of her divorce as she is not willing to resume married life with him."

According to recent Bucharest dispatches, Queen Helene plans to leave Rumania during the Christmas holidays to live abroad, possibly France. Her son, Crown Prince Michael, has been taken from her and is attending a military school.

ACT TO AFFILIATE RAILROAD UNIONS WITH THE A. F. L.

Labor Head Green Revives Fight for Merger.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 20.—(AP)—A new campaign was in progress tonight to affiliate the major railroad labor brotherhoods with the American Federation of Labor to enable organized labor to meet its future problems with a "solid front" of 3,500,000 members.

Negotiations to this end, instituted by William Green, president of the federation, were disclosed today by Alexander F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, when he announced the appointment of a trainmen's committee to confer with a committee from the federation.

In the belief of many labor leaders, the proposed affiliation of the brotherhoods and the federation is one of the most important undertakings in the history of organized labor in this country.

Others Expected to Join.

Thus far, the negotiations with the trainmen's brotherhood are the only ones revealed, but labor leaders are confident the plans will include similar proposals to the other railroad unions.

Should an agreement be reached during the next several months the proposed affiliation will be submitted to the federation convention, probably in October next year.

In the past the almost utter lack of connection between the Big Four Brotherhoods and the federations has kept them from enjoying the supporting strength of each other. A number of difficulties hitherto have prevented affiliation.

President Whitney seemed optimistic over affiliation possibilities today, however.

Committee Appointed.

Among the old disputes between the federation and the major brotherhoods has been the question of jurisdiction on electrified railroads.

Another problem remaining to be solved is the federation requirements that there shall be no duplication of organization in its membership.

The committee appointed by President Whitney to confer with the federation's representatives consists of James A. Farquharson, legislative representative; S. R. Harvey, assistant president; and Mr. Whitney.

"I began shopping at an A&P store reluctantly. We don't need to be careful about expenditures, and I am a little fussy. It didn't seem to me likely that I could get what I want where the crowds go.

"Your coffee caught me. I came on your Eight O'clock by accident. It suited me better than any brand I had tried, in spite of its low price.

"Going to your store for my coffee, I began to notice other things. I tried a few and found them good, though cheap. Gradually I extended my purchases until now I get all my food from A&P.

ALDERMEN SEEK TO GET RID OF CITY HALL TAINT

See Peril to Their Own Re-election.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Within a few hours after Mayor Thompson's announcement of his candidacy for a fourth term a number of aldermen started running to cover yesterday.

All members of the city council who feel the urge to hang on to their arm chairs for another two years must submit themselves to the voters of their wards again on Feb. 24, the day of the mayoralty primary. The big heat of the day will center on the battle between the Thompson and the anti-Thompson forces. The outcome of many an aldermanic contest will hinge on the big fight.

Hoping Against Hope.

Councilmen have realized this for months and most of those who have played the mayor's game have prayed that he would become a sailor for the next four years without embarrassing them or endangering their political futures. With his announcement on Friday several of them immediately began to try to get rid of his colors, and one important leader went so far as to say he will not run for the council again.

That man was Ald. Oscar F. Nelson of the Forty-sixth ward. This is Thompson's home ward. In addition to being its representative, Nelson has been and now is the Thompson floor leader. He also is chairman of the judiciary committee and a member of the committee on finance, local transportation, railway terminals, buildings, and gas, oil and electric light, all of them prize assignments. Further, he is vice president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

But the Forty-sixth ward, although his home ward, is reported definitely anti-Thompson this year. A few years ago it turned Thompson down decisively for the comparatively lowly post of ward committeeman, and the sentiment now, following more than three years of his present administration, is said to be more strongly against him than it ever has been.

Nelson Gives Reasons.

"I am very much inclined to step out of the picture," said Nelson yesterday. "I'm not a quitter, but I believe I might be of more service in bringing about a solution of the tax problem as a private citizen on the sidelines than by wearing myself out trying to reconcile the public's steadily growing demands on the municipality with insufficient funds at our disposal."

Chairman B. W. Snow of the Republican county committee, who is presiding over the Republican alliance forces in their plan to select a fusion candidate for mayor, expressed regret that Nelson was leaving the council, praising him as one of its most able members, but expressing the opinion that his decision was due to Thompson's entry into the mayoralty fight.

"Nelson's retirement from the council in this way," said the chairman, "would furnish an additional evidence of the blight and burden of Thompsonism and its effect upon the public business. Thompson is proving to be too great a burden to be carried even in his own ward."

Others in Same Boat.

But Nelson is not the only alderman who has taken a new view of his own political outlook following Thompson's commitment to a fourth race. A notable example is Ald. Louis B. Anderson, Negro representative of the Second ward on the county committee as well as in the council, who formerly was Thompson's floor leader.

Under pressure, it is said, Anderson attended the Thompson caucus of twenty-seven committeemen that on Friday passed Thompson's own resolution asking him to try again for the mayor's chair. But it is believed that the Second ward alderman's participation in a Thompson campaign will depend on the final decision of George F. Harding, Congressman Oscar De Priest and other leaders in the near south side wards.

The reason for Anderson's situation is that the Second ward is now considered anti-Thompson territory. In the November campaign Thompson made a special attack there on Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick and championed Carlos Ames for sheriff. Ames ran only 238 votes ahead of Mrs. McCormick, who carried this ward, the Third and the Fourth, all of which have large Negro populations.

It is believed there will be an anti-Thompson candidate against Anderson and he had a hard time winning two years ago when Thompson was strong there through the support of Harding and DePriest, both of whom tried to persuade the mayor not to run this year.

Metzger Is Hesitating.

In the Eighth ward, formerly represented by William D. Meyering, now sheriff, Andrew Metzger, Republican ward committeeman, wants to run for alderman. But it is said that he is hesitating. Thompson barely carried the ward in 1927.

In the Seventeenth ward Ald. James G. Coyle tells his friends he would like to run, but it is said that in order to have a chance he would have to break with his present sponsor, William J. Balmer, commissioner of public service and one of the Thompson job committee who is expected to take an active part in the mayor's campaign.

Ald. Frank A. Sloan of the Twenty-sixth, where there always is a good aldermanic fight, is another who would like to get rid of all Thompson connections.

Edward F. Moore, Republican committeeman from the Thirtieth, has been planning to make the race for alderman if Ald. John S. Clark drops out, but Moore has been embarrassed by new loads of Thompsonism recently. He was compelled to act as chairman of the Thompson "drafting" caucus on Thursday even while his superior in the department of public works, Commissioner Richard Wolfe, was charging him with responsibility for what a city council committee was calling the misdeeds of the department.

A Switch in Alliances.

Ald. Joseph F. Ross of the Fortieth ward has been affiliated in the past with Committeeman John J. McKeone, who, following the loss of his job in the Municipal court clerk's office, is said to have found another in the city hall and to have switched from Deneen to Thompson. Reports of the switch stirred up the ward so that Ross now is said to have severed relations with the McKeone organization.

Ald. William H. Feigenbutz, committeeman from the Forty-fifth ward, who sat in the Thompson coming out party last Friday, has a valuable connection in the city hall. His real estate partner, B. O. Romin, is superintendent of the license bureau. Ald. Nelson is Feigenbutz's political godfather, and if Nelson quits the hall, the Forty-fifth warder, may take a chance on his partner's going to renting and selling.

In the Fiftieth ward Ald. Curtis Mellin is a candidate for reëlection under the Thompson banner up to this time. If this situation continues Louis Nettelhorst, Brundage committeeman who recently broke with Richard Prendergast because of the latter's Thompson leanings, will have an anti-Thompson candidate in the field.

Deneen Leaders Meet.

The progress of the Republican alliance continued yesterday when a plenary session of the Deneen forces—its fifty ward committeemen and its office holders constituting a meeting of about 100—voiced formal approval of the effort led by Chairman Snow.

The story of Friday's meeting of leaders gathered by Snow at the Palmer house was related by Roy O. West, national committeeman, and State's Attorney Swanson spoke. The proposal for fusion with the Snow, Brundage and other groups in the selection of a mayoralty candidate was discussed from the floor and Senator Deneen was authorized to appoint a committee with full powers to represent the organization.

Senator Deneen will lead his own delegation to the second conference of the Republican groups tomorrow afternoon. Business at the capitol delayed him last week and prevented his attending the first gathering.

EX-JUDGE LINDSEY DEFENDS SELF AND ASSAILS MANNING

New York, Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Speaking to an audience of 3,000 persons in Mecca Temple tonight former Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver answer in detail Bishop William T. Manning's assertion that companionate marriage is only another name for free love.

Mr. Lindsey characterized the bishop as one of the leaders of the reactionary element, assailed the "intimidation of politicians by ecclesiastical tyranny" as one of the "scandals of the age," described companionate marriage as a great, progressive social idea which if adopted will recognize that "marriage is made for man—not man for marriage," and defended his past record as judge and citizen.

The former jurist's address on "free love versus companionate marriage" was a defense of his life and teachings.

E. T. Brekke, Barrett's Manager, Guest at Party

E. T. Brekke, Republican committeeman from the 37th ward and manager of Charles V. Barrett's mayoralty campaign, was given a dinner last night in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman. Several hundred persons attended. It is an annual affair. In the past it has been the custom to present Mr. Brekke with a gift, but he asked that it be omitted this year, and that the proceeds of the dinner be used to help feed 240 needy families in his ward.

WIFE DIVORCES E. VAN ALSTYNE, NOTED COMPOSER

Mrs. Mabelle Church Van Alstyne, 536 Oakdale avenue, yesterday won a divorce from Egbert Van Alstyne, well known Chicago composer. The decree was granted by Circuit Judge Trude on grounds of desertion. Mrs. Van Alstyne, through her attorney, Frank J. Link, charged that her husband left her in November, 1920.

The composer and his wife, who was known as a dramatic reader, eloped to Kenosha, Wis., in June, 1906. They have a son, Egbert Jr., 20 years old, who is in school at St. Louis. By an agreement arranged out of court, Mrs. Van Alstyne receives the home at 536 Oakdale avenue, a 280 acre farm in Michigan, and other real estate which is said to total $100,000.

Mr. Van Alstyne had been married twice before. In 1895 he married a concert hall singer at Omaha. His next venture was in 1904, when he eloped to Waukegan and was married to Louise Henry, a vaudeville singer. Among his compositions are "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Navajo," "Seminole," and "Won't You Come Over in My Yard?"

WILDER LEAVES U. OF C. TO MAKE LECTURE TOUR

Thornton Wilder, novelist and teacher, who has been conducting two courses in literature at the University of Chicago during the last two quarters, will leave Chicago this week to begin a series of 20 lectures throughout the east, after which he will sail for Europe to devote several months to the writing of a number of plays.

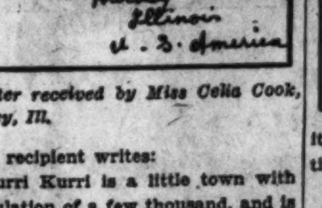
On closing his classes at the end of the quarter yesterday he announced that he will return to the university next fall to continued teaching. Prof. Wilder, author of the Pulitzer prize novel, "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," joined the University of Chicago last March 31.

INTERESTING LETTERS

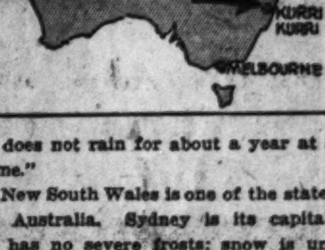
From Kurri Kurri, New South Wales, Australia

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

If you have received a letter from an interesting or little known place send the envelope to The Tribune, stating name of place where it was mailed and some information about the writer of the letter. If you have a picture of the original sender or the place, inclose it also.



Letter received by Miss Celia Cook, Harvey, Ill.



The recipient writes:

"Kurri Kurri is a little town with a population of a few thousand, and is on the banks of the Hunter river. It is about 200 miles from Sydney.

"It is right in the center of the farming and coal mining district of New South Wales, but the coal miners have been on strike for the last eighteen months.

"The weather is very dry, and droughts occur frequently. Sometimes it does not rain for about a year at a time."

New South Wales is one of the states of Australia. Sydney is its capital. It has no severe frosts; snow is unknown. The great plains are fairly well wooded and much of the soil is adapted to cultivation. Wheat, Indian corn, barley, and oats are the principal grains. The great wealth of the country, however, comes from the flocks and herds, supported by the rich native grasses.

SET LEGISLATIVE STAGE TO ASSIST REMAPPING FIGHT

Cook County Seeks Aid of Downstate Cities.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Cook county legislators advanced the idea yesterday that the battle for reapportionment in the general assembly, which opens next month, might be thrown on a trading basis—no aid for administration measures unless there is reciprocity on the remapping issue.

The proposal is still in tentative form, but before the sessions start conferences are talked of with a view of getting together, if possible, lawmakers from growing districts and industrial centers downstate, which like Chicago are now subjected to restricted representation.

One view in the preliminary discussion is that the reapportionment issue may be tied into the speakership election and also into the governorship fight of 1932, fences for which are already being built.

Downstate Cities Restricted.

The federal census figures, now complete on downstate counties, emphasize the growth of "taxation without representation" as population increases and shifts. Growing cities downstate are more than ever finding themselves in the same boat as the Chicago area.

Nine downstate districts have even less residents than in 1900, thirty years ago, when the population of the whole state was only 4,821,550. Since the turn of the century Illinois has grown 2,786,134 in population, while these nine diminishing districts have shrunk 78,474 in size, but still have nine senators and twenty-seven representatives. The nine districts with their population for 1900 and 1930 are as follows:

District.	1930.	1900.
44—Pinckneyville	108,758	115,075
39—Pekin	107,790	109,956
36—Quincy	103,691	118,025
48—Robinson	99,532	107,361
40—Vandalia	97,140	109,105
46—Mount Vernon	76,979	92,310
16—Pontiac	76,132	84,973
32—Monmouth	75,327	83,790
34—Mattoon	74,048	77,276
	819,397	897,871

Back in 1900 these nine districts had 18.6 per cent of the population. Now they contain about 10.7 per cent. But they still have about 17.6 per cent of the legislative seats.

Comparison Shows Irregularities.

Meanwhile, by way of comparison, the nine largest downstate districts have grown from a population of 816,930 in 1900 to 1,405,126 in 1930. These districts embrace centers such as Joliet, Herrin, Alton, East St. Louis, Waukegan, Rockford, Springfield, Peoria, and Aurora. In thirty years they have increased 588,196 in size, but they still have only nine senators and twenty-seven representatives.

Thus in nine receding rural districts 819,397 residents now have as much voice in the legislature as 1,405,000 inhabitants of the nine largest downstate districts, showing the lopsidedness outside of Chicago.

Cook county meanwhile, with 52 per cent of the population of the state, has only 19 districts, or 37.2 per cent of the membership of the legislature.

In the nineteen smallest downstate districts a population of 1,744,689 has as much voice in the legislative halls as 3,972,028 people in Cook county.

What the Constitution Says.

The revised preliminary census returns give the population of Illinois as 7,607,684. The constitution commands that the state shall be apportioned every ten years. This mandate has not been carried out since 1901, when the present districts were established.

The constitution stipulates that the state population as shown by the federal census shall be divided by 51, and that the figure obtained shall be the ratio to be sought in the formation of the districts. It also says no district shall contain less than four-fifths of the ratio.

THOUSANDS OF SPANISH REBELS CLAMOR FOR JAIL

New Republican Plot to Worry King Alfonso.

pared to take a batch of conspirators to the lonely island of Fernando Po, off the coast of Spanish Morocco, to await trial before the military tribunals when passions are calmed, and, although rumors in Madrid are that the inmates of the Moncloa jail at Madrid are to be sent off, it appears that only the soldiers who were mixed up in the revolution are to be transported.

Try to Make Jail Comfortable.

So great is the crush at the Moncloa prison—the largest prison in the country—that all the pleasant cells, used for political offenders, have long been filled. So are hundreds of others with clean bedding, running water and electric lights, to which in ordinary times any one is entitled on the payment of two or three pesetas per day.

Some very distinguished conspirators are occupying cells that, although they are clean, leave much to be desired. Everybody, however, is having food brought in. The director of the prison is distressed to see his distinguished guests so badly lodged and is doing his best to make them comfortable.

He asked a special corps of traffic police today to direct the stream of cars before the prison. Some are filled with anxious wives asking to see the newest lists of arrests, and others with people bringing flowers and food for the imprisoned inmates. Everybody inside is trying to outdo everybody else in drawing up damning confessions.

There's Also a Grim Side.

But there is also a grim side to Moncloa. Across the bare prison yard is a walled end with a chapel and a group of small buildings—the death cells—in a little inclosure where the garrote is applied to murderers and where in the old days conspirators were shot. The iron doors of the chapel are riddled with bullet holes fired by nervous soldiers. Although the altar is directly in line with the doors, a life sized figure of Christ has gone unscathed, a phenomenon to which the guards attach considerable importance.

On the chapel walls are lists of the hundreds who were shot under Queen Isabella—35 in one day in July, 1868. This is a hint of what might happen if Isabella's grandson, Alfonso XIII., finally made up his mind to fight for the throne.

Nobody in Madrid seems much bothered about the martial law, which is an old story in this country, if evidences are true. The police, who usually carry revolvers, now have rifles. The palace is heavily guarded and to leave the capital by road you must get a pass, which means a two hour wait in line with truck drivers and their burros. Along the Alcala, holiday booths selling representations of the manger and other Christmas articles, and tickets for the Christmas lottery, are doing a big business.

The fact that the male citizens go around with long blue capes over their noses, like conspirators in operettas, does not mean anything. They always do that when it is cold.

Two Americans in Spanish Foreign Legion Fight for King

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VALENCIA, Spain, Dec. 20.—There are two American citizens among the 500 soldiers of the Spanish foreign legion stationed here out of the "bandero" of 1,000 crack troops which were rushed across from Africa on Monday when the loyalty of the local garrison began to waver and the revolution was spreading like wildfire along the coast.

Jacinthe Garcia, 32, and of Spanish descent, was born in a French colony but is a naturalized American citizen and lived in New York for nine years. He served with the American merchant marine during the war. He has only two more months of a five year term to serve. He is counting the days until he will be able to "pull out of this hole," and get back to New York.

Negro Is Second Member.

Johnson Carmona, colored, and from Porto Rico, did some fancy potato peeling for the A. E. F. at Bordeaux during the war. He has served in the foreign legion a little over seven years. When his first term ran out he had spent all his money and, not knowing what to do, reënlisted for another five years. He is not fond of a military life but prefers the legion because there is no kitchen police.

The two Americans today told why the legion had come to Spain. They said it was King Alfonso himself who had called the legion to Alicante and Valencia, reminding them of a promise made years ago by Gen. Millan Astral that the legion would be there in the hour of need.

"None of us wanted to come," said Garcia, "because we had signed up to fight in Africa, not for police work in Spain. But the promise had been made and there was nothing else we could do but obey orders."

Doesn't Like to Fight.

"As a United States citizen, don't you dislike fighting to preserve a dictatorship?" Garcia was asked.

"Yes, but what can I do about it?" he answered.

"Would you fire on civilians or fellow soldiers?"

"I would if I was ordered."

"Suppose the whole country revolted?"

"The legion would keep on fighting until the officers told us to stop. I don't care anything about this guy Alfonso, but I am hired to fight and I will fight any one I am told until I can't fight any more. Hell, after five years in Africa a guy doesn't need any guts to stand up under fire—anything is better than that place."

Sorry He Joined.

Garcia is short and stocky, with light hair and an alert and intelligent face. Despite his five years in the legion he still talks with a pronounced New York accent. Carmona is coal black and has a resigned expression.

"It is a tough life, but it is okay," Garcia said. "I have been cursing my luck for five years. I skipped by ship in Barcelona. I ran out of money and like a damn fool joined the legion.

"I was all through the Riff campaign—two years of it. But even that was disappointing. We hardly saw the enemy during those two years. All the time we were climbing over those damn rocks, nearly dying of thirst, and every few minutes you would hear a shot somewhere up ahead of you and one of your buddies dropped dead. But you never saw anything. I nearly went crazy.

Morocco His Idea of Hell.

"After the war was over it was even worse. Morocco is my idea of hell. The discipline of the legion is awfully strict and at the slightest sign of cowardice or disobedience they shoot you before you know what it is all about. It is nothing compared with the French legion, though. At least they give you good grub and clothes, and when you are not on duty you come and go as you please. The officers are the best in the world.

"They pay you well, too—two pesetas a day for the first two years and that is gradually increased. But there is nothing doing in Morocco except to get drunk and there is no decent booze to get drunk on.

"You can bet when I get back to America I will never leave again."

MOVE TO SETTLE ARMY-NAVY AIR DEFENSE DISPUTE

Officers to Discuss Peace Terms at Parley.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Prospects for settlement of the two most fruitful sources of friction between the army and navy military establishments—the disputes over resumption of football relations and control over aerial coastal defenses—have brightened somewhat during the last week, officials of the two services said today.

It was learned today that Gen. Douglas McArthur, army chief of staff, and Admiral Pratt, chief of naval operations, will shortly make a new attempt to work an amicable solution of the air coast defense problem.

Should this peace move prove successful, it is unlikely that the President will take any action on the basis of the recent report on various phases of the dispute submitted to the White House by the bureau of efficiency. The bureau report touched principally upon the question of whether the army and navy were duplicating efforts at strategic costal defense points and the effect of such duplication upon the nation's purse.

FIND CATTLE BUYER SLAIN.

Clay Center, Kas., Dec. 20.—(AP)—L. Baldwin, cattle buyer, was found dead in a ditch 13 miles northeast of here today. His skull had been crushed, apparently by an assailant, and his motor car was found at the foot of a small embankment near by.

BRITAIN, JAPAN PLAN EXTENSIVE NAVAL BUILDING

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Information sent to the house naval committee today by the navy department disclosed that both Great Britain and Japan are planning extensive warship building programs under the London naval treaty, despite the fact that the fleets of both powers are closer to the maximum limits permitted by the treaty than is the United States.

The navy department stated that Great Britain, according to information considered authentic, planned to lay down 220,000 tons of new ships between now and the expiration of the London treaty on Dec. 31, 1936. This program includes, in addition to ships laid down in 1930, 91,000 tons of 6 inch gun cruisers, seven destroyer leaders, and seventy destroyers and three submarines annually.

The Japanese program, according to figures reaching the navy department, includes four 8,500 ton cruisers armed with 6 inch guns, twelve 1,400 ton destroyers, nine submarines, one mine layer, three small mine layers, four small torpedo boats, five mine sweepers, and twelve new air squadrons.

POLISH DEPUTY AND AIR HERO FREED FROM CELLS

WARSAW, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Adelbert Korfanty, former premier, noted oppositionist leader and long in political disagreement with Marshal Pilsudski, was liberated tonight from prison, where he had been since his arrest in September.

The government also released Maj. Casimir Kubala, Polish aviator, who made unsuccessful attempts in 1928 and 1929 to fly the Atlantic and who was arrested last Wednesday on charges of insubordination. Korfanty's imprisonment had aroused bitter criticism of the government.

SOMETHING ABOUT PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

A Republican President, half way through his first term, is taken for granted as a candidate to succeed himself. The congressional and state elections in mid-term may be accepted as tests of sentiment regarding him or as evidence of the effect of conditions upon him. If the country is going strong in its private enterprise the chances are that a Republican President will be going even stronger and the concession of his strength for another term will be found in the Democratic party, in the reserve with which promising Democratic candidates look upon the nomination. It will not be a look with enthusiasm.

President Hoover has not been favored by circumstance. When he went into the White House it was rosy with the myth of Coolidge prosperity, which had the malevolence to blow up about as soon as Mr. Hoover was in a position of responsibility for all the intangibles of national well being. The stilts cracked in the middle and it would have been tough luck for any occupant of the presidency.

It was especially tough luck for Mr. Hoover because his legend was that of the great engineer, not the great politician. He was supposed to know how to take economic causes to pieces when they were not right and put them together so that they ran properly and struck the hours when they should. That legend would not have helped any one to whom it was attached in the last year. While events were proving that no one could be a great engineer in such conditions, Mr. Hoover was giving unnecessary proof that he was not a great politician. No one would have expected Mr. Coolidge to conjure up something to keep the stock market at a hysterical high, wheat at $2, and everybody working, but he might have proved that a great politician does not have to be a great engineer. It would have required some doing, but a native Vermonter might have done it. There evidently was no chance for a man who learned American politics in other parts of the world to lay his hands on any popular political magic when horseshoes and rabbits' feet were needed. Two years' events unquestionably have made Mr. Hoover appear less formidable than expected, and consequently not only are Democrats lively prospects for their own convention but Republicans are making an examination of chances for themselves.

Mr. Hoover has been a standpatter on national prohibition when Republican sentiment showed great animation and a considerable turnover. It is natural, therefore, that speculation as to another candidate, unless Mr. Hoover recovers ground, should mainly concern men who have taken the lead for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment or the modification of the Volstead law. The largest figure in that leadership is, of course, Dwight Morrow. If Republican modificationists could put out a candidate within the next few months it probably would be the man from New Jersey. Mr. Morrow has some credible credit as a self-made man, something of a big money attachment to present as favorably as possible to the voters who are not in big money, and, in public life, a record of intelligent work and thought. All of it makes him a prominent Republican figure if the nomination is to go on the other side of the fence and not in the Scott McBride-Bishop Cannon part of the field.

If the play shows signs of getting away from the White House it will, of course, be wild. No one Republican personage, at the present moment, could be reliably counted in or counted out. Senator Johnson of California and Charles Dawes of Illinois may have had their big moments and may have no more in prospect, but politics never safely writes "Finish" in any living book.

The Democratic big man of the moment is unquestionably Gov. Roosevelt of New York. He is a Democrat and Roosevelts are expected to be Republican, but that is no disadvantage. Andrew Jackson is not the only man the old timers like to vote for, regardless of time, place, or parties. His home difficulty is Tammany, which is making one of its periodic excursions into the open air and causing the neighbors to shut the windows and use the atomizers. A man of character may avoid most of the expediencies which might compromise him fatally.

There are indications that the south will not be as fanatical in 1932 as it was in 1928. The southern Hooverites are now regarded pretty generally in their home localities as locofoco scoundrels who imposed upon the chivalric temperament and heated up the freemen to their own shame and misery. The south will die hard on prohibition so long as its leading citizens are not personally deprived of anything by it, but it is a safe guess that there will be no such holy crusade against Roosevelt as there was against Al Smith.

The surmise now would be that the Democratic convention will be wet again and without the train wreck of two years ago. If it isn't Roosevelt, it may be Ritchie of Maryland. If another year brings the southern wing to anything like even intellectual doubt as to Volstead, Robinson of Arkansas may be found sufficiently liberal.

A year in this volatile country may change conditions and opinions so remarkably that Mr. Hoover will be able to write his own ticket. In that case the Democratic party will put the hopes of 1930, encouraged by the interim elections, away for use another time.

FATHER SAM.

The new senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. Davis, was familiarly known when secretary of labor for his well rounded and full fleshed sentimentalities. Through the routine of his duties he was never too busy to pause for a laying on of the paternal hand or the indorsement of one of the better emotions. It was natural, therefore, that Senator Davis, making his first speech to the senate, should urge the extension of federal activities in child nurture, in the adventures of fatherhood and the cultivation of the home. It was not only in his nature to do so but, being fresh from the bureaucratic system, he is still strong in addiction to the methods of this system. If any one is to save the American child, if it needs saving, it will be the American bureaucrat.

Here is where a desirability of effect is supposed to indicate a desirability of cause. Mr. Davis' colleagues will agree that nothing is more important to the nation than the proper rearing of its children, beginning with the proper care of their mothers and including the proper nourishment and education of the future citizens. It being conceded that this is so, it is assumed naturally to follow that it is all important for the federal government to see that it is done.

The American government is a derivation of local self-government. The American people have been able to make a federated central government work in a democratic system because centuries of their ancestors were capable of local self-government. With this as a base they have been able to support an elaborate system of free democratic government. Nearly all the paternalistic legislation proposed at Washington assumes that this ancient capacity has disappeared.

In matters which are essentially the concern of communities and of states it is taken for granted that a satisfactory progress cannot be had unless the federal government intervenes either as a coercive force as in prohibition or as an adviser or patron. It is the theory of such intervention that the citizens whose character must determine the character of all government are incapable of self-dependence in the most intimate affairs of their own conduct and in the handling of their own local or state responsibilities.

That there are uneven levels of accomplishment from state to state is apparent, but modern reform is impatient of the methods of true and substantial progress. It must hand the thing down from the top by overextending the activities of a federal government designed for no such purposes. When this line has been taken there is no logical end to it. Any purpose needs only to be admittedly good to require the adoption of it by the central government. That government then has no limit whatever to its activities and the old system of state and local responsibility passes away. With it will go the sense of responsibility and the capacity for the very kind of government from which the United States is a growth.

WAR PICTURES.

The talking picture made from Erich Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front" has been withdrawn from the German theaters after disorders, raised chiefly by Fascists, against the showing. Some war pictures are still dangerous experiments with public taste. The picture made from the story of Edith Cavell was kept from the British public for reasons of state because the government felt that it would recreate a situation undesirable in foreign relations. London crowds went to see the "Big Parade," although national criticism was that it rather pointedly ignored the presence of any other than American troops on the allied side.

"All's Quiet" is a picture from the story of the war by a German, but it is likely that a picture made under the inspiration of John Dos Passos would probably get some action from the more volatile elements of the American Legion and it is to be doubted if a producer would care to use Sherman's march as a bid for the patronage of Georgia or other parts of the south even now, although Griffith took a shy at the theme in the "Birth of a Nation."

These are touchy spots in national sentiment for years after recovery from an unpleasantness. Germany is conscious of having lost a war and some Germans, dominant in this instance, are not ready to tolerate a picture showing that it was not an unmodified pleasure for the army to fight it.

Editorial of the Day

THE CHICAGO MAYORALTY.

[New York Times.]

Mayors in this country are officials of the second rank. But the chief magistrates of cities like New York and Chicago have great powers in vast communities, and outsiders sometimes judge a city by its mayor. We have had and have our difficulties in New York, but not in recent years have we suffered the grievous consequences of mayoralty politics in Chicago. The whole country, admiring the growth, the business spirit, and the beauty of that city, had hoped that recent efforts to place the mayoralty in better hands were to be successful. But in a choice among Cermak, Igoe, Thompson, Barrett, and [if the bar is to be believed] Judge Lyle, there seems little hope of bringing back the dignity and decency of, for example, the administration of Mayor Dever.

After the great Democratic victories in Chicago and Illinois last November, wise party leadership would propose a mayoralty candidate of the highest type and remove Thompsonism and its Democratic parallel from the city hall. It is not yet too late to hope. Chicago has literally hundreds of excellent, able citizens who, if not asked to enter a political shambles, would consent to be drafted. Were George Brennan or Roger Sullivan Democratic leaders now it must be said for them that, bosses though they were, they would have found a fitting man.

AMERICAN HEROES

ZEBULON MONTGOMERY PIKE

A Brief Review of His Contribution to Our Country

(The articles of which the following is the thirty-first are intended as five minute sketches of early Americans of particular achievement and distinction, each flashed briefly against the background of the times and conditions in which the subject made his contributions to the nation. Their names may be well or may be little known now to the generation which has inherited the benefits of wise, laborious, and in many instances heroic work.)

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

When Jefferson bought Louisiana he used authority he did not believe he had and he got a bargain the extent of which he did not know. It having been determined as unimportant whether he could buy territory, providing he did, it was still less important what the territory was, providing it included New Orleans and the free navigation of the Mississippi.

The President could not permit himself to be bothered with principles or with parallels or meridians. New Orleans was the market of the west, reached by flat boats and keel boats. The sale of produce in New Orleans by navigation of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers was the export by which the western farmers made their profits. If the port of New Orleans was closed to them and their use of the Mississippi impeded they might do any one of several things, but it was certain they would not submit to it.

France had made its peace with the United States in September, 1800, and the day after it did so Napoleon took Louisiana back from Spain by a secret treaty concerning which he diplomatically but flatly lied when a leak apprised the United States of the transfer so greatly involving its own future. Corroboration and denial followed each other for two years until October, 1802, when one was no longer needed and the other futile. The Spanish closed the Mississippi, preparatory to the transfer to the French. Word was carried to Washington that if the government did not reopen the river the west would. Jefferson had to act quickly and did.

Louisiana in Napoleon's scheme was to have been part of a new French colonial empire in America. It had its first tryout in San Domingo, where Toussaint L'Ouverture and the yellow fever disposed of it. Consequently when Jefferson wanted to buy Napoleon wanted to sell and the United States had a new child in Louisiana, the size of which it did not know. Napoleon did not know and did not care.

Jefferson had a scientific as well as a political interest in this new problem and explorations were ordered. Two were intrusted to Zebulon Montgomery Pike, a lieutenant in the army. (Pike was an army child. His father was Maj. Zebulon Pike. He was born Jan. 5, 1779, and when old enough was a cadet in his father's command on the western frontier. In 1799 he was an ensign in the 2d infantry and in 1800 a lieutenant in the 1st.)

Lieut. Pike's first commission was to trace the sources of the Mississippi, which had been badly guessed at in early treaty making. The peace between Great Britain and the United States assumed that the river arose west of the Lake of the Woods, instead of south, and tried to run a line there. (That treaty error was not remedied until 1818.) The lieutenant outfitted in St. Louis and started up the river in August, 1805, with a keel boat and twenty-one men. His journals described the lead works of Julian Dubuque on the west bank of the river and the old trading station at Prairie du Chien at the mouth of the Wisconsin river, on the water route to Canada by the great lakes. North of there he was in Indian country touched only by the fur traders, encroaching from Canada with the British flag over their posts.

Pike formally took possession of the land for the United States, but he did not find the source of the Mississippi. He had been sent out at the wrong time of the year and had to work in the ice and snow of the swamp lands. He located what he thought was the source in Leech lake and after nine months was back in St. Louis to report and to take an assignment of wider range in the exploration of the new country. In both instances his instructions came through Gen. Wilkinson, the most dubious character ever in the American army, compared to whom Arnold is an open book.

Wilkinson's rascalities made wide sweeps, but he always recovered himself without the exposure which should have ruined him. At this time he was in command of the army in the southwest and had been in the pay of the Spanish in New Orleans. Also at this time Burr was engaged in the mysterious affair known as his conspiracy, for which Jefferson later brought him to trial for treason. Burr's name has not been discredited by anything even reasonably surmised against him in these proceedings, but Wilkinson, who got out of the general suspicions without public attaint, had been behaving as a scoundrel.

Pike was sent in July, 1806, to take a party of Indians to Osage and Pawnee lands and then to go on to the head waters of the Arkansas and Red rivers. None of Jefferson's explorations had the assistance of technical men. Pike had fitted himself as well as he could by the study of mathematics, Spanish, and French and he was a careful observer. Wilkinson may have intended to use him in some shady transaction, but Pike was innocent of any such intent, whatever it might have been.

The Spanish were on the alert to limit the American purchase as closely as possible, especially in the southwest, in the direction of the Rio Grande, and the line first insisted upon would have taken the Sabine river, the present western boundary of Louisiana, and would have been run west to go above Santa Fé.

Pike was skirting or entering this debatable territory when he went in to find out what was contained in the uncertain empire his country had bought. He followed the Arkansas river on its northern bend to the Royal Gorge, in the Rocky mountains, and west of the peak which bears his name. He then headed for what he thought was the Red River basin, his expedition almost starving, and came to the Rio Grande, where he built a fort.

In February, 1807, a polite Spanish officer with a detail of soldiers visited his camp and requested him to go to the Spanish commander in Chihuahua. Pike was obliged to accept the invitation. He was escorted through Santa Fé, down to El Paso, and across the desert to Chihuahua. All his papers were taken and forwarded to Mexico City, where they disappeared in the archives until Herbert E. Bolton found them generations afterwards.

Meanwhile Burr had been arrested, Wilkinson had cleared his skirts, and war with Spain had ceased to be a threat. The American exploring party was passed on out of Mexico by Durango to Laredo and to San Antonio, being restored to Wilkinson at Natchitoches, where Pike was indignant to learn that he had been suspected of complicity in the obscured plots. His notes were gone, but his innocence was apparent and his reputation survived the experience uninjured. In 1810 he published a valuable and interesting book, with topographical data and descriptions of the little known life toward which the United States was headed.

In the war of 1812 he was a brigadier and died literally in a baptism of fire. He led a landing party from Chauncey's boats at the taking of York, the provincial capital of Ontario, now Toronto. It was gallant and successful under fire. Pike was resting, with his victory newly won, when a British magazine exploded. It was never determined whether it was an accident or an atrocity. It was responsible for the greater part of the American loss, a total of 350, and it so enraged the troops that they set fire to the public buildings. (Later the burning of public buildings in Washington was alleged to be in retaliation.) Pike's chest was crushed and he died on Commodore Chauncey's flagship April 27, 1813.

MEASLES VACCINATION.

From many directions there come reports as to the success of vaccination against measles. There is choice between two methods. Injection with blood drawn from an adult who has had measles at some time or other is one of these. After this kind of vaccination of an exposed child there may be a light attack of measles, but it lasts for a day or two only and is very mild. Therefore, there is no likelihood of a second attack. The other method consists in injecting a child with blood from a person recently convalescent from measles. This method is not followed by an attack of measles, but the immunity conferred is shorter lived.

As between these two methods most people prefer the former. Neither method is satisfactory for general use in a town or city. They are especially adapted to use in hospitals, children's homes, and boarding schools. In all probability the next step will be the use of one or the other method to protect some common school group, one in which for some reason or other the need is especially great.

There are reports of almost specific curative action of pyramidon in measles. When given at four hour intervals to children broken out with measles it is said to cause the fever to fall, the temperature to become normal, the cough to stop, and the eruption to fade in less than forty-eight hours. Rarely is it necessary to give the drug for longer than one day. The dose given should be small, and the dose for the child's age should be decided by a physician.

Other reports tell of good effects from aspirin, acetyl salycilic acid, and other synthetic sedatives of which there are many on the market. These good effects seem to follow giving the medicines by the clock rather than stopping and starting according to the fever and the aches and pains. The doses given are small.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

W. V. writes: My wife, 62 years of age, has high blood pressure. On different occasions in the course of the last three years tests of the urine have shown the presence of sugar and albumin, the latter, however, appearing but rarely. Recently she suffered from the passing of a stone or gravel from the kidney, but from this she has now recovered, and the latest urinalysis shows neither sugar nor albumin. Will you please advise me the diet to be followed in these circumstances?

REPLY.

If you had the gravel analyzed outlining a diet would be easy for any one who knows what the analysis showed. Speaking broadly, to prevent urate stones the diet should be low in meats and other proteins. To prevent oxalate stones the diet should consist largely of meat and bread. To prevent alkali stones the diet should consist largely of meat and bread. If you have no analysis of the stone, repeated analysis of the urine for crystals and for reaction may serve as a guide.

MOISTENING AIR.

A. A. S. writes: As cold weather approaches and you hear so much about overheated and underventilated rooms, dry air, etc., one is inclined to wonder what is the best method to keep the air moist, or fairly moist, in our homes. Could you find time to tell us something in the near future?

REPLY.

The best method of humidifying depends on circumstances. In manufacturing establishments in which the humidity is a matter of importance they hold it just exactly where they want it. In conservatories the same end is accomplished. In household practice humidifying is never allowed to cost much to either install or maintain.

There are many simple and inexpensive methods which work tolerably well. The preferred method depends on the type of heating employed. A method suitable for steam heating is not effective with hot water or hot air heating.

PIGEON POTPIE.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Our next door neighbor has between forty and fifty pigeons which roost all over our buildings, causing us the greatest irritation in keeping things clean. Can he be made to keep them inclosed on his own property? If he refuses to do so, are we within the law in disposing of them as we choose when they are caught on our premises? J. A.

We know of no satisfactory legal remedy. We hear that some persons pursue with apparent satisfaction under such provocation the nonlegal remedy of quietly catching and eating enough of the marauding fowls to balance their damage.

FIRE HAZARD.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—[Friend of the People.]—I live next door to a factory which has a window with wooden frame in the boiler room facing my garage. I think this is dangerous on account of the terrific heat coming from boiler room. I cannot rent my garage while this condition exists. It seems to me that it is unlawful for them to use these wooden frames where there is such great heat. MRS. B.

A final notice has been sent to the owner of the premises complained of to remove wood frames from boiler room opening and place in compliance with the ordinances. Failure to comply will result in prosecution.

The way to force payment is by levy and sale. If you take this step and the other creditor does not, you would be the one that would be paid.

LONDON.—In Russian Poland the German army, which is advancing on Warsaw over a wide front between the Vistula and Pilica rivers, on Dec. 19 reached the new Russian positions along the Bzura river and southward to Rawa, with the result that another big battle is in progress. The Russians retired across the Bzura river, destroying the bridges behind them. The Germans now are only 25 miles from Warsaw.

LONDON.—A dispatch from Amsterdam says the Germans have evacuated Dixmude but that the report that the allies have taken Middelkerke is untrue. The offensive operations of the allies are being stubbornly opposed by the Germans, who, in their entrenchments and surrounded by wire entanglements, make an advance of even a few yards a costly matter for the attacking forces.

LONDON.—An Athens dispatch reports that the allied fleet bombarded the interior forts of the Dardanelles on Dec. 19.

CHICAGO.—Chief of Police Gleason's annual report will show startling figures regarding thefts, burglaries, and robberies during the year. The total value of property stolen will be far in excess of $1,000,000. Up to last midnight there had been about 1,200 holdup robberies since Jan. 1. The year's report will show a total of 10,000 burglaries.

CHICAGO. — Twenty-five thousand dollars in gold was paid by Edward A. Cudahy of Omaha to the men who abducted his 14 year old son and who had threatened in a letter to burn out the boy's eyes with acid unless their demands were promptly complied with. Mr. Cudahy secured the gold at a bank, placed it in a sack, drove alone into the country, deposited the sack of coin on the ground beside a lighted lantern and returned alone to the city, seeing no one and speaking to no one. This was in accordance with the instructions of the abductors, who promised to return the boy safe and sound within a few hours. Mr. Cudahy obeyed the instructions and the boy was returned none the worse for his detention. Mr. Cudahy announced that he would pay $25,000 reward for the apprehension of the kidnapers. Young Cudahy tells a graphic story of his abduction and imprisonment in the deserted house. He slept little, ate little and all the time was blindfolded, manacled and chained to a floor. He said that when he was seized two doors from his home in Omaha two men sprang out and thrust pistols in his face. He was loaded into an open buggy and driven rapidly for a greater part of the night to a vacant house in the country, where he was kept prisoner. Police are bending their efforts to find the house.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. Clara B. Keator was released from the county jail after the longest imprisonment ever experienced in Illinois by a debtor.

WASHINGTON.—President Hayes went to New York to attend the New England dinner. He was accompanied by Secretary of State William M. Evarts, Gen. Sherman, and others.

NEW YORK.—The Rev. Dr. Talmage is in trouble again and some very damaging evidence against the pastor of the Brooklyn tabernacle is given to the public. The charge against him this time is willful perjury. It is charged that while testifying in his trial in regard to his leaving the Christian at Work and taking the editorship of the Advance he swore positively that he had made no contract with the Advance, and now a written contract with the Advance, bearing his signature, is produced.

CHICAGO.—Manager Emmett reopened his new Academy of Music and revealed a structure magnificent in everything that can contribute to the pleasure of an audience. At McVicker's the great and only Herrmann is the Christmas week attraction.

NEW YORK.—The experiment of lighting Broadway with the electric lamp was successfully carried out tonight. The lamps have been placed at the corner of each block from 14th street to 34th street, but the current tonight was carried no farther than 27th street.

ON BEING HELD UP AND KIDNAPED.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—The experience of the writer in being held up and kidnaped may be of some value to others who may have similar misfortunes. None of us are immune.

On Sunday eve, Dec. 7, 1930, at 8 p. m., I was in my car before my home waiting for my wife and daughter and her girl friend in order to drive to the South Shore Country club. I had started the car to warm it up and the doors were open as my daughter's friend was in the car and my daughter had gone into the house to tell her mother that we were ready to go. Three young men stepped up to the car. One presented a revolver and said, "Get in the back seat." There was nothing to do but to obey. One of the men took the wheel and the others got in the car, keeping me covered with a revolver. My daughter rushed down the steps but was driven into the house by one of the robbers with a gun. The car was driven off at top speed. We were searched, our money taken and ordered to take off our coats. I argued with the men in as nearly a conversational tone as I could use while looking into the muzzle of a revolver in the hands of an excited boy who was threatening to shoot. A fortunate collision with another car, the quick work of two colored men who were at the place of the accident, and the efficiency of the fifth district police in rounding up the holdup men terminated the kidnaping. All three men are in jail.

The moment the car left the house my wife telephoned the police department, a description of the car, the license number, the number of occupants and the direction which it had taken. Within four minutes a full description of the car and the crime was in the hands of every squad car in Chicago and had been broadcast to neighboring cities.

Of possible value to others may be these suggestions:

Don't have your car running when standing in front of your home. When you start your car, have the doors closed and be ready to be off.

Have every member of your family know your license number and a description of your car so that the police can be called at once and be given the essential facts to work on.

Don't resist the holdup or get excited. If you say anything, use a conversational tone of voice. You have to gamble that the holdup man won't commit murder unless he loses his head or to save himself from capture. Help him keep his head and wait for a lucky break.

Study the features, dress, voices and other characteristics of the holdup men as you never studied anything in your life. You will be called upon to identify the men later.

Coöperate with the police. Give them all the facts and study to put these facts in usable form. The police want to help you, but they must have facts to work on and the more in essential detail you can give these facts, the better chance they have to help you.

Give the newspapers all the facts which they ask for. Crime is news to millions and many clews have been furnished by casual readers far from the scene of the crime.

Back up the police on prosecution. Turn a deaf ear to fathers, mothers and sweethearts who will plead to "give the boy another chance." It is not yours to give. If there are any reasons for leniency, you may be sure the reasons will be presented to prosecutor, court and jury.

And lastly, don't take chances you don't need to take. Keep your car locked, the doors locked and your eyes open for just such things as happened to the writer. We can all help by being careful and schooling ourselves and our families to meet the emergency.

CARL V. WIRTH.

IN TENNESSEE.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—Senator McKellar [Dem., Tenn.] could not have known the inside story of the Caldwell bank failure in Nashville recently or he would not have dared to talk as he did about President Hoover. That bank failure, with its consequent failure of many smaller banks, was caused, in part at least, by the fact that the state funds deposited in that bank were used by the "big shots" of the state and Nashville to gamble with on the stock market. President Hoover is right when he warns the politicians to keep their hands off the public money. All such talk as McKellar and his kind are making is propaganda to turn public opinion against Hoover.

McKellar had better sweep the front steps of Nashville before he assails our President. J. M. M.

WRETCHED BUS SERVICE.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—I am extremely glad to see your editorial on the bus situation, as well as the letters you have published in the Voice of the People. It is quite time for some concerted action to remedy the situation. In case of accident it would be utterly impossible for people to get down from that upper deck.

In addition to the other duties of the driver, he has, when going under the elevated, to stand up while driving and shout to the upper deck, "Keep your seats." On Sunday afternoons in the crowded streets such as Sheridan road this is not a very safe performance.

I hope you will keep the matter before the public until some action is taken. M. C.

AN EARLY AMERICAN CUSTOM.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—This forenoon a delivery man handed me at my door a package. The hall was dark and I could not read the delivery notice, so I asked if it came from a particular store. "Yes, ma'am," came the response to my question. That old time polite reply of "yes, ma'am," or "no, ma'am," and so seldom heard nowadays, evoked a day of delightful reminiscences of eighty years ago. Please page the rara avis—the old fashioned delivery man—and thank him for me. ELEANOR GRIDLEY.

HIGH SCHOOL MANNERS.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—I read the letter of "F. S." in today's TRIBUNE regarding rowdy high school youths. Personally I think the worst of the lot are the ones who get the I. C. train at [illegible] street each afternoon. They never wait for the passengers to get off, but rush on the minute the door is opened. I wonder if they realize if it weren't for some of the taxpayers they are so rough with they couldn't have high schools. M. S.

CARL V. WIENER.

IN TENNESSEE.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—Senator McKellar [Dem., Tenn.] could not have known the inside story of the Caldwell bank failure in Nashville recently or he would not have dared to talk as he did about President Hoover. That bank failure, with its consequent failure of many smaller banks, was caused, in part at least, by the fact that the state funds deposited in that bank were used by the "big shots" of the state and Nashville to gamble with on the stock market. President Hoover is right when he warns the politicians to keep their hands off the public money. All such talk as McKellar and his kind are making is propaganda to turn public opinion against Hoover.

McKellar had better sweep the front steps of Nashville before he assails our President.

WRETCHED BUS SERVICE.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—I am extremely glad to see your editorial on the bus situation, as well as the letters you have published in the Voice of the People. It is quite time for some concerted action to remedy the situation. In case of accident it would be utterly impossible for people to get down from that upper deck.

In addition to the other duties of the driver, he has, when going under the elevated, to stand up while driving and shout to the upper deck, "Keep your seats." On Sunday afternoons in the crowded streets such as Sheridan road this is not a very safe performance.

I hope you will keep the matter before the public until some action is taken.

AN EARLY AMERICAN CUSTOM.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—This forenoon a delivery man handed me at my door a package. The hall was dark and I could not read the delivery notice, so I asked if it came from a particular store. "Yes, ma'am," came the response to my question. That old time polite reply of "yes, ma'am," or "no, ma'am," and so seldom heard nowadays, evoked a lay of delightful reminiscences of eighty years ago. Please page the rara avis—the old fashioned delivery man—and thank him for me.

HIGH SCHOOL MANNERS.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—I read the letter of "F. S." in today's TRIBUNE regarding owdy high school youths. Personally think the worst of the lot are the nes who get the I. C. train at 63d treet each afternoon. They never wait or the passengers to get off, but rush n the minute the door is opened. I vonder if they realize if it weren't for ome of the taxpayers they are so rough vith they couldn't have high schools.

LEVITY LEAVENS WORK OF HOUSE IN WASHINGTON

Speeches and Waving of Arms Daily Lot.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—On the right hand side of the room a tall man, with the lean profile of a New Englander, is making a speech.

On the left hand side of the room a rugged, square shouldered fellow with a Texas tan, jumps to his feet and begins to yell denials.

The New Englander steps into the aisle and shouts:

The Texan runs out into the aisle, waving his arms about and shouting back:

"Then don't you go and say what ain't true."

Appeals to Speaker.

The tall man appeals to the man at the rostrum in front of them, and begs fretfully:

"Mr. Speaker, don't let him take any of my time."

Up in the gallery a man snickers. Down on the floor, a man guffaws. The man at the desk is leisurely about taking hands out of his pockets. A smile plays about his close cropped mustache. Amusement edges his voice as he says soothingly:

"No, I won't let him take any of your time."

A roar of laughter goes up from several hundred men. Two widows in black smile, but a little apologetically. The man at the desk tinkers with his gavel. The Texan wrinkles up his weather beaten face into a grin and backs into a seat. Somebody applauds. Somebody else says, "Atta boy!"

Bang! Goes the Gavel.

The man at the desk brings down the gavel with good natured authority. And the house of representatives settles down on its spine to listen again to Majority Leader John Q. Tilson of Connecticut tell them some things that Minority Leader "Two Gun" Jack Garner of Texas insists aren't true.

During the quiet, the gallery guest looks about and tries to locate celebrities. This is no easy job, for the 435 members of the house have no desks, no permanent seats. They sit anywhere they please, the Republicans pleasing to sit with Republicans; the Democrats with the Democrats.

Kvale Wears Red Tie.

The young husky in the gray suit and the bright red tie is Paul J. Kvale, the Farmer-Labor member from Minnesota, of course. He shifts about from one side of the aisle to the other.

That chubby gentleman in the gray frock coat, sitting in the front row on the Republican side, is Carl Chindblom of Chicago, and that serious looking Democrat who rises so solemnly to ask a question, is Clifton A. Woodrum, the Virginia baritone.

The old gentleman in the gray Prince Albert is Edgar Howard, a country newspaper man from Nebraska. That William Jennings Bryan haircut isn't an accident. Howard was secretary to the Commoner when Bryan was in the house and he has never forgotten his former boss.

Bryan's daughter, Ruth Bryan Owen, walks down the aisle. She is poised and attractive and gets a smile from many of the men. Arkansas' pair of widows, Mrs. Pearl Oldfield and Mrs. Effie Gene Wingo, are less venturesome. They never budge from their places next each other.

Across the aisle there is Ruth Hanna McCormick, tall and tailored, and Ruth Baker Pratt, with flashing pink fingernails, and Katherine Langley, the comely elocutionist, who rarely speaks in the house.

The lull is over. It has lasted for six minutes. There is another argument, this time between Gilbert Haugen, the snowy haired Republican farm legislator from Iowa, and Marvin Jones, the good looking Democratic farm legislator from Texas. The vote on the question is taken.

A short, black haired man with a Byronic tie jumps up and cries, "Division!"

Ex-Teacher Loves to Talk.

The young man is Robert Alexis Green of Florida. He used to be a school teacher and he loves to talk.

A "division," or standing vote, not satisfying Mr. Green, the tellers are called for and both sides line up in a cotillion figure and, after the fashion of a grand march, pass down the aisle, being counted by both Haugen and Jones.

Then the person whose duty it is steps up to Nicholas Longworth and reports to him just what has happened.

And the speaker, who has been sitting there all the time, receives the news as if it were news.

For the house, in spite of its hilarity, has rigid rules.

CHRISTMAS CARD TO JUDGE WINS MERCY FOR RUM VIOLATOR

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP)—A Christmas greeting card saved Thomas Henry, 48, from a jail sentence today.

He was brought before Magistrate Leo Rothenberg on a charge of intoxication just after the magistrate had finished reading his mail, which included a card from Henry.

"Judge," said Henry, "I thought of you yesterday. Think of me today and be lenient."

"Discharged," said the court.

Henry and Rothenberg are well known to each other, the former having appeared many times before the bar of justice, and always on the same charge.

WRITER REVIEWS TEXTILE STRIKE CASE IN VIRGINIA

Nonunion Workers Now in Cotton Mills.

(For nearly three months Danville, Va., has been the scene of a strike of cotton mill workers, demanding recognition of their union and the principle of collective bargaining. The mill management has declared "a fight to the finish." Frank H. Fuller, Associated Press staff correspondent, in the following story outlines the causes and developments to date in this industrial struggle which has attracted nationwide attention.)

BY FRANK H. FULLER.

Danville, Va., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Sporadic disorders and bombings that have directed attention to the strike in the Riverside and Dan River Cotton mills here are incidents in a grim industrial struggle that has been termed the spearhead of the American Federation of Labor's major effort to bring trade unionism to the south.

With Christmas week approaching under a heavy blanket of snow, the contending forces are as far apart as the poles.

The striking workers demand recognition of their union and collective bargaining. The mill management has asserted collective bargaining never will be recognized and has declared it will "fight to a finish."

Refuses to See Union Men.

On one side of the controversy is H. R. Fitzgerald, president of the mills, who has refused to see union representatives. As the son of the founder, he has managed the huge plant under the "industrial democracy" system, established in 1919, which provides for a house of representatives composed of workers, a senate composed of mill superintendents and officials, and the president of the mills with veto power. Fitzgerald was noted for welfare work done in the village.

On the other side is the union with Buford Nash, former speaker of the house of representatives in the "industrial democracy," as president. Nash was discharged from the mills because of his union activities before the strike.

Union Point at Issue.

While the bone of contention has simmered down to recognition of the union and collective bargaining, there was dissatisfaction among the workers a year ago.

They opposed a 10 per cent wage cut and favored part time operation if curtailment should be necessary. They protested further against an alleged "inhuman stretch out system," under which the number of looms tended by a worker was increased.

The workers sent a committee to see William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Green sent representatives and a local of the United Textile Workers was formed.

The strike was voted and Sept. 29 the workers walked out with complete union indorsement.

Nonunion workers gradually appeared. There were picket lines to be passed, reports of intimidation came forth. Two injunctions—in Pittsylvania county and Danville city—were issued.

Then came Nov. 24. Mill whistles blew and nonunion workers entered in considerable numbers. Two nights later there was a demonstration and near riot in Schoolfield, where the Dan river unit is located.

Gov. Pollard ordered out the 116th infantry regiment on advice of personal representatives.

Troops Patrol Area.

Since then troops with fixed bayonets have patrolled the mill areas. Danville's police force has been doubled. Gov. Pollard ordered that picketing not be prevented. Military officials, however, have rigidly enforced regulations against mass picketing. Meanwhile several nonunion homes and the house of a magistrate have been bombed. The union disclaimed any knowledge of violence.

Christmas week will see eviction hearings against 47 families in mill owned homes.

Sigfield Schwarz, 73, Dies Suddenly on Visit to Bank

Stricken with heart disease while examining the contents of his safety box in a private room of the Central Trust company, Sigfried Schwarz, 73 years old, retired western manager of the Westchester Fire Insurance company, died suddenly yesterday. He had been ill two weeks. Mr. Schwarz lived in the Copeland hotel, 5009 Sheridan road.

Sergt. Thomas Clancy, 74, Policeman 45 Years, Dead

Thomas Clancy, 74 years old, a police sergeant with the department for 45 years, now retired, died yesterday at his home, 5329 Ellis avenue. He is survived by his widow, Margaret; a son, Thomas, secretary to Capt. Malone of the Central district, and three daughters.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime no matter the size of the rupture, and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. "The Spermatic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patent No. 747247, No. 1237709 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument method or operations and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. *See Booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure." JAMES SULLIVAN, FATHER OF JUDGE, TAKEN BY DEATH

James T. Sullivan, father of Judge John J. Sullivan of the Superior court, died late yesterday in the German Deaconess hospital of pneumonia. He was 86 years old, a native of Ireland, and lived at 944 West Garfield boulevard. He came to Chicago 65 years ago and engaged in the building contractor business until his retirement in 1910.

Surviving him besides Judge Sullivan are three sons and two daughters, William L., former secretary to ex-Gov. Dunne; Joseph R., former secretary to Senator Elect Lewis; James T. Jr., Julia, and Margaret. Requiem services will be held at 10 o'clock Tuesday in the Visitation church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet.

Cornelius Buttimer Drops Dead; Wife Is Seriously Ill

Cornelius Buttimer, 57 years old, a retired South Park policeman since 1921 when he lost his right leg in an automobile accident, yesterday dropped dead of heart disease in the Peoples Trust and Savings bank, 32 North Michigan avenue. His widow, Mary, was not told of his death as she is seriously ill in a hospital suffering from fracture of both legs suffered when she was struck by an automobile six weeks ago.

Former Sanitary District Engineer Dies in Canada

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 20.—Burton Wyman St. John, 58, prominent Canadian engineer and president and general manager of the General Equipment company, died at his home at Outremont yesterday. He was at one time an engineer for the sanitary district of Chicago. Later he became associated with American Locomotive company, which he represented in England.

Hursen Funerals

The Greatest Mark of Devotion

FOR over a quarter of a century Hursen funerals have been known and universally accepted as the greatest final evidence of love and devotion.

There is as much difference in funerals as there is in everything else. In Hursen funerals there is always the unusual, in the big and little things that mark the finest technique.

Hursen quality is unusual. You find it nowhere else so exquisite. Hursen prices, nevertheless, are also unusual. You find them nowhere else so reasonable. It is this policy of giving the utmost for the least that has made Hursen's the greatest institution of its kind in the world.

Hursen Chapels, the use of which is always free of any charge no matter how large or small the funeral, are not equaled in America for size, elegance of appointment, masterly design, and for facilities.

The North Side Chapel especially, recently remodeled, is one of the finest examples of its kind in this country. The South and West Side Chapels also are palatial, massive and unusual. Organs of superior tone and size are installed in each.

Hursen automobiles and hearses are the finest things on wheels. There is no extra charge for these over the usual hire asked almost universally for less desirable equipment. So, call Hursen, of course!

GERRIT DIEKEMA, U. S. DIPLOMAT, DIES AT AGE OF 71

Prominent Michigan Man Victim of Pneumonia.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Gerrit John Diekema, United States minister to the Netherlands and a former member of the house of representatives from Michigan, died here today. He was 71 years old.

Before his appointment as minister plenipotentiary to the Netherlands by President Hoover last August, Mr. Diekema had served in many public offices. In 1907 he was elected to congress from Michigan to fill the unexpired term of William Alden Smith, who had gone to the senate, and he was reëlected in 1907, serving until 1911.

Mr. Diekema was born in Holland, Mich. His parents were natives of the Netherlands, and he had long been a student of the affairs of the Netherlands government and a fluent speaker of Dutch before his appointment as minister.

Held Many Posts.

Before his election to congress he had held a seat in the Michigan house of representatives and served as speaker in 1889. He was elected mayor of Holland in 1895. He was a delegate to the Republican national convention in 1896 and was a member of the Spanish treaty claims commission from 1901 to 1907.

He was married twice—to Mary E. Alcott of Holland in 1895, and in 1920 to Leona M. Belser.

Mr. Diekema died peacefully about 6 o'clock after pneumonia had suddenly developed during the day. He had been weakened by an operation last Thursday for a stomach ailment.

Mrs. Diekema was at her husband's bedside when the end came, and had been there almost continuously since the operation. The legation staff was at the hospital at the same time. The body will be embalmed and sent to America.

Michigan Mourns Death.

Holland, Mich., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Not only Holland, Mich., his birthplace and lifelong home, but the larger part of the state mourned today the death of Gerrit J. Diekema. Lawyer, banker, political leader, congressman, candidate for governor and finally diplomat, Diekema was primarily fellow citizen and neighbor to his friends here. An affable temperament and a manner that was geniality itself, won for him in 1923 a loving cup presented by his fellow citizens of Holland, with no explanation other than they desired to show their love and esteem for him.

Father of Antonio Moreno, Film Star, Dies in Spain

DR. MARGARET JOHNSON, 'VOTER' IN 1890, DEAD

Dr. Margaret C. Boosing Johnson, physician and former suffrage worker, died yesterday in her home at 1518 North Washtenaw avenue. She was born in Ontario and began the practice of medicine in 1896.

For many years, until the passage of the suffrage amendment to the federal constitution, Dr. Johnson enjoyed the distinction of being the only Illinois woman to cast a ballot for governor and have it counted.

She had registered following the passage of a state law in 1890 giving the vote to women and cast her ballot after the law had been declared unconstitutional, when she discovered her name had not been removed from the registration lists. The clerk who permitted her to vote, John P. Grace, spent a night in jail as a result, but was released next day and he and Dr. Johnson rode together in a suffrage parade the following day.

MRS. ROSE LOUER, PROMINENT IN CHARITIES, DEAD

Mrs. Rose Mandel Louer, 52 years old, of Highland Park, daughter of the late Emanuel Mandel, one of the founders of the Mandel Brothers department store, died yesterday at the Michael Reese hospital after an extended illness. She was the wife of Albert S. Louer, attorney, and a sister of Edwin F. Mandel, president of Mandel Brothers.

Mrs. Louer maintained an active interest in philanthropic work, devoting much of her time to charity organizations. She was prominent in club circles. Mrs. Louer was a member of the Chicago Woman's Aid, the Council of Jewish Women, the Josephine and Miriam clubs, and the woman's auxiliary to the C. H. I.

Surviving her in addition to Mr. Louer and Mr. Mandel is a son, Albert E. M. Louer. Private funeral services will be held tomorrow at the residence in Roger Williams avenue, Highland Park, with burial in Rosehill cemetery.

AGAIN CHRISTMAS comes to remind us of an ideal —a reminder we need and one we may cherish.

HURRY UP, GOOD FELLOWS, WITH CHRISTMAS AID

Take a Basket of Food to a Needy Family.

Today is the deadline, Good Fellows, for mailing your application for the name of a poor family to receive a Christmas basket of groceries and toys. Tomorrow, and until Wednesday noon, names can be obtained by telephoning or calling in person at the Good Fellow headquarters, in THE TRIBUNE offices at Dearborn and Madison streets. The telephone number is Superior 0100.

It's your job, Good Fellows, to deliver these baskets in person. The Good Fellows of other years, dating back to 1909, will tell you that the visit will be a pleasure. You'll be bringing joy to homes where there is gloom. You'll be saving little boys and girls from the heartbreak of an empty stocking on Christmas morning.

Don't disappoint the family that has been assigned to you. You are the only Santa Claus that your adopted family will know.

Deserving Families Chosen.

The families are deserving of kindness at Christmas. The Good Fellow headquarters received the names from the Chicago Council of Social Agencies, which is a clearing house for 200 Chicago charities.

The cost of the baskets is small in comparison to the pleasure that the gift will bring to the Good Fellows and to those they are benefiting. Some holiday groceries and a few toys for the children, with some fruit, candy and nuts, can be bought for from $3 to $6, depending upon the size of the family.

If you want to spend more to relieve the distress caused by unemployment, you can contribute to the Good Fellow fund for rehabilitating destitute families. In addition to the Christmas activity, the Good Fellows are adopting families for winter, or until they can become self-supporting again, providing food, shelter, clothing and heat to families who are without these necessities.

Be a Good Fellow!

If you want to make a substantial donation to the poor or if you want to share your mite with those in dire need, mail your contribution to the Good Fellow, THE TRIBUNE, Chicago. THE TRIBUNE pays the expenses of administering the Good Fellow fund, so that there will be no deduction for overhead.

W. C. McQueen of Elgin, president of the Pure Milk association, announced yesterday that on Christmas morning the 19,000 farmer members of his organization will contribute 30 cents to charity for every hundred pounds of milk sold to dealers in the Chicago area. This will total about $12,000, he estimated. The money will be used in buying milk for the destitute. A portion will be distributed through the Good Fellows to organized charity.

JOBS FOR CHRISTMAS

Many Christmas jobs were offered to the unemployed yesterday through Sally Joy Brown of THE TRIBUNE, who turns over offers of work to the Illinois free employment service at 116 North Dearborn street. Sally emphasized that many more jobs are still needed.

A girl in her teens was given a job selling Christmas cakes in a bakery in the 3400 block on North Arbany avenue.

A church on the north side wanted a man to tune its pipe organ in preparation for Christmas carols. Two messengers were called for by the A. company on Madison street in the loop to deliver parcels during the holiday rush.

Dinners and Wages Offered.

Christmas dinners, wages of 50 cents an hour, and carfare will be provided for many women who otherwise would manage with only a slim dinner, if any, on Christmas day. Women are calling Sally to say that they will create jobs in their homes on Christmas day, paying women to help them cook their Christmas dinners. Thanksgiving dinners and generous pay were provided for many in a similar way, Sally said.

Yesterday Mrs. G. N., in Grace street, asked for extra help on Christmas night. She said she would like to have the job given to a woman about 40 years old. She offered 50 cents an hour for a woman to wash dishes, the work to last from 7 to 11 o'clock.

One of the most substantial Christmas presents which came in to Sally Joy Brown yesterday to be passed along to a jobless man was a job for a truck driver. The F. S. Radio company on South Wabash avenue, which provided the job, specified that it go to a man with a family. The pay will be $25 a week.

A file clerk was asked for by the C. N. B. company in the Merchandise Mart. The work will last two weeks while files are being transferred.

YANKEE 'BUDDHA' DIES UPON LOSING 'MAGIC' GLASSES

Broken Heart Caused Death, Inquest Finds.

POONA, India, Dec. 20.—(AP)—A coroner's inquest today laid bare the strange story of an American, who so steeped himself into the mysteries of occult healing that he died of a broken heart at the loss of a pair of spectacles through which he believed himself capable of seeing and curing the ills of others.

Beyond that the authorities were unable to go. On his deathbed a week ago James Brandon, described as a former resident of Nashville, Tenn., requested that his body be burned on a pyre of sacred sandalwood and his ashes given to his Hindu friends. He left no other word.

Brandon was found dead in the squalid cave in which he lived and practiced asceticism, occultism, and mystic healing. Since coming to India fifteen years ago he had amassed a fortune by treating the sick, lame, halt and blind with herbs, potions and magic prayers.

"God Given Spectacles" Missing.

It was testified at the inquest today that on his deathbed he complained he had lost his occult power because his "God given spectacles" had been stolen. Witnesses revealed that a short time ago some Poona youths as a practical joke raided Brandon's abode, stealing all his property including the spectacles.

"Through the spectacles I was able to see God," Brandon was said to have told others as he lay dying, "and through the spectacles God allowed me to see the causes of my patients' diseases and showed me how to cure them. Now, without them, I am helpless even to heal my own malady or to save myself from death."

Dies of Broken Heart.

The coroner returned a verdict that Brandon died "from a broken heart, superinduced by a belief that God had deprived him of the divine power of healing."

Although Brandon later offered a reward of nearly $2,000 for the return of the eyeglasses, they never came back. Since their loss he had declared he was unsuccessful in his cures, gradually losing his patients and also his own faith in his ability to heal.

One other pact in his strange life was uncovered by police. Every month Brandon sent a remittance which ran as high as $2,000 to a Mrs. Harnup, whose first name and address the authorities were unable to learn.

His Hindu friends declare the American recluse achieved many cures. Sufferers of all faiths came to him from many parts of India and he became known as the "American Buddha." Outside his darkened abode long lines of broken humanity could be seen daily seeking his supposedly supernatural powers of healing.

RONGETTI PUT IN JAIL PENDING APPEAL HEARING

Dr. Amante Rongetti, under sentence of 1 to 14 years in state prison for manslaughter as a result of the death of Loretta Enders, was arrested by deputy sheriffs yesterday and placed in the county jail. Dr. Rongetti was first sentenced to death in the electric chair for the Enders death. At a new trial the sentence was reduced. He has been out on bond pending an appeal on the last decision.

Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude, who presided at Rongetti's trial, granted a stay of the commitment order to permit Rongetti to file his appeal. When he was unable to furnish a satisfactory bond his attorney, William Scott Stewart, requested the Supreme court to reduce the $25,000 bond. Judge Trude's stay expired Friday and Rongetti's arrest followed an unsuccessful attempt to raise bond.

$1,000,000 Jerusalem Hotel Open for Holiday Guests

JERUSALEM, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Times have changed in this biblical city, for the new $1,000,000 King hotel was opened for Christmas guests today with the claim that it is the most modern hostelry in all the near east. The hotel is on a historic site. In the distance are seen the valley of the Jordan, the Dead sea, and the Hill of Moab, while nearer are the old city walls, the tomb of David and the valley of Hinnom.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—Communists began their "anti-Christmas demonstrations" in Berlin tonight by wrecking windows in the Greek legation and flinging brickbats and other missiles. The legation has been under special police protection since a group of communist soldiers were placed on trial at Athens. Notes attached to the bricks showed that the outrage was "revenge" for the sentence passed upon the Athens soldiers.

Threats of "no peace on earth this Christmas" are being voiced in all communist papers, notably at Munich, where the chief of police has taken an energetic stand and warned the Reds that the entire police force of the city will stand at arms during the Christmas holidays. He threatened rigorous punishment for all rioters.

Suppress Berlin Paper.

The local communist newspaper, Neue Zeitung, has been suspended until Jan. 2 for persisting in its propaganda of hate.

The activities of the political extremists are driving German youths to riots, with Fascists from universities and other schoolboys playing the leading parts. Students at Altona, led by their own Fascisti chiefs, ranging in ages from 11 years upward, organized a revolt. They discharged fireworks in their school building during a teachers' conference. They forcibly prevented blind persons from entering the school building to attend the Christmas festival for the blind.

The university town of Jena has been terrorized during the last few nights by Fascisti students, armed with rubber batons and other weapons, marching through the streets shouting and beating passersby. The students on one evening sought to storm the trade union headquarters.

Ready to Fight Students.

Hermann Leber, Socialist vice president of the Thuringian diet, has addressed a letter to the Thuringian home minister warning him that 6,000 organized workers at Jena will resort to arms in self-defense unless the student outrages are quelled immediately and the instigators punished.

Meanwhile throughout the entire country crowds of students are wrecking movies showing films displeasing them. At Dresden they threatened the chief of police after wrecking a movie house showing "Students' Song of Heidelberg" last night.

Deaf Hear Again Through New Aid

Earpiece No Bigger Than Dime Wins Enthusiastic Following. Ten-Day Free Trial Offer

After twenty-five years devoted exclusively to the manufacture of scientific hearing-aids, the Dictograph Products Co., Inc., Dept. 508-M, 180 North Michigan Blvd., Chicago, Ill., has just perfected a new model Acousticon that represents the greatest advance yet made in the recreation of hearing for the deaf. This latest Acousticon is featured by a tiny earpiece no bigger than a dime. Through this device sounds are clearly and distinctly transmitted to subnormal ears with wonderful benefit to hearing and health alike. The makers offer an absolutely free trial for 10 days to any person who may be interested, and a letter will bring one of these remarkable aids to your home for a thorough and convincing test. They will send you as well details of their special Christmas offer, which represents a saving of $10 in the cost of your renewed hearing. This offer expires December 24th. So clip this advertisement and send it to them with your name and address today! Advt.

Rating of Groups

Following are listed the ratings of the various trade groups in Chicago; showing the percentage of their respective quota so far collected in the drive of the governor's commission on unemployment for the $5,000,000 relief fund. Seven teams have exceeded their quotas. The ratings:

Trade team.	Pct.

The first large contribution under the pay-deduction plan was received yesterday by the governor's commission on unemployment and this, with miscellaneous subscriptions, brought the day's total to $12,5000, despite the fact that it was Saturday and a "short day." When the figures were added at noon the grand total had reached $2,607,150, more than half of the $5,000,000 sought for relief measures.

U. S. Gypsum Sends Fund.

The largest contribution of the day —$42,390—was sent in by the U. S. Gypsum company and its employés. This subscription was raised under the pay-deduction plan recommended by the commission, whereby the corporation matched dollar for dollar the contributions of the workers.

"Half of the Gypsum subscription came from 529 employés, or about 95 per cent of all the persons employed by the company, and the company's dollar for dollar matching made the other half," Philip R. Clarke, who heads the drive for funds, reported. "Four or five other big concerns have worked out this plan with excellent results, and if all firms, large and small, would follow suit it would be a matter of only a short time before more than the minimum requirement of $5,000,000 would be raised."

Other Large Contributions.

Among the large contributions yesterday were the following: American Steel Foundries and employés, $10,483; Griffin Wheel company and employés, $[illegible]; Dearborn Chemical company and employés, $6,000; Walter A. Murphy, $5,000.

More than 3,500 Chicago public school children will receive benefits from a sum of $10,000 given by the Chicago tuberculosis institute to the relief fund. Officials of the institute yesterday asked the commission to distribute this money through the lunches served to needy children in public schools. Approximately 70 schools are included in the group which will receive the benefits of the institute's gift. Mrs. Harry Hart is director of the institute and Mrs. Theodore B. Sachs is superintendent.

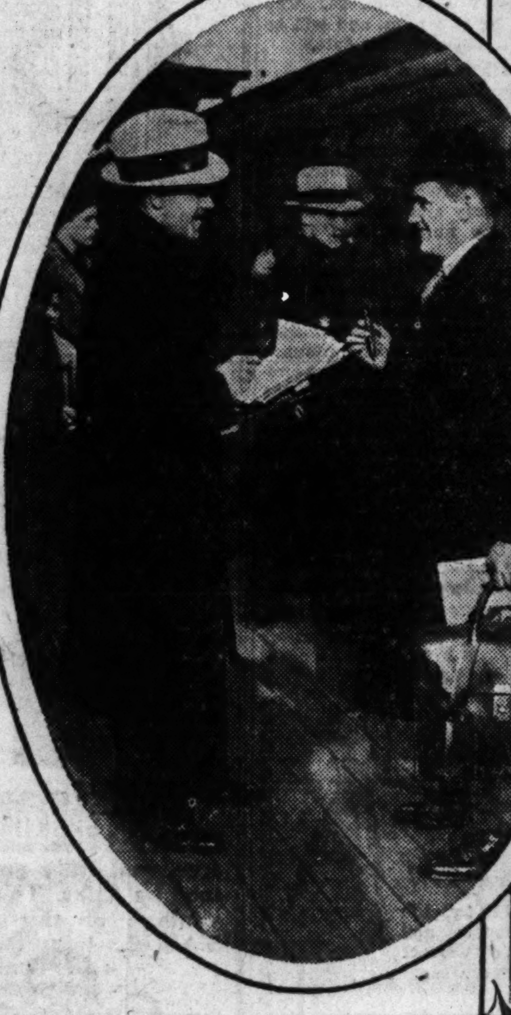
Recent Investigation Shows
WHAT MEN WANT FOR XMAS
In 10,417 interviews—2 out of every 3 smokers say they prefer
"a box of FRESH CIGARS"

Yes, Mr. Walter F. Tighe would like a box of cigars for Xmas, and said of Dutch Masters—"It's a mild smoke. Your new cold process is a real discovery."



A box of good cigars would suit Mr. H. M. Costello. Dutch Masters, he says, are particularly "nice and fresh."

Mr. J. Goodbody's pleasant stroll was made more enjoyable by putting in a good word for a "box of good cigars." "I'm pleased with Dutch Masters. They taste fresh," said Mr. Goodbody.

And that brings up the all-important question—what cigars to give? The "usual" Xmas cigars just won't do. Remember—what men say is that they prefer "a box of fresh cigars!"

When you give a box of Dutch Masters to relatives, or friends, or customers—you know you are giving cigars that are fresh—judged by men's own standards of what makes a fine smoke.

For Dutch Masters brings to all men the smoke-pleasure that only men working in a cigar-factory used to have—the thrill of smoking a cigar when it's fresh-made, when its aroma and mellowness are at their best. Dutch Masters' amazing new "Cold-Treatment" process makes this possible.

This process selects a Dutch Masters Cigar just as it comes from the machine—just at the precise moment when the fine tobaccos are at their fresh Peak of Perfection....

And then, by this exclusive "Cold-Treating" method, seals that fresh aroma within the cigar itself! And it is retained there—until the lighted match releases it in long, smooth puffs of fresh-aroma smoke!

Because of "Cold-Treatment", Dutch Masters cigars are as superior to ordinary cigars as fresh fruit is superior to dried fruit. You won't make a mistake by sending a smoking man a box of Dutch Masters for Christmas. In special Xmas wrappers, at the nearest cigar counter. Get yours to-day!

Dutch Masters are manufactured by the Consolidated Cigar Corp., New York, N. Y., and distributed by...

CHARITY'S A NEW STORY FOR THE SMITH FAMILY

Father Long Jobless—That Tells the Tale.

It isn't a very shabby street where the Smith family live. We will call them that, although it isn't their name. If you were shown the neat two flat apartment building where the Smith occupy the first floor you might ask with some show of surprise "How can a family needing Good Fellow aid live in as pleasant a house as this?"

But you wouldn't make that inquiry after stepping into the well kept house and being shown by Mr. and Mrs. Smith that stairstep of children from Elizabeth, 12 years old, down to black eyed Francis, 5 years old.

Nor would you have questioned further after Mr. Smith had told you how, since June, the railroad where he has worked for the last five years as a switchman, drawing good average wages, has diminished the number of his working days until last month he had only three days' work, and this month he earned but one day's pay of $6.62.

His First Appeal for Aid.

"I never asked for help before," says the slim, dark haired man of 45. "But I just had to when I saw my children start off to school in the rain without overshoes, and their clothing all outgrown. I've tried to get jobs to help out. I've been to the employment bureaus without success. I'm handy at machinery and I used to walk around and help out whenever I saw some one needed help about an automobile. But this month I haven't found any of that. I made $3.50 one day moving some furniture after a church bazaar."

Mr. Smith during the war was with the federal railroad administration in Washington, handling troop trains. He found time while there to study law for ten months at George Washington university. He came back to Chicago. He had a good job. He found a good neighborhood in which to rear his children. Then came the depression. The railroads began laying off the newer employés, then reducing the working time of the older employés.

Needs Help Till He Gets Job.

"No one could ever have made me believe the depression would be as bad for us fellows as this," Mr Smith said. "I never thought I would come to charity. And I don't want any more than I need. Just enough to tide me over until I come back to steady work again."

The father called to his second daughter, Gertrude, 10 years old, who was playing with her sisters and brother in the back part of the house.

"She's been in the hospital with inflammatory rheumatism," he explained. "There's something the matter with her hip, but the doctor thinks that she can be taken care of. I'm having to spend a lot of time drilling her in her studies so that she can go back to school after Christmas."

Other misfortunes visiting this family came out in Mr. Smith's story. His own illness of pneumonia last winter when the doctor had to work hard to pull him through. And only last month Mrs. Smith's sister, who had been helping a little when she could, was killed in an automobile accident, and her husband with her.

Good Fellows to the Rescue.

The Smiths told of their gratitude for the help that began coming a few days ago from the Good Fellows through the United Charities. When THE TRIBUNE social service worker who makes investigations for the Good Fellows first called, the Smiths were in need of coal. The United Charities provided this.

"It came almost quicker than if we had ordered it ourselves," Mr. Smith declared. "Then yesterday some ladies who said they were from a Bible class brought us a large order of groceries. There was everything we ordinarily use, plenty of cereal and dried fruits which we have always provided for the children. I don't see how we would have got along with Good Fellow help."

New Chimes to Ring Christmas Eve

TALKIE BY OTTO SCRAPPED; HIS LANGUAGE IS BAD

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 20.—(AP)—A talking picture film in which the Archduke Otto sent Christmas greetings to Hungarians loyal to his cause has been scrapped because he did not speak Hungarian sufficiently well, said a message received here today from Steenockerzeel, Belgium, where he is living in exile.

Hungarian legitimists recently obtained funds from the government propaganda appropriation to make the film illustrating the young archduke's life in Belgium. It concluded with speeches by Otto in both Hungarian and German.

While Otto's German was perfect, his Hungarian would not be understood by "the man in the street" in Budapest. It had been considered doubtful whether the government would have permitted the importation of the film, as it was feared it might create disorders.

Ludlow Wins Contest Over Indiana Congress Seat

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—(AP)—The house today adopted the report of an election committee declaring Representative Ludlow was entitled to retain his seat from the Seventh Indiana district.

YULETIDE SONGS GREET SHOPPERS IN LOOP DISTRICT

Children of Playgrounds Offer Programs.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Snowflakes were sifting down yesterday upon Michigan boulevard as the clear, sweet voices of a children's chorus wafted up toward the skyscraper towers the old, traditional Christmas melodies from the Venetian court in the Fine Arts building. Heard but unseen, the carolers brought a softening touch to the intent faces of Christmas shoppers hurrying along the streets, and men and women slackened their steps to listen, then hurried on, humming the old familiar tunes as they boarded busses or bounded up the steps to the elevated.

Taught in the parks and playgrounds by instructors of the Civic Music association, the children came yesterday from their various centers to present four programs of the carols, as has become the custom during the last few years.

Other Groups Sing.

Other groups gathered in the Blackstone court of the Art Institute, in the Lyon and Healy store and in the lounge of the Stevens hotel, to sing the same songs under different directors. Misses Jessie Olin, Helen Wheeler, and Marion O'Connor handled the batons.

Among the carolers were youngsters from Calumet, Tuley, Grand Crossing, Bessemer, Sherman, and Hamilton parks; from Cornell square, Gomers school and the Chicago Nursery and Half Orphan asylum.

On Christmas eve Chicagoans in the vicinity of the new fieldhouse in Lincoln park near Waveland avenue will hear the carols played for the first time on the new $50,000 chimes, the gift of Mrs. Anna Wolfart. They will begin at 5 o'clock and will be heard over a mile radius, it is estimated.

Toys for Hospital Children.

Lincoln park commissioners also invite the public to inspect the orchid and poinsettia exhibit in the conservatory, as a different type of holiday greeting. Many varieties will be shown in the collection arranged by Arie Smith, superintendent. The exhibit will end Jan. 4.

Last year the Women's Progressive Club of Chicago provided toys for 200 sick and crippled children in the county hospital, and when they discovered their remembrances were the only ones received, resolved to do better than that by the children this year. Yesterday members gathered at the Sherman hotel and filled sufficient stockings for the small inmates with tys, fruit and candy, to be distributed next Wednesday. Mrs. I. G. Spitzer is chairman of the committee.

Due to the thoughtfulness of Junior Red Cross members, 15,000 Christmas cards distributed to war veterans in the hospitals will be mailed today to relatives, buddies and friends of the former service men. Each hospitalized veteran was given three cards, with envelopes and stamps, that he might remember his closest associates.

Olivet Institute Gives Parties.

Olivet institute is enjoying a week of festivities which will last through Christmas day and include every one in the classes and clubs, from tiny tots to grandmothers. Parties are scheduled for the kindergarten, the girls, the women, the Vedder street center and other groups. Nearly 1,500 children will have their only Christmas celebrations at the institute. On Wednesday night the public will be admitted to a pageant to be given in the Vedder street center.

Christmas eve the South Shore Infant Welfare will have a party at the Russell Square station, 85th street and South Shore drive. There will be a distribution of Christmas gifts.

The Christmas concert which was to be given in the Croatian Brotherhood hall at 1802 South Racine avenue today by the Rev. Father Henry has been postponed until Jan. 25. The concert will be at 3 p. m. and will be followed by a dance on that date.

Cermak Is Santa Claus.

Anton Cermak, president of the county board, was the Santa Claus who yesterday provided Christmas celebrations for two large groups of children, 1,500 of whom were gathered at the 45th ward headquarters at 1114 Diversey parkway and 200 at the Coer Copernicus Day nursery, 3217 South Morgan street.

Toys, games and a large Christmas tree featured the festivities at the 45th ward gathering. At the day nursery each child was presented with a gift and also received a Christmas stocking. Mrs. Clara Beesley, secretary to Mr. Cermak, supervised the activities at the nursery, and Charles H. Weber was master of ceremonies at the 45th ward party.

MAITLAND, NOTED FOR HAWAIIAN FLIGHT, TO FACE COURT MARTIAL

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 20.—[U. P.]—Lieut. Lester J. Maitland, 32, who won world fame in 1927 with Lieut. A. F. Hagenberger by flying from San Francisco to Honolulu, will be tried by an army court martial at Kelly field, Monday, on charges of violating the ninety-fifth article of war, it was learned today.

Maitland is accused of becoming drunk and misbehaving while in a San Antonio hospital.

Maitland holds the distinguished flying cross. He was born in Wisconsin and has been a commissioned officer since May, 1918.

PLEA CUTS GAMBLING FINE.

A $50 fine was whittled to $35 yesterday by Judge Leon Edelman in the Town Hall court when Italo Baldassari, 47 years old, charged with operating a gambling game in his restaurant at 1800 Addison street, pleaded he had only $45.

Hand Grenade Found in Stairway of Hotel

A hand grenade was found yesterday on the stairway of the Le Grand hotel, 410 North Wells street, by Le Roy C. Royer, a construction foreman, supervising remodeling of the building. A wire was attached to the detonating trigger. Police learned that the building had been bombed last August, but it was believed the bomb was intended for a tenant who ran a restaurant at the time. Both the construction company and the owners of the hotel denied that they had had labor trouble and could give no reason for the bomb.

3 Chicagoans to Appear in Princeton Show Here

Three students from the Chicago area will appear in "The Tiger Smiles," production of the Princeton Triangle club, which will be presented at the Chicago Civic Opera house next Friday. They are James H. Breasted, son of Prof. J. H. Breasted, of the University of Chicago; Seymour Morris, son of F. Thomas Morris, 1170 Westmoor road, Winnetka, and C. H. CUT OF $250,000 IN JURY COST IS SEEN IN NEW YEAR

Advisory Council Reports on Court Savings.

The Cook county judicial advisory council yesterday announced that approximately $250,000 will be saved on jury costs in the Criminal court in the coming year by means of reforms introduced by the council. The announcement is to be embodied into a report to the county board.

The estimate is based on the results of new jury methods used during the last three months. Further savings are to result in the civil branches of the state courts and in the Municipal courts. Members of the council are Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan, Circuit Judge Harry Fisher, Justice Frederick R. De Young, and Attorneys J. Healy and Amos Miller.

Three Reforms Make Savings.

The most notable of the council's savings were made possible through a test case in the Supreme court, which permits a defendant to waive a trial by jury through the establishment of the office of public defender and through the reduction in the size of the jury panel for each judge. These were introduced with the cooperation of the Illinois judicial advisory council.

During the spring term of the Criminal court each judge had a monthly jury panel of 65 men, or a total of 780 jurors for the court. The council advised a cut to 40 jurors a judge. So that in the first three months of the fall session there were only 320 jurors a month. The cut in panels was accentuated by a reduction of the number of judges to eight, made possible under the other reforms.

Fisher Points to Swifter Justice.

"The reforms have reduced the time between indictment and trial," said Judge Fisher. "Last spring the average was near seventy days, while in the last three months the average has fallen to less than twenty days. Of twenty cases before me last Friday all the defendants had been indicted within ten days.

"Other notable service of the council has been a reduction in the county jail population and a 25 per cent cut of the number of pending indictments in the last three months, as compared with the corresponding months in 1929.

"The council is achieving its aim—to speed justice and make it more effective. The result is markedly apparent in three months and will be more so at the end of a year. Beyond the single item of $250,000 in one court the council will undoubtedly be instrumental in effecting a saving of at least $1,000,000."

THREATENS WRIT PLEA TO ENFORCE COUNTY MILK BID

The county board yesterday was threatened with mandamus proceedings to compel the letting of a contract for milk for county institutions to the Wagner Dairy company. The public service committee of the board rejected the low bids of the Wagner company on Friday because the company employs nonunion help. The company was told that if it unionized its drivers it might have the contract.

Joseph Wagner, head of the company, which has offices in Cicero, also criticized the tactics of the unions. "I am for union labor," he said. "I never did oppose it and I am willing to unionize. Our men were expelled from the union because the Pure Milk association and the larger companies did not want us to take any business away from other companies.

"I called up a union official today about it and he informed me he would see me when he had time. I cannot see that the county board has any legal right to reject any bids because a company is union or nonunion. Since I am willing to submit to the conditions of the county board I will start mandamus proceedings if we do not get the contract."

RESTAURANT OWNER ROBBED.

Jack Biancalana, owner of a restaurant at 222 West Illinois street, was robbed of $460 yesterday by two men who forced his automobile to the curb at Des Plaines and Ohio streets. Biancalana was taking the money to a bank when robbed.

Becomes Bride

Mrs. Alexander Jerrems Jr.

The marriage of Miss Lillian O'Leary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. O'Leary of 1500 Lake Shore drive, to Alexander Nicoll Jerrems Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander N. Jerrems, 5327 Harper avenue, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the apartment of the bride's parents. Only members of the families were present.

The bride wore an ivory satin gown with a train and a Brussels point lace veil which was worn by her sisters, Mrs. Ross Byron [Alice O'Leary] and Mrs. Lewis Waldo King [Dorothy O'Leary] at their weddings. She carried a bouquet of white roses and gardenias. Her maid of honor, Mrs. William Jarmleh Kelly, wore a Patou pink lace gown and held a bouquet of talisman roses and blue iris. W. W. Sears served as best man for the groom. The bride is a graduate of Smith college. Mr. Jerrems attended the University of Chicago and is a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. After Jan. 15 they will reside at 7827 South Shore drive.

300,000 CHINESE TROOPS SURROUND RED BANDIT HORDE

Chiang Leads Drive to End Terrorism.

SHANGHAI, China, Dec. 20.—[U. P.]—Government armies under leadership of Chiang Kai-shek, head of the Nationalist régime, closed in today on bandit and communist bands which for months have plundered and killed in the southern interior provinces.

Gen. Chiang reported to the authorities at Nanking that his 300,000 troops had surrounded all communist forces in the three distressed provinces of Hupeh, Hunan and Kiangsi, assuring "speedy eradication" of outlawry in the region.

Red Army Fleeing.

Gen. Chiang's message said he hoped to return soon to Nanking to give his attention to civil affairs. It was believed the Red army was fleeing to Ting-Chow, in the mountains of a coastal province. He also reported that Chumo, notorious bandit leader, who gathered a great force to ravage the interior cities under a policy of terrorism and slaughter, and other bandit chieftains were trapped by the government armies.

The possibility that Gen. Chiang has crushed the outlaw forces of the province held the hope of cessation of internal strife on a large scale for the first time since before the civil war started last spring.

Tells Brutality of Bandits.

The brutality of the bandits was described today by Father Brugnetti of the Milan mission, who was held captive for fifty-eight days.

Father Brugnetti, who has been in the region for thirty-one years, and Father Marchesini were held captive along with 1,800 Chinese hostages, most of whom were killed. He said about 30 prisoners were killed every day in the bandit camp during his period of captivity.

He said sometimes the victims were killed, but on other occasions they used the most terrible methods, such as hurling the captives into large trenches, where they were buried alive.

NEW GUATEMALA CHIEF TELLS WHY ARMY NOW RULES

Forced Out Usurper Who Violated Constitution.

Gen. Manuel Orellana, newly selected provisional president of Guatemala, in a message today said his government had been instituted purely to uphold a constitutional régime in his country. He announced his intention to maintain liberty and constitutional rights and to return to normal government as soon as possible.

BY GEN. MANUEL ORELLANA.
[Provisional President of Guatemala.]

PRESIDENTIAL PALACE, GUATEMALA CITY, Dec. 20.—(AP)—I am pleased indeed to avail myself of the opportunity given me to explain the motives behind the military movement that brought about the resignation of President Baudulio Palma on Dec. 16 and my subsequent induction to the executive mansion of Guatemala.

The movement was the direct consequence of an usurpation of the presidency of the republic by Dr. Baudilio Palma on Dec. 12. Dr. Palma is a relative and dear friend of the constitutional president, Gen. Lazaro Chacon, now ill in bed. He was the second designate to the presidency, which is our term for the second vice president. The first designate, or first vice president, was Gen. Mauro de Leon, who held at the same time the war portfolio under President Chacon.

Violated Constitution.

When President Chacon took ill suddenly, Dr. Palma, taking advantage of his kinship to the president, started a vast intrigue aiming at placing the country under the control of the Conservative party. He persuaded the ministers to name him president, although the constitution provides that in the absence of the president the first designate should fill his place. He then, using coercion, obtained the necessary legalization from congress to assume the reins of government.

But the constitution of Guatemala provides that only in the case of the death of the president may the council of ministers call upon the first designate to assume charge, and should the first designate be unavailable, then the second designate is called upon. Dr. Palma, however, tried to evade the spirit of the constitution by saying that article 69 justified him in assuming charge. Article 69, however, provides that when the president is ill or absent, he himself will with the sanction of congress, appoint his substitute.

Dr. Palma did not consult President Chacon. Neither did he have President Chacon's sanction or the unfettered expression of congress to assume the presidency. As a matter of fact, Dr. Palma's act was the equivalent of a coup d'etat and he became the de facto president.

The three liberal parties represented in congress registered their protest against this usurpation and sent a delegation to the first designate who had been virtually arrested in his own house under Dr. Palma's orders. Dr. Palma summoned the delegation and told its members that he was de facto president. The delegation then attempted to return to congress, but the presidential police prevented them from attaining their aim.

Army Defends Constitution.

The army, which is sworn to obey the constitution and to see that it is obeyed, had no other alternative but to force Dr. Palma to live up to the spirit and the letter of the constitution. The army, therefore, proceeded to establish a new provisional government, and I was honored with the chief post, in a temporary character.

The aims of my government are to maintain peace and order above all things; to maintain liberty and guarantee the rights provided by our constitution to all Guatemalan citizens, including the right to the free public expression of all thoughts; to continue the good relations which happily Guatemala maintains with all other countries of the world, and in a special way with the great American nation, to return to the constitutional president the power as soon as he is capable of assuming office, or should he be unable to do so, to call and hold free elections, guaranteeing the free exercise of absolute suffrage to all qualified. To achieve these ends I count upon the support of the army and my co-citizens in general.

Bank Stock Willed Them; Assessment Now in Order

Warsaw, Ind., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Robert Lyons Sr., professor of chemistry at Indiana university, and Robert Lyons Jr., his son, have received a legacy that has proved a liability. Mrs. Phoebe Courson willed them each five shares of stock in the Citizens' State bank of Lagro. Now Lyons and his son are compelled to pay an assessment on the stock, the Lagro bank having passed into the hands of a receiver.

STEALS SHOES FOR MOTHER-IN-LAW; HE GOES FREE

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 20.—[U. P.]—"Why did you steal them?" the manager of a downtown department store asked a shoplifter today after his arrest for stealing a pair of women's shoes.

"I've been out of work eight months," the shoplifter answered, displaying a building trades union card.

"Who did you steal them for?" the manager asked.

"I wanted to give my mother-in-law a Christmas present," the man replied.

"Greater love hath no man," said the manager. "You may go."

New Wabash Avenue Bridge Is Opened to Traffic

WABASH AVENUE BRIDGE OPENED TO LOOP TRAFFIC

Widened La Salle Street Also Put in Use.

The new Wabash avenue bridge, which will relieve the congestion on the Michigan avenue span and carry part of the State street traffic while a new bridge is being constructed there, was formally opened yesterday. At the same time the newly widened section of La Salle street, between the river and Lincoln park, also was thrown open to traffic.

The celebration was attended by the cutting of ribbons by Mayor Thompson after a parade south in La Salle street from Lincoln park to Wacker drive and then east to the Wabash avenue bridge. There the celebration was made the occasion for political speeches to the scores of city hall pay rollers who had ridden in the parade.

New North Outlet from Loop.

The new bridge connects the former terminus of Wabash avenue at Wacker drive to the north side at Cass street, which was rechristened North Wabash avenue by the city council. It provides a new outlet to the north from the loop and the La Salle street widening provides an improved thoroughfare to the north which is expected to relieve traffic on Clark street.

Construction of the north viaduct approach to the bridge has been accompanied by charges of irregularities in the letting of the contracts. The charges are directed against Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, by an aldermanic committee which is conducting an investigation. Wolfe testified recently before the committee on efficiency, economy, and rehabilitation after twice failing to respond to a summons to appear.

Call for Wolfe Again.

Since then a demand has been made for his recall before the committee, as Ald. Arthur F. Albert [43d] declares that city hall records contradict Wolfe's statements to the aldermen. Wolfe said he did not know of additional work on the viaduct until "about Oct. 1." Ald. Albert says the records imply that Wolfe had knowledge two months before that date.

The additional work has resulted in bills being presented to the city for the payment of $161,000 in excess of what would have been charged had the contract been let to the low bidder. The Ketler-Elliott company got the contract, under which it charged $10 a cubic foot for caisson excavations below a depth of 75 feet. The low bidder, the E. J. Albrecht company, offered a price of $2.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Yesterday's TRIBUNE described Daniel S. Beebe as former president of the Vitrolite company. George R. Meyercord, president of the company since its inception twenty-five years ago, says Mr. Beebe was formerly manager.

Denial is made by Mrs. B. Rannells, connected with the management of the Airdrie apartments, 923 Airdrie place, that George Dixon, wounded burglar, ever lived at the hotel, as stated in THE TRIBUNE Friday. The address was furnished by police.

Incubator Baby Weighs 1 Pound 12½ Ounces

What is believed to be the smallest human being in existence now occupies an incubator at the Presbyterian hospital. Baby Rubins, a son born prematurely to Italian parents living on the west side of the city, is the tiniest baby but one ever born at the hospital. He weighed only two pounds one and three-quarter ounces at birth. His weight fell to one pound 11½ ounces, and now at the age of two weeks, by dint of careful nursing, he weighs one pound 12½ ounces. He is fed with a medicine dropper and is normal in all respects except weight. Authorities at the hospital say that the smallest baby ever born there, weighing one pound and twelve ounces, now is three years old and weighs fifteen pounds.

Honor 49 Workers Whose Service Totals 1,500 Years

Forty-nine employés of the Borden's Farm Products Company of Illinois, whose combined service with the company approximates fifteen centuries, last night were given gold service emblems by President F. D. Walmsley at a banquet at the Palmer house.

FRENCH LAUNCH SUBMARINE, FIRST OF CLASS OF 12

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LE HAVRE, France, Dec. 20.—The submarine Amphitrite, the first of a series of twelve, was launched today. Two others of the same class, the Diane and Meduse will soon be completed and the Orphée is under construction.

The submarines are of the coastal defense mine laying type and of 635 tons displacement on the surface and 809 tons submerged. They will have a 3,000 mile cruising radius at 10 knots and can remain under water for 78 miles going at 5 knots before coming to the surface. Another boat of this class will be laid down in the berth vacated by today's launching.

The French line today began the construction of the world's largest motorship, a 29,000 ton vessel, which will be christened Champlain. It will be 630 feet long and be used for cabin passenger service to New York. Its 25,000 horsepower Diesel engines are expected to give the liner a speed of 20 knots, permitting a voyage in seven days. The vessel will have two funnels like the German boats.

YOUNG MANVILLE IS DIVORCED BY WIFE IN NEVADA

Reno, Nev., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Thomas F. Manville Jr., millionaire heir of the Manville estate, was divorced here today by Lois Arline McColn Manville, former stenographer to the late Thomas F. Manville, president of the Johns-Manville company.

Mrs. Manville, second wife of the younger Manville, won her divorce on grounds of desertion.

Papers covering a property settlement were sealed, but it was said Mrs. Manville will get an income of $1,000 a month.

Manville married his father's stenographer Sept. 30, 1925, in New York. The complaint charged desertion on Nov. 15, 1926. Manville had previously been divorced by Florence Huber, Follies girl.

Mrs. Manville came here three months ago and has been lavish in entertaining.

Manville Jr., said to have inherited $10,000,000 from his father's estate, is not connected with the Johns-Manville company.

DECLARES 'L' GETS BEST OF CAR FINANCING

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Arthur T. Galt made an attack yesterday on the proposed financial plan to consolidate the surface and elevated lines into one transportation company. He charged that Halsey, Stuart & Co., consolidation managers, have discriminated against the security holders of the Chicago Railways company—the west and north side surface lines—for the benefit of the security owners of the elevated roads.

Mr. Galt is a large holder of the Chicago Railways company participation certificates, series No. 2, which get an interest in the new transit company after series No. 1 is taken care of. The holders of series No. 1 are dissatisfied and charge that the financial setup is unfair and inequitable.

Says Holdings Have Value.

"My holdings in the Chicago Railways company represent real money and they are still of tangible value," said Mr. Galt in his statement. "There is approximately $20,000,000 of equity in the Chicago Railways company, over and above the bonded indebtedness.

"This equity belongs to me and my associate participation certificate holders. The financial plan transfers nearly all of that equity from us to others.

"It is easy to show the unfairness of the proposed financial plan. In the creation of the Railways company, under the 1907 ordinance, a nominal capitalization was decided upon; but the real capitalization was the participation certificates, totaling 265,100 parts.

"Of these, 30,800 certificates were classified as No. 1 and given certain priorities, and 124,300 certificates were classed as No. 2 and called for $8 cumulative dividends annually for each certificate. The remaining 110,000 certificates are classified as series No. 3 and series No. 4. Dividends were paid for a time on series No. 1 and No. 2, but No. 2 has received nothing in 20 years except $6 in all for each certificate.

Origin of No. 2 Certificates.

"The certificates No. 2 were given in exchange for old North Chicago and West Chicago Street railway stock, which had been guaranteed 12 per cent for the North Chicago stock and 6 per cent for the West Chicago stock by the Union Traction company.

"This stock was considered a perfectly safe guaranteed security by banks at that time and was bought by me and other investors looking for the safest kind of investment at the recommendation of the leading banks of the city.

"I know it was recommended by the banks as being a safe investment for women, many of whom still own the stock. I know of one woman who still owns the participation certificates she obtained for stock for which she paid $200 a share.

"The money invested in these certificates built the foundation of the transportation system of the west and north sides, and thereby substantially aided in the development and growth of Chicago."

Makes Discrimination Charge.

Switching to the financial plan directly, Mr. Galt said:

"In my opinion, the financial setup discriminates against the Chicago Railways company. An unwarranted preference is given to the bonds and common stock of the elevated roads. Then, too, the stock of the Chicago City Railway—the south side surface lines—is given an undue advantage over the participation certificates of the Railways company.

"The common stock of the elevated lines, which has never earned a dividend, is recognized for about its par value. I believe it has only a small value at best. On the other hand, $3,372,232 of the lowest rank of securities are set aside for all of the stockholders of the Railways company.

Plan Inequitable, He Declares.

"This means, if that scheme goes through, that the investors whose money helped to build Chicago on the north and west sides will be practically frozen out, as the stock offered them seems worth very little, even according to the proponents of the plan.

"I ask any fair-minded person if such treatment can—by the widest stretch of the imagination—be considered honest or equitable.

"The Chicago Railways company has an earning capacity of nearly 7 per cent upon its invested capital; the elevated only a fraction of that amount. Such a proposal as has been made by Halsey, Stuart & Co. shows its partiality on its face. It is an effort to take the property of the stockholders of the Railways company and subordinate it to the advantage of the bond and stock holders of the elevated railways."

Actress Sues Police

EDITH RANSOM.

Miss Ransom alleged she was humiliated by her arrest for safe keeping when she landed in Seattle from the orient in October. The actress, said by police to have been in a nervous condition, was turned over by the Travelers' Aid society to the county hospital and later was arrested and held by police. She obtained her release through a habeas corpus order.

SUBWAY PROTEST DEFERRED

The filing of the property owners' protest against the city plans for the State street subway was again deferred yesterday, this time until tomorrow—the last day on which it can be effective. In an effort to revise the plans to meet the desires of the State street property owners, who are asked to pay 65 per cent of the subway cost, the owners, the city representatives, engineers, and other experts met yesterday morning and afternoon.

It was reported that a tentative agreement was reached on a majority of the differences, but that on some major changes—such as another station at Huron street or Superior street—the property owners were not satisfied.

In addition the property owners say they want assurances, other than oral pledges from public officials who may be out of office when the subway is built, that the changes agreed upon will be made. Legal opinions differ on what modification can be made under the ordinance passed.

New Conference Today.

Attorney Walter L. Fisher, who has been in Boston, and Robert Ridgway of New York, chief engineer, will arrive in Chicago this morning. At 10 o'clock they and the city's other lawyers and engineers will go into session at Mr. Fisher's office, in the hope that an agreement with the property owners can be reached. The property owners scheduled their next session for 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The difficulty arises from the fact that the subway plans were put through the board of local improvements and the city council before the property owners, in their opinion, had ample opportunity to study them and make their suggestions.

TRACTION LINES BRING FINANCIAL LOAD TO DETROIT

Dtroit, Mich., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—That the Detroit street railways have never operated upon a money making basis, but that the financial statements which have been given out during the nine years of municipal operation presented an inaccurate picture of the system's financial status, was revealed today in the fact that the sinking fund is not sufficient to meet outstanding debts. It is the showing of nine years of M. O. [municipal operation].

The fund to meet the final payment to the old Detroit United Railway, due a year from now, will probably be $5,000,000 less than the sum required.

To solve this predicament, Mayor Murphy plans to abrogate the contract entered into with the Detroit United railway and which called for the payment of $19,850,000 over a 10 year period, and to issue bonds with which to make up the deficiency in the sinking fund, appropriations to which should have been made each month during the decade. The issuance of the bonds will bring the city's investment in the system to more than $60,000,000.

3 MISSISSIPPI BANKS CLOSE; 4 MORE SUSPEND

State Takes Charge to Protect Patrons.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Three banks in Mississippi were closed today and placed in charge of the state banking department, and four others announced temporary suspension.

Those taken over by the banking department were the Wilson Banking company at Greenwood, The Commercial bank at Drew, and The Bank of Pheba, at Pheba.

Simultaneously, came announcements that the Greenwood Bank and Trust company, the First National bank and the Security Bank and Trust company, all at Greenwood, had closed temporarily as a protective measure.

The other bank closing temporarily was the bank of McLain at McLain. A representative of the state banking department was sent there to make an audit after Willie Griffis, the bank's president explained that O. B. Reed, the cashier, had admitted "a discrepancy" in his books and asked to be arrested. Officials at Greenwood said the Wilson Banking company was closed because of the recent death of G. A. Wilson Sr., chairman of the board.

Macedonia Bank Closed.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Closing of Macedonia State bank of Macedonia in Hamilton county was announced by the state auditor this morning.

Withdrawals Cause Closing.

Cairo, Ill., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Inability to collect on loans fast enough to meet withdrawals caused the closing of the Farmers and Merchants State bank at Cypressen, Johnston county, D. C. Casper, president, stated.

Georgia Bank Suspensions.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 20.—(AP)—A. B. Mobley, state superintendent of banks, announced today his department had been asked to take over the affairs of the Union Banking company of Douglas, operating branches at Braxton and Nichols; the Toombs County bank at Lyons, and the Citizens bank of Ray City.

Allied Banks Suspend.

Goldsboro, N. C., Dec. 20. — (AP) — Two Goldsboro banks, both under the same management, failed to open today. Notices said the institutions had been closed in the interests of depositors.

The National bank of Goldsboro listed deposits of $382,150, and resources of $623,663. The bank is capitalized at $100,000. The Goldsboro Savings and Trust company, an affiliated institution, had deposits of $226,413 and resources of $286,491. It is capitalized at $41,000. G. A. Norwood is president of both banks and two sons are cashiers.

Another Carolina Bank Closes.

Rural Hall, N. C., Dec. 20.—(AP)—The Rural Hall Bank and Trust company did not open for business today. E. L. Kiser is president.

Bruised in 5 Story Fall; Goes Right Back to Work

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Eugene D'Hulla, window washer at the Phelan building here, fell five stories from a window ledge today and escaped with a bruise on the chin. He went back to work immediately. The workman struck a steel screen over a court.

15 CHARITIES GET 4½ MILLIONS OF HUBERT ESTATE

New York, Dec. 20.—[Special.]—The first fifteen of the thirty-three institutions designated by the "committee of citizens," consisting of former President Coolidge, former Gov. Smith, and Julius Rosenwald, to receive three-fourths of the residuary of the estate of the late Conrad Hubert are now receiving their money, a total of $4,600,000, Samuel K. Abrahams, attorney for the trustees of the estate, revealed today.

Decree Is Signed.

He said that New York County Surrogate James A. Foley had signed on last Wednesday a decree in the trustees' accounting, in which he directed that the payments be made to the institutions.

The fifteen comprise the group which the committee recommended receive the $4,600,000 and get their share first, he said. The next $1,000,000 realized from liquidation of the assets will go to a second group, comprising eight institutions, he added, and a third group of ten is to receive the balance.

Mr. Abrahams said the total estate was somewhat in excess of $9,000,000.

Institutions Benefiting.

St. Vincent's hospital, $500,000; the Boy Scouts of America, $500,000; the Girl Scouts of America, $500,000; Provident hospital, Chicago, $500,000; Beekman Street hospital, $500,000; Children's Aid society, $200,000; American Red Cross, $375,000; Young Men's Christian association of Jersey City, $250,000; New York Foundling hospital, $50,000; International Migration Service, Inc., American branch, $50,000; Jewish Memorial Health society, $250,000; National Committee for Mental Hygiene, $250,000; Jewish Theological Seminary of America, $250,000; Young Men's Hebrew association of the City of New York, $175,000; New York university, $250,000.

THIRD PERIOD.
Scoring—Jackson [Clancy], 10:19.
Penalties—Marsh, Bailey, Cook.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Taking advantage of their opponents' penalties, the Toronto Maple Leafs broke their losing streak of three games and won a National Hockey league game here tonight from the somewhat roadweary Blackhawks, 3 to 1.

Toronto scored a goal in each period, while the best the Hawks could do was net one in the middle stanza. Bailey with two goals starred for the Leafs, while Gottselig, Couture and Ripley stood out for the Hawks. March turned in a useful effort, as also did Cook, who scored Chicago's lone tally. Jackson was responsible for the Leafs' final tally after Clancy had made a spectacular dash and shot, Jackson ramming home the rebound.

Score With Hawks One Shy.

The game was fast throughout with wide open hockey the rule. The Leafs had a slight edge in the first period, Chicago a substantial margin the second. Two of the Leafs' goals came when the Hawks were one man shy.

Blair missed Clancy's rebound off Gardiner's pads soon after play started. Clancy's shot from the right had concluded a brilliant two man rush. A minute later Cotton coasted in alone and missed the net. In the subsequent attempts of the Chicago defense to clear, Bailey secured the puck and beat Gardiner for the first goal. The time was 3:55.

Play had been fast from the start and the Leafs had a decided edge in attacking strength by their ability to bore in. Clancy and Jackson both sailed past Abel and Wentworth, but Gardiner made good saves.

March Nearly Scores.

March almost scored a tying point midway in the period on a Vokes-March-Cook combination, but Chabot fell on the puck, and when the referee untangled the goalie the rubber was out of danger. The Toronto defense, however, halted most of the Hawk rushes before they became serious, and most of their shots failed to worry Chabot.

Gottselig took a shot at Chabot from close in, but the Leaf goalie was on his toes. Desultory play around midway occurred for a couple of minutes, with no threatening situation, long shots being the most used and always wide. Abel went down the right boards to test Chabot severely, and Day drew the first penalty.

Hawks Miss Chances.

Clancy beat Abel and Wentworth on a smart solo rush, but Gardiner saved. The teams were even when March went to the penalty box for tripping. Vokes brought Chabot to his knees on a brilliant individual play, and after leaving the box, March missed what appeared to be a certain goal by shooting wide just before the period ended.

The second period opened with a burst of speed. Abel just missed a pass from Gottselig. A rush by Bailey for the Leafs was followed by a dangerous Ripley-Gottselig combination, and Chabot had to make a brilliant save. After three minutes and 17 seconds, Abel carried the puck the length of the ice, barged past the defense, shot from the corner and Cook banged in the equalizer while Chabot was flat on the ice.

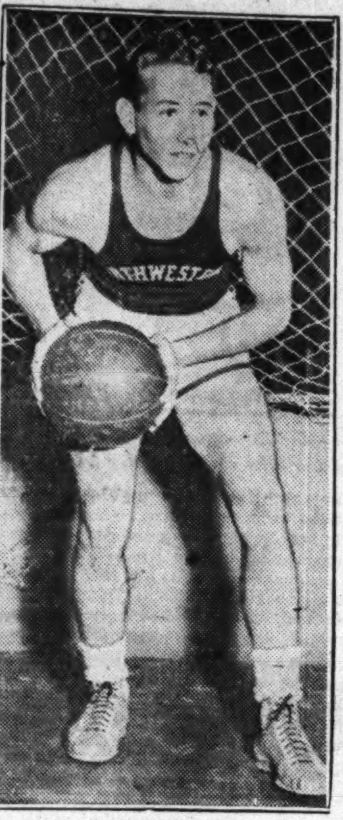
Players Chased for Feud.

Successive penalties to Bailey and Hamel kept the Leafs on the defensive. Then, when the Leafs came back to strength, Couture went off, and Toronto promptly seized the opportunity to score. A Day to Bailey pass brought the second Toronto goal. Horner and Dutkowski were banished for staging a bumping bee.

Chicago kept play in the Leafs' end, but could not beat Chabot. A penalty to Cook just before the period ended enabled the Leafs to get in some dangerous work, and Gardiner had to save sensationally at times. Cook still was in the pen when the third period started and Toronto was on the offensive. Gottselig, Couture and Ripley came on for the Hawks and made a sortie, but Chabot turned them back.

A brilliant Blair-Bailey rush just failed. Then March was penalized and a characteristic Clancy rush ended with Jackson netting the rebound to put the Leafs two goals ahead.

PURPLE STAR



BERT RIEL.

31 GAMES WILL KEEP CUBS BUSY ON TRAINING TRIP

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

While going through the process of training next spring the Cubs will not find time heavy on their hands. They'll be kept busy, also close to their work, by an extensive exhibition program, the details of which were announced yesterday by President William Veeck.

Thirty-one barnstorming engagements, not counting two in which the Goofs will engage, are listed for Rogers Hornsby's Regulars. In preparation for this the battery men will indulge in three weeks and the other members of the squad in two weeks of concentrated drill on the ball field at William Wrigley's personally owned Catalina island.

These arrangements were made in keeping with Manager Hornsby's idea that plenty of steady work, especially regular games, provides the surest way in which to put a ball team in trim for a summer of tough campaigning.

Departure Is Set Back.

Originally Hornsby intended to leave here Feb. 12 with his battery men, but this getaway has been set back to Feb. 14. The alteration was made because of the fact that the National league's annual schedule meeting will be called at New York Feb. 10 and both Veeck and Hornsby wish to attend the affair. They want to be there for the very good reason that purchases of talent even at that late date still will be possible. They haven't given up hope of having St. Louis accept their offer for Jim Bottomley.

The battery squad, with the possible addition of a couple of infielders or outfielders who might ask for the extra week of work, will be able to don uniforms for the first time Tuesday, Feb. 17. They will be joined on Feb. 24 by the regulars, who are scheduled to pull away from Chicago Feb. 21. Daily drills will be staged at the island camp until March 12, when all the ivory appurtenances, not to mention the ivory, will be hoisted aboard ship and sent to Los Angeles for the opener of the exhibition series on March 13.

Play in San Francisco.

For the first time in several years, the Cubs will spend some time in San Francisco. While there they will enjoy, among other things, four games with the Pittsburgh Pirates, who will train at nearby Paso Robles. The following week the same two teams will put on a three day show in Wrigley's million dollar park at Los Angeles.

The return jaunt from California will be broken up by a two day stop at Fort Worth, Tex., where the local leaguers will be engaged.

The tour will close with the customary four games at Kansas City, April 9 to 12. From there the Cubs will move toward Chicago to spend

N. U. GETS SCARE IN 31-22 VICTORY OVER CARLETON

Riel and Hails Pull Game from Fire.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Carleton College was Northwestern's third basketball victim last night at Patten gymnasium, 31 to 22, but the boys from Minnesota stormed the Purple defense in the second half so determinedly that many of the 2,500 revised their opinions of Northwestern strength which had been based on victories over Bradley Tech and Notre Dame.

Perhaps Carleton had been underrated. With Sam Perrin leading the attack while his mates clamped on a man to man defense, Carleton had the Wildcats on the edge of defeat until the final minutes.

Lockhart is Injured.

True, Frank Marshall, one of Northwestern's regular guards, did not play because of an infected ear, and Bob Lockhart, the mainspring of the Purple team, also was out of the lineup after the first ten minutes. Lockhart injured his right knee when he sprawled in a corner near his basket. He came back later, but only after substitute guards had assisted in manufacturing a victory.

When Lockhart left the game Northwestern was leading, 11 to 5. Bert Riel and Joe Reiff carried on to a half time score of 17 to 10. Reiff was the high scorer for the Purple in this period, with two field goals and four free throws. Apparently he was headed for another spectacular total, but Carleton's guards called halt, and Joe did not add another point in the remaining twenty minutes.

With Reiff so closely guarded by Nilsen and with Lockhart and Marshall off the floor Capt. Bert Reil furnished the scoring punch to stave off Carleton's threat. Reil added three field goals and a penalty toss in this second period to his 4 points of the first half. Moreover, it was Reil who on three occasions when Carleton's sharpshooters had advanced within 3 points of the Purple carried his team to comparative safety.

Hails Speeds Up Attack.

Thus, while Northwestern's floor game was sputtering along he, and, later Bobby Hails, by individual work offset team defects.

Perrin and Nilsen brought Carleton to a losing count of 17 to 14. Taylor missed an easy dribble in shot, and Arny fouled Riel. Bert scored for a 4 point advantage. From here the sharpshooters alternated, with Carleton trailing successively at 20 to 17, 22 to 19, and finally 23 to 20.

Then Hails, who had replaced Coleman, sped under the basket after receiving a pass from Riel, and Northwestern was on its way to decisive victory.

Moonshower followed with a long distance shot. Bob McGarns got another from the free throw circle, his third of the game, and Riel made Northwestern's final total 31 with a goal on a fast dribble in. In the meantime Taylor connected from far out for Carleton's last field goal.

McCarnes Jumps Center.

McCarnes was jumping at center last night with Reiff shifted to forward. Mac is the best jumper of the Purple five, but, like Reiff, plays forward after the tipoff. Reil and the guards handle the ball, feeding to these men, and while Coleman, Moonshower, Hails, and Farber, the substitute defense men are not the equals of Lockhart and Marshall, they played steady ball. MICHIGAN BEATS PENN

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Michigan won its third basketball victory of the season and gave Pennsylvania its third defeat in as many nights, tonight when the Wolverines defeated the Quakers by a 46 to 22 score. Michigan led from the start, running up nine points before the Quakers were able to score with a free throw. The score at half time was 24 to 13 in Michigan's favor.

The Wolverines used eleven men and the second string lineup outclassed Penn as much as the regulars. Daniels, with 15 points, Weiss with 11, and Eveland with 10, were Michigan's leading scorers while Altenhof stood out on defense.

Prager was the Quakers' chief scoring threat, shooting four baskets and one free throw. The victory was the third that Michigan has scored over Penn in the last three years. Lineups and summary:

Boys, Here's a Chance to Try Your Skill on a Pair of Skis

BY ARCH WARD.

This piece will interest boys under 18 who have yearned for a chance to show their skill on skiis in competition of their own class. It also will appeal to thousands who get a thrill out of watching a boy leap into space after coming down a long slide at breakneck speed.

THE TRIBUNE today announces its first annual ski meet. It will be held at Jacob Riis park, Fullerton and Mead avenues, on Sunday, Jan. 4.

Four years THE TRIBUNE has been promoting sport events calculated to improve the health of contestants and spectators. Its promotional program includes the Silver Skates carnival, the Golden Gloves boxing tournament, basketball school for boys, girls' and boys' golf tournaments, football contests and swimming meet.

Skiing New Competitive Sport.

Skiing is a newcomer from the competitive viewpoint in Chicago athletics. But it has made tremendous strides the last two or three years. Last winter the Northwest Park district, which will coöperate with THE TRIBUNE in presenting the meet on Jan. 4, put on a junior ski tourney which attracted nearly 70 contestants and 10,000 spectators. Previous to that most of the ski competition was limited to the Norge slide at Fox River Grove, Ogden Dunes or the Forest Preserves. There is no chance for an inexperienced jumper to win those events.

THE TRIBUNE has set an age limit of 17 in its meet because there are other contests for the older lads.

There will be two classes, one for boys under 14 and another for boys 14 to 17. Medals will be awarded to the first four in each division. Places will be determined by distance and form, the same as in the major tournaments. Judges will be provided by the Norge and Ogden Dunes Ski clubs.

Park Officials to Help.

Joseph F. Gubbins, president of the northwest park district; Eden T. Brekke, secretary, and Frank Kalteux, northwest district commissioner, will assist THE TRIBUNE A. A. in the promotion of the meet.

Competition is open to every boy under 18 who has the courage and skill to come down a slide 70 feet high.

Entries close at midnight Dec. 31. No post entries ever are accepted in TRIBUNE events. Clip out the entry blank in this edition, fill it out legibly and mail it to the Ski Editor of THE TRIBUNE.

Creighton's Speedy Offense Beats Pittsburgh, 22 to 18

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Flashing a fast breaking offense that centered around Van Ackeren, Creighton university tonight opened its basketball season by defeating Pittsburgh, 22 to 18. After a first half that saw Pitt and Creighton battle to an 8 to 8 score the Creighton cagers swept Pitt off its feet at the start of the second half to score 9 points while the Easterners were getting 2. Creighton easily held the advantage for the balance of the game.

Mohler Learns He Has One Too Many Fiancees

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Orville Mohler, quarter back on the University of Southern California football team, found himself embarrassed by too many fiancées this morning. First was a "reluctant confirmation" made by the 19 year old Spanish movie actress, Rosita Moreno, yesterday, that she would wed young Mohler three years from now after his graduation.

The announcement directed attention to Miss Gertrude Ross of Long Beach, 19 year old daughter of an Oklahoma oil man, who wears Mohler's fraternity ring. Mohler himself dropped out of sight, but telephoned statements to newspapers saying he expected to marry Miss Ross and was not engaged to Señorita Moreno.

"There was no intention to announce the engagement to Miss Ross until after Orv finished college, but the announcement of the actress made it necessary," Mohler's fraternity brothers explained.

Miss Ross is also a college student.

CROWLEY SIGNS TO REMAIN WITH MICHIGAN STATE

East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 20.—(AP)—James H. Crowley, football coach and one of the famous "four horsemen of Notre Dame," has signed a new three year contract to coach the Michigan State college team.

Announcement of the contract was made tonight at the annual football banquet by Robert S. Shaw, president of the college. The new contract starts Sept. 1, next.

The announcement set at rest rumors from many sources that Crowley would leave at the expiration of his old controct one year hence. His success here was said to have won bids from a number of colleges, Gonzaga of Spokane, Wash., being the most frequently mentioned.

SCHMELING WILL FIGHT ANY ONE; PREFERS SHARKEY

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—[U. P.]—Max Schmeling said tonight he would "prefer to fight Jack Sharkey than any other opponent who has been mentioned" as a contender for the heavyweight championship.

"However, I will accept any opponent named," Schmeling said. "I cannot reply to the New York state boxing commission's command that I fight Sharkey until I hear from Joe Jacobs, my manager. I expect the bout will be in New York."

Schmeling is getting into condition in a training camp near here.

Ohio State Ranks Fesler with Harley

Columbus, O., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Wesley Eugene Fesler, winner of the 1930 CHICAGO TRIBUNE award to the most valuable football player in the Big Ten, is one of the greatest all around players ever to wear the Scarlet and Gray of Ohio State university. Although he ended his football career this fall, the memory of Fesler long will be held by followers of Buckeye sports, for Fesler has been placed on a pedestal beside Charles [Chick] Harley, chief of Ohio's football heroes for many years.

The memory of Harley, especially to the undergraduate body, has been on the wane and Fesler has moved into the hearts of the Ohio students as their idol of college sport.

Which Was Greater?

Recently the question was raised: "Which was the greater athlete—Harley or Fesler?"

Ohio's coach, Sam S. Willaman, went so far as to say that Fesler was "Ohio State's greatest all around athlete."

The supporters of Harley took up the battle, and it waged for weeks. Debates were heard on each corner, in the barber shops, at the lunch table, wherever two football fans would meet.

But it was Fesler himself who put an end to the affair.

"Harley is my ideal of a football player. I have always looked up to him and he gets my vote. I guess that settles it," Wes said.

Fesler, who is 22 years old, is not a big athlete. His 175 pounds of brawn and muscle are packed into 5 feet 11 inches of stature, but his prowess on the football and basketball floor are well known to his opponents.

In fact Fesler appears small alongside his teammates, but when an opponent started the ball around the right end of the Buckeye line, Fesler was there, with but few slips, stopping everything sent his way.

He Gives Wilce Credit.

Another insight into the character of the Buckeye's "one man team," as he was dubbed during the year, was brought to light at the annual appreciation football banquet accorded the grid men following the regular season. Fesler had just been announced honorary captain of the 1930 eleven. He had played his last game for Ohio. He got up to accept the honor, and devoted his few words to bringing out the fact that he owed Dr. John W. Wilce, head football coach when Wes started his football career at Ohio State, for most of the success he had gained.

Although Fesler's football career is over, he still has a term of basketball and baseball to go through. He has been acting captain of the basketball team in the games so far this year.

VERSATILE OHIO ATHLETE WINS TRIBUNE AWARD

Wheeler, Michigan, Places Second.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Wesley Fesler of Ohio State university was the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team during the season of 1930.

That was the consensus of the twenty-three members of the board of award, invited by THE TRIBUNE to determine the question. Fesler is thus recipient of what is considered the greatest honor of the conference gridiron. Material recognition of this honor is THE TRIBUNE's seventh annual trophy—a sterling silver football, actual size, suitably engraved, and mounted on an ebony base.

Wheeler Places Second.

Second to Fesler was Jack Wheeler of Michigan, with Bob Clark of Northwestern and Clarence Munn of Minnesota tied for third. Others receiving ballots were Joe Zeller of Indiana, George Stears of Purdue, Stan Bodman of Illinois, and William Lusby of Wisconsin.

Four ballots are missing as the total is compiled, but as those ballots could not possibly change the result it was decided to make the announcement at this time so Fesler might regard the award as a Christmas present. Four other judges failed to denote their second choice, but that also could not by any possibility change the result.

With receipt of the first ballots it became apparent that the Ohio State end who played in the back field in later games of the season would be the overwhelming choice. In the back field he was passer, punter, and an effective ball carrier. Ohio State was a different eleven after this transfer. It tied Wisconsin and did not lose a game thereafter. These facts no doubt had an important bearing on the decision.

Wins by Record Margin.

Fesler was first choice of fifteen of the nineteen members of the board of award reporting. He was second choice of two of the four others. His total was 32, with 6 for Wheeler, 4 each for Clark and Munn, and the others scattering. This selection was by the widest margin in the history of THE TRIBUNE trophy, originated in 1924, when it was first won by Red Grange.

Under a change in the plan this season, choice for this honor was restricted to ten players, one from each eleven, chosen by their teammates as the most valuable to their respective teams. These players were:

Wesley Fesler, end, Ohio State.
Jack Wheeler, half back, Michigan.
Bob Clark, center, Northwestern.
Clarence Munn, guard, Minnesota.
Joe Zeller, guard, Indiana.
George Stears, guard, Purdue.
Stan Bodman, tackle, Illinois.
William Lusby, half back, Wisconsin.
Wally Knudson, full back, Chicago.
Oliver Sansen, half back, Iowa.

The purpose of THE TRIBUNE trophy is to reward a player in a manner he could not otherwise be honored. No attempt is made to pick the "greatest" player in the Big Ten, simply the player who has been of greatest value to his team in all departments. In casting its ballots, the committee of award is asked to consider not only actual performance, but also team loyalty, self-sacrifice, leadership, and sportsmanship.

Judges Know Inside Facts.

Makeup of the committee is such that men familiar with all phases of football make the choice. Certainly coaches know not only the merits of their own men but also of opponents whom their elevens face. Officials are right in the heart of the action on the playing field and see much not apparent to the stands. They observe blocking and interference as well as mere ball carrying.

It is perhaps notable, but without other significance, that representatives of the same university never have won the trophy twice. Yet there never has seemed a time when the trophy was being "passed around." The near unanimity of Fesler's selection certainly proves its merit.

Ohio Sets Presentation Date.

Presentation of the trophy will be made at a time and place to be named by Coach Willaman and Athletic Director St. John of Ohio State university. On previous occasions the presentation has been made between halves of a home basketball game in January, so the student body could pay additional tribute to its representative.

Members of the committee of award were: Coaches A. A. Stagg, Chicago; H. O. Crisler, Minnesota; Glen Thistlethwaite, Wisconsin; Harry Kipke, Michigan; Samuel Willaman, Ohio State; H. O. Page, Indiana; Noble Kizer, Purdue; Richard E. Hanley, Northwestern; Robert C. Zuppke, Illinois; A. Ingwersen, Iowa.

Officials: John J. Schommer, Fred H. Young, Frank E. Birch, Col. H. B. Hackett, Joe Magidsohn, H. L. Ray, James Masker, J. J. Lipp, Anthony Haines, and Jay Wyatt.

FIRING, HIRING OF COACHES TO BRING BIG TURNOVER

Dozen Major Colleges Get New Grid Directors.

New York, Dec. 20.—(AP)—As the result of shakeups already effected or in the process of taking place at least a dozen major colleges and universities will have new head football coaches in 1931.

It will mark one of the biggest turnovers in gridiron history, with such pillars of past and present fame as Harvard, Princeton, California, Pennsylvania, and Alabama feeling the effects of reorganization in football leadership.

Because of the turmoil involved, the shifts at Pennsylvania and California have attracted national interest. Candidates to succeed Ludlow Wray at Penn and Nibs Price at California have been nominated with considerable abandon. The prestige as well as the substantial remuneration attached to each of these posts has attracted a big field of contenders and the race still is understood to be wide open in both instances.

Looks Over Eastern Field.

California's graduate manager, W. W. Monahan, plans to look over the eastern field, which already has furnished the majority of big time coaching personnel for the Pacific coast area.

Unless some unforseen hitch dedevelops, Wallace Wade will transfer his responsibilities from Alabama to Duke next year, succeeding Jimmy Dehart. Both had great 1930 seasons. As a result, some regrets seem apparent on both sides as to the prospective shift, but Frank Thomas, assistant Georgia coach, already has been signed to replace Wade at Alabama and Dehart is going elsewhere.

Because of his fine work at Duke, Dehart's ability attracted considerable attention outside the Southern conference. His friends have heard he may be approached shortly during the coach conference in New York with a flattering offer, one that would move him into the front ranks.

Three Jobs Filled.

The jobs at Princeton, Harvard and West Virginia also have been filled. Bill Roper's successor at Jungletown is Al Wittmer, former assistant coach and also the Tiger basketball coach. Harvard, similarly, has elevated "Lightning Eddie" Casey, former all-American half back, to succeed Arnold Horween in charge of the Crimson forces next year. Ira Rodgers will be replaced by Earle Neale at West Virginia.

Iowa State, Gonzaga and Clemson have vacancies to fill. Noel Workman resigned at Iowa State after his teams lost 16 straight. Josh Cody quit unexpectedly at Clemson.

Glenn Thistlethwaite will continue at Wisconsin in spite of some rumors to the contrary. The University of California at Los Angeles also has been casting about for a successor to Bill Spaulding.

Dick Harlow, Western Maryland's highly successful coach, has been mentioned in connection with several vacant posts, including Pennsylvania, but it is understood he has a five year contract in his present position.

Sasse Satisfies Army.

Army is well satisfied with the first year under Maj. Ralph Sasse and the popular major undoubtedly will fill out a four year term of office as head coach. Already, however, it has been suggested that "Lighthorse Harry" Wilson, an assistant coach this year, is being groomed to take over the main job eventually.

Navy Bill Ingram, having rounded out a five year term at Annapolis, may be involved in a coaching shift, but no definite word has yet come from the Naval academy.

Of the coaches who took over new jobs this year, outstanding work has been turned in by John McEwan at Holy Cross, Lou Little at Columbia, Jimmy Phelan at Washington, and Clarence Spears at Oregon. With their systems taking hold, they expect to do even better in 1931.

23 PREP TEAMS ACCEPT BIDS TO STAGG TOURNEY

Twenty-three teams have accepted bids to the University of Chicago's Christmas week basketball tournament and Director A. A. Stagg is now selecting nine other teams from a large group of applications to complete the bracket of 32. The six teams which added yesterday to the seventeen previously admitted were Austin, Bowen, Thornton, Marshall, McKinley, and Riverside.

Play in the tournament opens Dec. 29, and will be held each afternoon and evening through Jan. 3. The contesting teams will be guests at the Chicago-Brigham Young game on Dec. 30, and also at the Ohio Wesleyan game of Jan. 3.

Kingsport Is Victorious in Havana Stake

HAVANA, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Kingsport, son of Brown Prince, racing for C. Bartsch, picked up this afternoon where he left off last spring and won the Inaugural handicap over a representative band of sprinters. He ran the five and one-half furlongs in 1:05 3-5. Kingsport showed the way to A. G. Tarns' San Carlos, while Film, from the Paradise Stock farm, was third. Kingsport was ridden by M. Rose. He paid 10 to 1.

A field of eleven started in this feature, and Kingsport was given but meager support.

Sensation in '29.

Kingsport was one of the sensations here last year. He improved steadily from his debut in the plater division and advanced to the ranks of handicap performers.

The field was well mannered at the post in the Inaugural. The start was a good one. Margaret Cal and Guilder essayed the lead and cut out a murderous pace for the others, but the effort told and they fell easy victims to Kingsport when they moved up on the inside rounding the stretch turn.

Through the final furlong Rose allowed the winner to draw away steadily, but had him under snug restraint. San Carlos showed a good effort. He was away slowly, closed considerable ground to be second, while Film, racing forward in the early stages, held on with good courage to take third.

Large Opening Crowd.

Racing was inaugurated this afternoon under ideal conditions. The track was at its best. Never in history had the grounds and stands appeared to better advantage. The crowd was exceptionally large and included the élite of Havana society. The American colony was well represented. Hundreds of tourists were noted in the crowd. Seven races were programmed for decision.

IMA DREAMER WINS

New Orleans, La., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Mrs. D. L. Keiffer's Ima Dreamer won the Press Gang handicap, six furlong feature, here today. His victory was somewhat of a reversal over his recent effort when he finished second to Bill Morris. Donny Johnny finished second and The Judge third.

Seven two year olds paraded for the event with Ima Dreamer the choice despite his recent defeat. Ima Dreamer, showing good speed, rushed into a long early lead. Yerrat, who had the mount, never let him stop.

He opened a five lengths lead in the first half mile, but in the stretch he began to tire and Donny Johnny closed some ground.

However, Ima Dreamer managed to stick it out to win by a length. Donny Johnny beat The Judge five lengths for the place. Ima Dreamer paid $4.20 for a $2 ticket.

BILL ROPER CALLS SPRING FOOTBALL DRILL DRUDGERY

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Long drawn out college football training in the spring and fall was criticized today by William W. Roper, former Princeton university football coach, at the annual conference of the middle Atlantic states collegiate athletic conference.

Roper referred to intensive training as drudgery. He said there should be an all around program for the boy in school, so that he may be able to turn out for any sport. He added that a boy should not be called upon to carry on two sports. It cannot be done successfully, especially if the boy wants to keep up with his studies.

Roper said that if spring training for football cannot be cut out, he suggested not more than two weeks of it. In the fall, he said, there should be no practicing until about Sept. 10.

Weaver, Ex-Maroon Grid Star, Weds Arkansas Girl

Jonesboro, Ark., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—The marriage of Charles Weaver, former University of Chicago football and track star, to Miss Mabel Allene Steele of Monette, Ark., was announced here today. The groom is spending the holidays here with his mother, Mrs. Ida Weaver.

KUMMER BURIAL RECALLS GREAT MAN O' WAR RACE

Defeated John P. Grier in 1918 Dwyer Stakes.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Clarence Kummer, the American jockey star, was buried in New York yesterday, and as the last rites were said turfmen and racegoers recalled the greatest ride the tall, slender, dark complexioned eastern pilot ever made.

It came in the 1918 renewal of the Dwyer stakes at Aqueduct, and as a result of Kummer's powerful finish Man o' War ran the best race of his brilliant career.

George Markham of Chicago, who witnessed the running of the 1918 Dwyer, the race which made Man o' War stand out as the greatest of all American thoroughbreds and caused him to be rated with the mightiest horses of the world, gives an interesting description of that famous running of the Dwyer and the events which led up to it.

Didn't Try for Derby.

"After winning the Preakness, the Belmont and the Withers, Mr. Riddle, who owned Man o' War, did not elect to try for the Kentucky Derby, to his everlasting regret," reads the piece which Mr. Markham handed to us and which told about the 1918 Dwyer stakes.

"Instead he decided to run Man o' War in the Dwyer stakes at Aqueduct, in which he was assigned to carry 126 pounds.

"Jimmy Rowe, trainer for Harry Payne Whitney, had seen Upset and Wildair and every other good one he handled humbled by Man o' War, so he decided to take advantage of the 18 pounds, the conditions governing the Dwyer, gave to his best colt, John P. Grier.

"Rowe gave Grier a masterly prep for the race. It is doubtful if a horse ever came out for a contest in finer fettle and more ready than John P. Grier was that early summer day in 1918.

Other Entrants Scratched.

"Trainers of all the other candidates scratched away from the two champions and Aqueduct was jammed to capacity, the crowd sensing a battle of the century.

"It was all that and more. It set the seal of greatness on the superhorse for all time.

"Notwithstanding his 126 pounds in the saddle to his rival's 108, the big dreadnaught bounded away from the barrier in the lead and set a terrific pace down the back stretch and around the turn for home. Entering the stretch the big horse seemed to falter for an instant and a mighty yell arose from the Whitney adherents. John P. Grier was catching the champion at every stride. At the three-sixteenths pole Grier was on even terms, and dead fit as he was, it looked certain he would go on by and win.

"It was too much to ask, groaned the admirers of Man o' War.

Only One Man o' War.

"He couldn't concede that much weight. Never in history among the highest class horses had a top weight been caught in the stretch by a lighter weighted rival, and lived out the duel to come on and win, anyway.

"But never in history had there been another Man o' War.

"For a few strides he ran at Grier's saddle girth. And then in that last furlong he answered the frantic appeal of Clarence Kummer. Kummer was riding his most masterful race, and Man o' War, gathering everything he had in every fiber of his courageous body, literally flung himself with the aid of Kummer across the finish line, the winner by a neck of the greatest duel in turf history between 3 year olds or of any other age for that matter."

Markham might have added that Man o' War's triumph broke John P. Grier's racing heart. He was never of any account as a race horse after that defeat. As a sire he has produced sons and daughters that have beaten sons and daughters of Man o' War.

But after the Dwyer of 1918, John P. Grier nor any other horse ever beat Man o' War and Kummer.

FORESTER BASKET LEAGUE LEADERS FACE STRONG FOE

Leading teams in both the north and west divisions of the Catholic Order of Foresters Basketball league are scheduled this afternoon to meet opponents who are within reach of first place.

In the north section St. Monica must defeat Hofbauer, its old rival, to retain first place. Queen of Angels can advance into a tie for third position with St. Eugene by defeating the latter.

Games between St. Patrick and the C. O. F. Monarchs, and Harmony vs. Holy Ghost, top the list in the west division. St. Patrick and Harmony are deadlocked for the top berth, while the Monarchs are only a game behind the leaders. The schedule:

NORTH DIVISION.
[St. Michael's gym, Hudson and North-av.].
St. Eugene vs. Queen of Angels.
Hofbauer vs. St. Monica.
De Soto vs. St. Leopold.
WEST DIVISION.
[Majestic Ballroom gym, 5247 W. Madison].
Monarchs vs. St. Patrick.
Harmony vs. Holy Ghost.
St. Aloysius vs. Holy Family.

Y. M. C. A. VOLLEY BALL TEAMS WILL BATTLE TUESDAY

The West Side Y. M. C. A. volley ball squad, which last year captured second place in the American Amateur federation tournament, will meet the Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A. team Tuesday night at the latter's gym.

Lincoln-Belmont, coached by R. P. Hartenstein, has not been beaten this year. The north siders have triumphed over South Chicago, Wilson Avenue, and have defeated 111st street in two games.

Led by Jewett, Schupp, and Benbeich, the west side sextet has won from Wabash and Aurora. They lost to Hyde Park and divided two games with Evanston. The probable lineup follows:

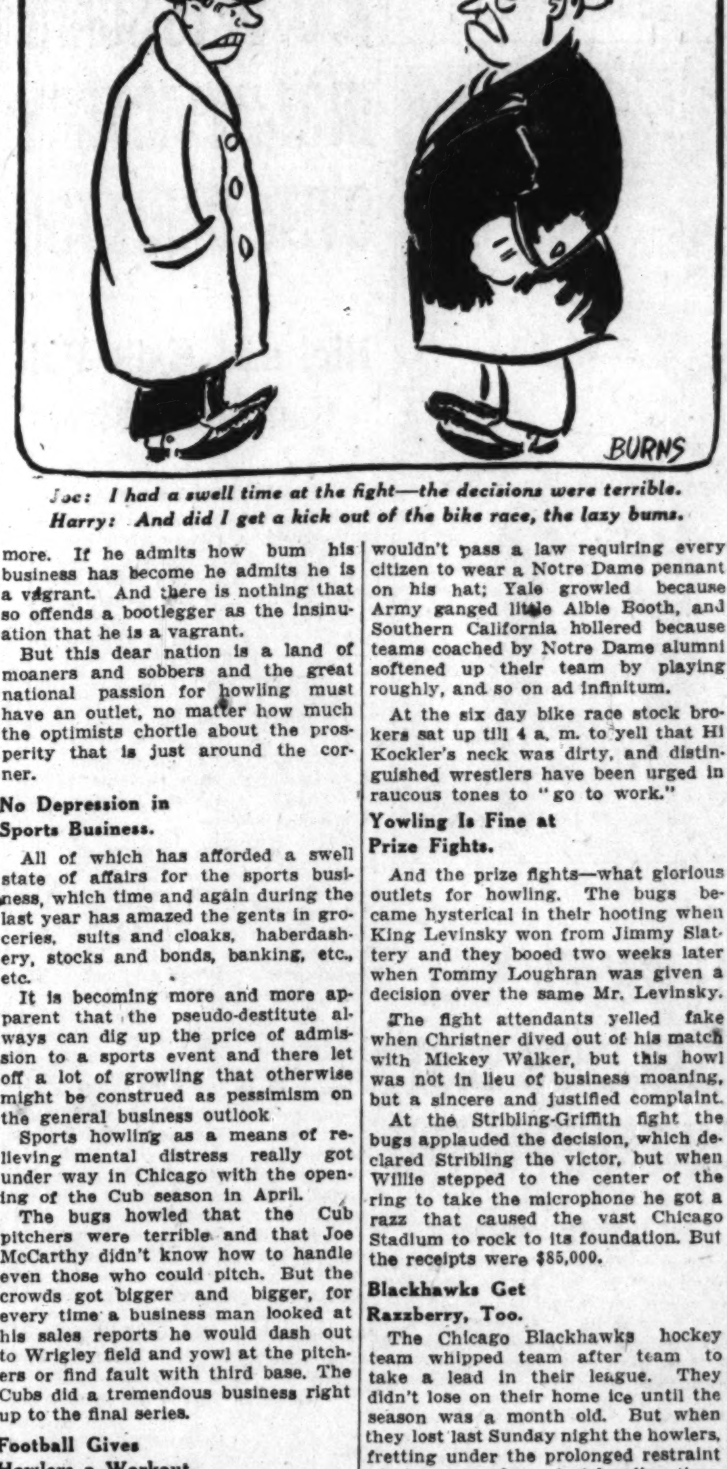
WEST SIDE.	LINCOLN-BELMONT.
Jewett	Kueine
Delbridge	Bodenstein
Werneke	Keuffer
Schupp	Miles
Benbeich	Pearson
Shields	Rupp.

High Cost of Old Raspberry Doesn't Limit Fans' Supply

BY EDWARD BURNS.

All the purveyors of optimism during the reported current depression, from President Hoover down, have dwelt upon the sinful and discouraging aspects of old fashioned calamity howling.

A merchant who finds his layout denuded of customers may moan a little, but sotto voce and in private. Even the bootlegger is denied a good healthy sob on the premise that folks ain't drinking the high priced stuff any more. If he admits how bum his business has become he admits he is a vagrant. And there is nothing that so offends a bootlegger as the insinuation that he is a vagrant.



Joe: I had a swell time at the fight—the decisions were terrible.
Harry: And did I get a kick out of the bike race, the lazy bums.

But this dear nation is a land of moaners and sobbers and the great national passion for howling must have an outlet, no matter how much the optimists chortle about the prosperity that is just around the corner.

No Depression in Sports Business.

All of which has afforded a swell state of affairs for the sports business, which time and again during the last year has amazed the gents in groceries, suits and cloaks, haberdashery, stocks and bonds, banking, etc., etc.

It is becoming more and more apparent that the pseudo-destitute always can dig up the price of admission to a sports event and there let off a lot of growling that otherwise might be construed as pessimism on the general business outlook.

Sports howling as a means of relieving mental distress really got under way in Chicago with the opening of the Cub season in April.

The bugs howled that the Cub pitchers were terrible and that Joe McCarthy didn't know how to handle even those who could pitch. But the crowds got bigger and bigger, for every time a business man looked at his sales reports he would dash out to Wrigley field and yowl at the pitchers or find fault with third base. The Cubs did a tremendous business right up to the final series.

Football Gives Howlers a Workout.

The football season also afforded a lot of opportunities for growling. In the Big Ten, for instance, Iowa partisans growled lustily about everything connected with the Big Ten; Purdue partisans, reacting from the flush of a 1929 championship, growled because Michigan trimmed them by a point in the first game of the season and did some fresh growling when Indiana beat them by one point in the last game of the season.

Wisconsin followers howled because the team beat Chicago and Penn and then flopped for a series of trimmings; Northwesterners growled because Michigan claimed a share of the conference championship, and Michigan fans yowled because the experts wouldn't throw out the tie with Michigan State; Notre Dame's synthetic alumni roared because congress wouldn't pass a law requiring every citizen to wear a Notre Dame pennant on his hat; Yale growled because Army ganged little Albie Booth, and Southern California hollered because teams coached by Notre Dame alumni softened up their team by playing roughly, and so on ad infinitum.

At the six day bike race stock brokers sat up till 4 a. m. to yell that Hi Kockler's neck was dirty, and distinguished wrestlers have been urged in raucous tones to "go to work."

Yowling Is Fine at Prize Fights.

And the prize fights—what glorious outlets for howling. The bugs became hysterical in their hooting when King Levinsky won from Jimmy Slattery and they booed two weeks later when Tommy Loughran was given a decision over the same Mr. Levinsky.

The fight attendants yelled fake when Christner dived out of his match with Mickey Walker, but this howl was not in lieu of business moaning, but a sincere and justified complaint.

At the Stribling-Griffith fight the bugs applauded the decision, which declared Stribling the victor, but when Willie stepped to the center of the ring to take the microphone he got a razz that caused the vast Chicago Stadium to rock to its foundation. But the receipts were $85,000.

Blackhawks Get Razzberry, Too.

The Chicago Blackhawks hockey team whipped team after team to take a lead in their league. They didn't lose on their home ice until the season was a month old. But when they lost last Sunday night the howlers, fretting under the prolonged restraint of victory, made up lost howling time. Some leather lunged grain trader even yelled at Maj. McLaughlin that he ought to "sigh the Shamrocks," a most tactless bit of howling.

The psychology of the situation is all a little crazy, but the sports promoters have derived a happy slogan out of it all:

"Let the customers howl and the turnstiles click."

Bricklayers to Clash with Sparta Today

The Bricklayers and Sparta, local soccer rivals, will clash today at Sparta field, 21st street and Kostner avenue.

These teams have met twice this season, the Bohemians winning the first game 4 to 3 while the Brickies captured the second by 5 to 2.

While the Bricklayers' half backs and forwards have developed into one of the best goal scoring combinations seen in Chicago for some time, their defense men, Neate, Scott and Gregg, with Davidson alternating, have also shown great form.

The Brickies have now won nine games in a row, scoring 45 goals against 10 for their opponents.

Dickie Vidano, the Italian-American from Coal City, will appear at outside left for Sparta. Dickie has been playing soccer here for the past seventeen years, starting when he was sixteen. He has been a star ever since his debut.

The Maccabee All Stars of the National league will meet the Buda A. A., major league leaders, in the final qualifying round of the National cup competition. The winner will enter the competition proper with the Brickies, Spartas, Olympias, Swedish-Americans, and Norwegian-Americans.

ARMY SCHEDULES TEN GRID GAMES; NAVY LEFT OFF

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 20.—[U. P.]—Army's 1931 football schedule as announced today leaves no place for a possible engagement with the Navy.

The cadets will play seven of their ten games at home. Teams Army will play follow:

Oak Park Athlete Wins Hanover College Letter

Hanover, Ind., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Elmer Otto Meese, Oak Park, Ill., was among the 19 Hanover college football men who received letters recently as a result of the season's play. Meese, a sophomore, played half back.

Meese was considered one of the most valuable men of the Panther squad. He did most of the punting and was responsible for several touchdowns.

A. A. ACCEPTS MAJOR LEAGUES' DRAFT PROPOSAL

Other Minors Expected to Fall Into Line.

Acceptance of the final draft proposal of the two major baseball leagues by the American association was announced yesterday by Thomas J. Hickey, president.

A majority of the eight clubs in the association have voted in favor of the proposal, and it will become effective immediately as far as that league is concerned. Inasmuch as the other two of the "Big Three" minor leagues, the Pacific Coast and the International, are expected to take the same action, the association's vote marks the end of the threatened war between the minors and the majors.

Limitations on Draft.

Under the new draft agreement the major leagues will pay association clubs $7,500 for each drafted player and will not draft any man who has not been in the minor leagues at least four years. Moreover, the majors agree to sign no players who have not had previous professional baseball experience, except players coming direct from college teams.

No member of an American association team who is not now subject to the draft can be taken by the major leagues for two years, or until the fall of 1932, Mr. Hickey said. Only one player may be drafted from each club.

The agreement gives the American association the right to draft from other minor leagues of lower classification and will operate similarly through the entire organized baseball system. The new draft system provides for a proportionate increase in the draft price for the smaller minor leagues and is certain to be accepted by them, Mr. Hickey said.

Five Owners O. K. Plan.

The ballot on the proposal was taken by mail, five of the American association clubs voting in favor of it and two voting to reject it. The eighth club in the league has not yet voted.

A vote is being taken by the other class AA leagues and the Three Eye and Western leagues, but no decision has been reached by them, although Mr. Hickey predicted that they would follow the association's action.

The acceptance of the majors' proposal was the first break made in the ranks of the "big minors" which had stood out against the majors and had brought on a threat of a baseball war. When the minors refused to agree to a renewal of the modified draft agreement, which has been in effect for the last five years, the majors delivered an ultimatum announcing that all business relations between the Class AA groups and the majors would be discontinued.

While no limit has been set on the duration of the new agreement, Mr. Hickey said that the dispute would be settled amicably and that the entire draft argument would be disposed of as soon as the other minor leagues had acted on the proposal.

Taylor Trunks Play Champion Church Cagers

The Taylor Trunk girls, national basketball champions, will meet the Christ church boys' team, titleholders in the Lutheran league, at Pilsen Turner hall, 18th street and Ashland avenue, tomorrow night in the feature of a three game card for charity. First game will start at 7 o'clock.

All proceeds of the game will be used to purchase Christmas baskets for poor families in the Fifteenth senatorial district. The hall and services of the officials have been donated.

Girls Lose Close Games.

The girls have played the Christ church team twice this season, losing the first game by a free throw and the second by one basket.

Harry D. Wilson, coach of the Taylor Trunks, announced that 400 tickets have been sold in advance.

Two Preliminaries.

The Skarda Boosters heavyweights will meet the Croatian Brotherhood All Stars in one of the preliminary games while the Baron Boosters will take on the Bethlehem Juniors in the other.

GEORGE HAGEN TO MEET SHIKAT IN MAT BOUT DEC. 29

George Hagen of Brooklyn will be Dick Shikat's opponent in Doc Krone's wrestling show at the Broadway armory, Dec. 29.

Shikat hopes to use Hagen as a stepping stone to a match with Jim Londos, recognized by the National Boxing association as world's champion. Hagen and Shikat have met twice, each holding a decision over the other.

CATHOLIC PREPS OF NORTH SIDE WIN 7-6 BATTLE

2,000 See Game in Big 124th Armory.

The north section of the Catholic High School Football league is still one point better than the south section. A team of stars from the north side defeated a squad of the best players in the south section, 7 to 6, in the new and roomy 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, last night.

A crowd of 2,000 saw the game, proceeds of which were turned over to the Associated Catholic charities. The game was sponsored by the Knights of Columbus.

The score was a duplicate of the recent battle for the league championship, in which Loyola of the north section defeated St. Rita of the south. Players from these two schools made up the bulk of the all-star elevens last night.

Mustari's Point Decides It.

Little Al Mustari, quarter back for the St. Philip team during the regular season, contributed the victory point for the north siders with a place kick, after Don Refram of De Paul had scored across for a touchdown in the third period. The south siders, who appeared to be the better team last night, had taken the lead in the second quarter, when Jack Molloy plunged over. A line play for the extra point failed.

The armory in which the game was played deserves a story in itself, and it probably will be heard from in the near future, since it is planned to bring together several professional stars in a game there Jan. 3.

The big building has one of the largest playing floors for indoor football in the country. It is 115 yards long and 40 yards wide. From the floor—a composition of sand and clay—to the lowest girders of the roof of the armory is a distance of 94 feet.

South Side Scores First.

The south side team, which was coached by Joe Prelli of Mount Carmel, dominated the play in the first half. In the middle of the second period, led by Molloy and Red Lenzi of St. Rita, they pushed their way to the north siders' 15 yard line. Lenzi dashed around end, but was crowded out at the one yard line. Molloy delivered on the next play.

The north side team appeared to click more effectively in the second half. A trio of De Paul stars—Refram, Zeck, and Weinand—collaborated on the north side touchdown. Zeck broke through the south side line, blocked a punt, and recovered it on the south siders' 30 yard line. A few line plays followed and then Weinand grabbed a pass and ran to the two yard line. Refram went over for the touchdown and Mustari followed with the winning point.

CHICAGO TEAMS FAIL TO CRASH CENTRAL MEET

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Not one of seven Chicago teams bowling on the early shifts tonight was able to get into the first ten in the standings of the Central States tournament.

A total of only 2,826 was high among those Chicago bowlers and that went to the Kankakee Steamers, whose individual totals ranged from 544 to 575. The Bowlers' Journal was second with 2,804.

The Milwaukee Journal was the lone team to bread into the leaders, shooting 2,931 to take eighth place. Scores of the highest two Chicago fives:

MINNESOTA FIVE TOPS BELOIT FOR 3D IN ROW, 39-18

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—University of Minnesota basketball team registered it's third straight victory here tonight when it defeated Beloit college, 39 to 18.

The Gophers were lethargic in the first half, but at the start of the second period they snapped out of it. Starting with the score 21 to 14 in their favor, the Gophers did not allow Beloit a field goal while they were adding 17 points to their total.

Earl Loose was the high scorer for Minnesota, collecting seven baskets and two free throws. Taylor led the losers with six points. The summary:

DATE FOR PITT, PURDUE BASKET BATTLE MOVED

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—At the request of Purdue university, the game between the Boilermakers, Western conference champions, and the Pitt Panthers, who lost only two games out of 25 played against the country's best basketball teams last year, will be played Dec. 30 instead of Jan. 3, as originally scheduled.

The Panthers will meet the champions of the east, Syracuse, Dec. 27. Pitt has a comparatively green team, with Hyatt, Zehfuss, L. Cohen, and [illegible] of the 1929-'30 team gone.

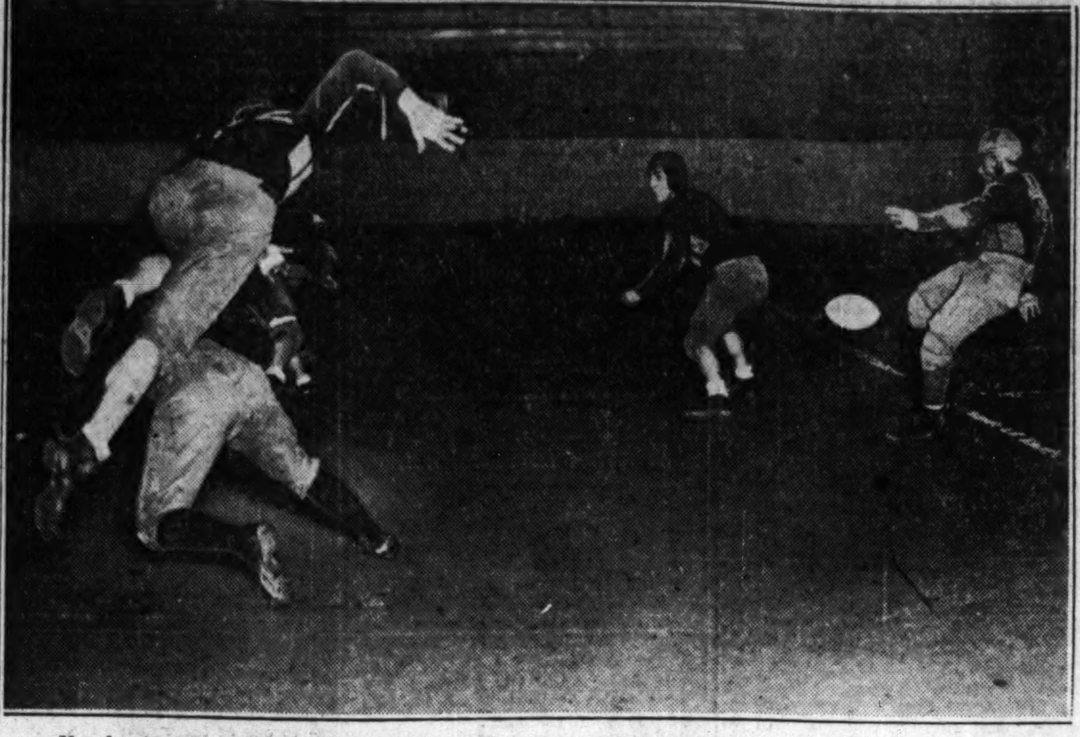
A Kick in Time Does Help Tremendously



North side Catholic high school football team is forced to kick from behind its goal line in the first quarter of indoor charity game at the 124th Field Artillery armory. Mustari of St. Philip, who is punting, kicked a point after touchdown in the third quarter, which gave the north siders a 7 to 6 victory over the south side parochial league boys. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

INDOOR FOOTBALL.

PRO FOOTBALL played indoors in buildings like the Stadium has possibilities for a limited number of exhibition games. That was shown last week when Bears and Cardinals met for the benefit of the unemployment fund.

Attendance was inspired partly by curiosity and partly by the cause. The reaction, however, was favorable. Those spectators with whom we talked said they would attend one or more such affairs between elevens of known standing. Nowhere did we find expression that indoor football would be a desirable substitute for the outdoor article.

The main favorable point was proximity of spectators to the playing area, enabling one to see clearly the formations and even the expressions on the faces of the contestants. Rocky Wolfe did a good job of broadcasting, so even the complexities of the special yardage rules necessary were understood in most instances. Spectators, of course, were not bothered by rain, snow, or cold. The light was better than at night games outdoors.

Disadvantages are obvious. The gridiron was not regulation length or width. Instead of 100 yards there were really only 60 yards unobstructed, for the extra ten yards at each end were so close to the boundaries as to handicap attempts to play in those zones. Our idea would be to kick off from one end of the field, and then play the game without the 20 yards rule invoked Monday night. That was sometimes confusing despite the explanations. Of course, more touchdowns probably would result, but that is not necessarily a weakness. A ball near the sidelines arbitrarily should be moved out for the benefit of spectators in rear seats.

The playing surface was not firm because of its hurried preparation, but better than outdoors on a muddy day. Players found the air less exhilarating and a bit heavy toward the end. There is plenty of ventilation, however, if the spectators would stand it.

The Wake thinks three or four games at the end of a season would prove an attraction largely because spectators would get a closeup after watching from usually remote distances during the fall. We do not think indoor football could compete with outdoor football during the season proper.

Green Tree! Glad Tree!

[To a Yearling.]

Open your eyes, Beloved Kid,
And see what Merry Old Santa did!
Why were you sleeping the night away,
Dream of bottles in white array?
Here is a Forest of magic green,
The happy most wonderful Tree you've seen,
With Gifts below and a Star above
And a Thousand Candles aglow with love!

Always remember the First Green Tree
You opened astonished eyes to see!
Never another as fair shall grow,
Tho' far to the West or East you go.
In other years will be tears enough
And many masters whose way is rough,
But this is the Tree your heart will keep
When lost on the desert of life you weep.

Jingle your rattle and blow your horn;
This is the Day Our Lord was born.
This is the Day He planted a Tree
For all His Children . . . even for me.
So I bring you treasure and incense sweet
And the Song of the Highest Star repeat;
"Peace on Earth, good will to men";
He saw the need and the future then.

Open your eyes! The world is young.
Many a Tree with thorns is strung.
See! They have gathered all beauty here,
And a Song unworried by cold or fear!
Down the ages, which way you fare,
O gladden the Bare Trees, broken there,
For never a blessing shall be defiled—
Love gives in the name of a Little Child!

Arrow-Head.

CHICAGO SKATERS TO OPEN RACING SEASON DEC. 28

Chicago skaters will begin a strenuous winter program on Dec. 28, when the Franklin Skating and Athletic club Derby opens the season. More than 700 skaters are expected to participate in the 16 Chicago meets on the schedule, and most of them are well along in their training periods.

Stamina will play a major part in determining the champions in their respective classes this season. Following the Franklin meet three Derbies in four days are scheduled, the Sleipner Athletic club's on New Year's day, the Elcaya Athletic club on Jan. 3, and the Norwegian-American A. A. on Jan. 4. Olympic tryouts, featuring long distance events, also will be held as part of the Norwegian Derby.

This means the stronger stars such as O'Neill Farrel, Frank Stack, Al Kucera, Ray Wondra, Eddie Schroeder, and Wally Mitchell should be in the upper third of the point standings when the season closes, as each has distinguished himself in previous long campaigns.

Carideo Leaves for Coast; Silent on Purdue Offer

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Frank Carideo, Notre Dame quarter back, who, it was intimated recently, would make an announcement as to whether he would accept an offer to assist Noble Kizer in coaching the Purdue university football team next season, departed for Los Angeles without disclosing his future plans. He is to play a game with the Notre Dame All-Stars at Los Angeles next Saturday. Before leaving South Bend he indicated he would take his time about making a decision on any coaching job that may be offered him.

Orval Martin Resigns as Track Coach at Purdue

Lafayette, Ind., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Orval Martin, former Purdue distance runner, has resigned his position as assistant track and cross country coach at Purdue university to join the Los Angeles Athletic club and run for that organization in amateur meets during the next two years. He is looking forward to the Olympic games to be held in Los Angeles in 1932.

Martin will leave Dec. 27 to make his home in Los Angeles and resume training for a renewal of track work. He was graduated from Purdue last June after bringing many honors to the university in Western conference, national intercollegiate, and other meets. Since graduation he has been assistant coach.

Martin is not yet 23 years old. He holds eight Western conference track championships, won in six meets. On two occasions he won both the mile and half mile races. In his three years in the Big Ten he was not defeated in a single event. In addition to winning all his races he also took the Western conference cross country championship over a five mile course. He also holds two conference indoor records.

Edward J. O'Connor, former Purdue track coach, who developed Martin, speaks of him in terms of highest praise as a remarkable competitor who has everything a great runner should have and who never asks favors.

MARION HIGH LOSES.

Marion, Ind., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—The Marion Township High school basketball team today lost its first game this season to Mount Vernon High school, 29 to 13. The Marion Reserves won from Crab Orchard, 19 to 18.

Martin Totals 143 to Lead Pasadena Golf

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 20.—(AP)—The Scots came into their own in the second round of Pasadena's $4,000 open golf tournament today when Ernest Martin, Los Angeles professional, went into a one stroke lead over the surviving field of 50 by shooting a par 71.

Martin, making his first bid for a major championship, had a 143 after shooting a 72 yesterday in the opening round.

His position was none too secure, for a quartet of professionals stepped into the 144 class. Among those was consistent Al Espinosa of Chicago. He had a 71 yesterday to tie for second and finished with a 73 today. Tony Manero of New York, with 73—71; Herman Barron, Port Chester, N. Y., with 74—70, and Ray Mangrum, Dallas, Tex., 72—72, were the others.

Only Two Break Par.

Only two strokes behind Martin were Mortie Dutra, Long Beach, and Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia.

With putting conditions more exasperating than yesterday, only two of the 100-odd starters broke par. Dutra was the most fortunate, with a 69. Barron had a 70.

Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J., leader at the end of 18 holes with a 69, slumped to a 78 today and slipped into a tie for fifth place with nine others. This list included Horton Smith, New York, defending titleholder, with a 75—72 for 147, and Walter Hagen, Detroit, whose comeback attempt was slowed down by a 75 after shooting 72 yesterday. Hagen duplicated his bad finish of yesterday by three-putting the last green for a six, two over par.

With 11 of the players grouped within three strokes of each other and first place, the championship to be decided over the 36 hole route tomorrow stood in doubt.

Dawson Leads Amateurs.

Johnny Dawson led the amateurs. The Chicago expert posted a 72 which with a 74 yesterday gave him 146. He was tied with Joe Ezar, Waco, Tex.; Tommy Armour, Professional Golf association champion from Detroit, and Frank Walsh, Chicago professional. The leaders:

FATHER AND SON BOWLING TEAMS TO CLASH TODAY

50 Teams Enter 16th Annual Tourney.

Fathers and their robust offspring will occupy the alleys at Mussey's Recreation, 131 South Wabash avenue, this afternoon and evening when nearly 50 pater-filius combinations will roll for prizes in the sixteenth annual Father and Son bowling tournament. The assault on the pins will get under way at 1 o'clock.

Last year P. K. Petersen and his son Pete took the first prize with a doubles score of 1,176. They will try to repeat today, but there are several teams which are considered strong enough to give the Petersens a battle. A. J. and J. A. Williams and C. and W. Schulz, who shared third place in 1929, believe they are entitled to the capital prize this time.

Here's Entry List.

Entries include:

E. G. and G. B. Hill, M. R. Pritchard and son, A. J. and J. A. Williams, J. Baines and son, O. W. Herrman and son, William Harfst and son, H. A. Abbott and son.

O. Hartman and son, H. Jalurke and son, William Toepper and son, N. F. Thomas and son, C. Schulz and son, T. Dodds and son, M. Faetz and son.

Mathys and son, A. Kopinski and son, A. Engelman and son, J. Gratz and son, Oehrman and son, R. and E. Peterson, D. and M. Dorn, J. Hrizak and son.

A. J. and D. W. Williams, J. and F. Smuda, C. and W. Schulz, A. and J. Gay, M. Faetz and son, W. Soutar and son, W. S. and C. A. Campbell, A. and V. Kopinski.

B. Ofenloch and son, Jost and son, J. and L. Kulik, John Paeglow and son, Jost and son, J. Urban and son, Martin and son, L. W. Sanborn and son.

Ted Svoma and son, Ben Bernicchi and son, Joe Fliger and son, S. Owens and son, F. Walters and son, P. K. and Pete Petersen.

Al Sindelar, secretary of the Chicago Bowling association, announces that 3,000 pin topplers have entered the City Championship tournament opening at Mussey's Recreation alleys next Saturday. The entry for the 27th annual event is the second largest ever received by the association.

1,951 Seek Singles Prizes.

The doubles entry is 986 and the singles have drawn 1,951.

Five man—Mazureh Brothers, 3,033.
Doubles—P. O. Keefe and J. Wilman, 1,316.
Singles—William Goldammer, 699.
All events—D. Pinz, 1,972.

Goldammer Brothers report a large entry list for their grand reopening sweepstakes next Saturday and Sunday at the Harding Recreation alleys, 2701 Milwaukee avenue.

The Misses Gleason, Capella, and Carroll have been turning in big counts in the Railway Business Women's league, which is composed of fourteen teams. They are the Rock Island Apaches, the Rock Island Rocky Mountain Limiteds, Pennsylvania Liberty Limiteds, C. B. & Q. Aristocrats, C. B. & Q. Blackhawks, Monon, B. & O. Sailors, Pennsylvania Golden Arrows, Chicago and North Western Vikings, C. & N. W. Portland Roses, C. & N. W. Corn Kings, Pennsylvania Broadway Limiteds, New York Central, and the Chicago Great Western.

The Chicago and North Western railroad offices team has climbed to second place in the Wilson Avenue Industrial league, only two games behind the leaders, M. & L. Typesetters, who have won 25 and lost 11. Smalski's 200 average for nine games is the best solo record. Standing:

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—In view of certain revelations at the International Live Stock Show in Chicago the stock industry seems qualified for admittance to the community of sport. It is disclosed, and with a note of pride, too, that the international prize steer of the show was unique in the respect that he, or it, won his, or its, championship without the use of artificial stuffing to round out any hollows in his, or its, physique. The inference is, of course, that in the cases of some, if not all, of the past champions, nature was in receipt of the plastic veterinary surgeons' artful aid. In fact, it is given out that it has been customary to inject deposits of lard, beeswax and similar substances into the hides of the animals to remove wrinkles and impart a false appearance.

This touch of guile reminds me at once of the scandal which rocked the boats of the New York amateur cod fishing fleet a few seasons ago when an amateur cod fisherman, who thought he had won the $200 prize for the best fish of the day, came upon a couple of rival amateurs stuffing a smaller codfish with lead sinkers. It might be explained that the amateurism of the cod fisherman, like that of the tennis players, is a very elastic quality, and that the issue of the $200 prize did not even raise a question of professionalism.

NOW PUT IN THE FLAT IRON, JAKE.

He heard a voice say, "Stuff a couple more down his neck."

New York Commission Glad to Handle It.

The aggrieved cod fisherman wrote an indignant letter to the press and for a time there was a demand for a Will Hays or a Judge Landis of cod fishing. However, I believe that in the end, the controversy was referred to the New York prize fight commissioners, who have always admitted jurisdiction over everything, and that the commissioners promptly suspended Mickey Walker for 90 days.

The sportsman who made the complaint was one of those honest souls to whom any suggestion of deceitful practice was abhorrent, and he wrote not as a victim emitting a squawk but as a defender of the honor of the sport of cod fishing. He had caught, or boated as the cod fishing term has it, the largest codfish on the boat on which he was a paying passenger. He had paid his $2 into the prize fund and late in the day, after long hours spent at the rail in the wash of the sea and spray, he had hauled up a cod weighing about 25 pounds, obviously the largest fish on board.

The Great Amateur Codfish Plot.

But shortly before weighing in time he chanced to go down the cellar of the boat and there, in a dark corner of the furnace room, he heard a voice say "Stuff a couple more down his neck." Instantly suspicious, he switched on a light and discovered two unscrupulous characters poking lead sinkers down an inferior cod, which was thus to have become a party to a fraud posthumously.

The subsequent investigation, which will be remembered as the great amateur codfish plot probe of 1928, suggested that honest amateurs had been defrauded of thousands of dollars in this manner, and moreover, some of the captains of the fishing boats were suspected of maintaining large pet cod or ringers in secret fish bowls below decks. These, it was whispered, were produced unexpectedly from over the side, weighed in by confederates, and returned to their tubs for further competition after the funds had been paid over. It was all quite distressing to those who approached the sport with ideals, and there was a brief campaign to keep cod fishing clean. Two city magistrates and a police captain resigned, but cod fishing today probably is just as sordid as it was then.

Of course, the live stock exhibitors readily will discover a community of ideals with the old grads, athletic directors, and football coaches of some universities, who hire young athletes to play the game on theory that victory is its own justification, and also with those gentlemen of the crap shooting profession who use unethical dice.

I have often thought that a crap shooting gentleman with a set of loaded dice differed only in method and not at all in principle from those leaders of the football business who comb the country for the best players, subsidize them with wages in one guise or another, and then send them out as amateur teams drawn together by natural reasons. It is true that nowadays these professional or semi-professional college teams play one another and thus equalize or nullify the unfair advantage in frequent cases, but you will also find that in a crap game where one sportsman is using private dice the other sportsmen probably are doing the same thing, so the comparison will stand.

Exposing the Racket in Deer Antlers.

The live stock breeders will discover a sympathetic psychology in the great forests, too, for sportsmen returning from the autumn hunts report that the guides nowadays keep large stocks of antlers for moose and deer which they will insert in place of smaller antlers for comparatively modest fees, the sentimental value of the head of the moose or deer being gauged by the spread of the handlebars.

No symposium of this kind can be substantial without reference to some interesting stratagem of pugilism, and for the most apposite one I should cite the case of the heavyweight prize fighter of the white hope era who sat in his corner before a bout with a scarred and glowering opponent, refusing to answer the bell unless his manager would agree to give him a hypodermic injection for his courage. The manager had forgotten his hypodermic outfit and his distress was great, as the receipts were very attractive and he did not wish to forego this money.

But necessity is a prolific mother, and presently he bent low and whispered:

"Keep quiet now, as I am going to hide this gun in the towel and stick you a jab in the back."

Thereupon he poked his athlete with a safety pin, chafed the spot vigorously, and inquired:

"O. K. now?"

"Ah, that's fine," the pugilist replied. "Now I will knock this bum through the back door."

Valparaiso Beats Concordia College of Milwaukee, 35-22

Valparaiso, Ind., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Valparaiso university defeated Concordia college of Milwaukee here tonight, 35 to 22. Concordia took an early lead, but Valparaiso led at the half, 14 to 10.

OKLAHOMA FILES PROTEST AGAINST 2 KANSAS CAGERS

Charges Brothers Played with Y. M. C. A. Five.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 20.—(AP)—The University of Kansas was involved again today in a dispute over the Big Six conference eligibility rules.

The accusations were made by the University of Oklahoma only two weeks after Kansas forfeited the eligibility of James A. Bausch, insurance salesman and star athlete, under a new interpretation of the rule against subsidization, and regained good standing in the conference.

In the Oklahoma charges made public by Kansas authorities today William and Kenneth Johnson, Jayhawker basketball stars from Oklahoma City, are accused of having played in a game outside the conference during the last Christmas vacation, in violation of a Big Six rule.

Withheld from Games.

Dr. F. C. Allen, Kansas athletic director and basketball coach, said he would withhold the sophomore brothers from competition for the present. They had been nominated to participate in an exhibition game here tonight between Kansas and Missouri.

Allen said Hugh McDermott, Sooner basketball coach, had challenged their eligibility on the ground they had competed in a Y. M. C. A. game at Oklahoma City.

Oklahoma Y. M. C. A. officials said the brothers did not compete in the game, although their elder brother, Clarence (Skinny) Johnson had played. They said the younger brothers had intended to play, but decided otherwise after receipt fifteen minutes before game time of an opinion from Oklahoma university which said their eligibility in the conference might be threatened.

Agreed to Board Ruling.

The conference faculty council last October at a meeting in Columbia, Mo., charged Kansas with recruiting and subsidizing athletes.

Kansas subsequently voted adherence to a statement against professionalism drawn up at a conference of member university and college heads, athletic directors and professors. After Kansas found Bausch ineligible the faculty council Dec. 5 rescinded its order to discontinue athletic relations with Kansas after the present year.

Among the terms of agreement was the Kansas athletic board's promise to abide by the conference eligibility committee's rulings.

Marquette U. Game to Open Hockey Series

Amateur hockey will make its first appearance as a major sport in Chicago tomorrow night when the Marquette university team, winner of the national intercollegiate championship last year, meets the Cook county American Legion sextet at the Chicago Stadium.

The game will begin a series of amateur games in which the leading college teams of the United States will meet the outstanding amateur teams of Canada and the United States and other college sextets. Public skating and figure skating classes will follow the game.

The Legion club has been drilling daily at the Stadium, under the direction of J. P. Flannagan of Toronto. Flannagan has whipped into shape a strong crew of puck chasers, recruited for the most part from the better known amateur teams in Canada.

One of the most promising members of the team is Clayton Joseph, for two years a star on the University of Minnesota team. Joseph will play at right wing. Another player of more than the customary amateur brilliance is the goalie, H. Hawkins, who did his previous starring with the Guelph, Ont., Maple Leafs, one of the better known amateur teams of Canada.

Marquette will bring most of the men who carried it to its intercollegiate title last year. These include Donnie MacFayden, brother of the Shamrock star.

MORENZ TOTALS 15 POINTS; TOPS HOCKEY SCORING

Goodfellow Takes 2d in American Division.

Howie Morenz, speedy center of the world's champion Canadiens, is setting a pace in scoring goals in the National Hockey league that no other sharpshooter has been able to match. According to the statistics issued last night by President Frank Calder, and including games of Dec. 14, Morenz has accounted for twelve goals, four more than any other player, and three assists for a total of fifteen points.

Aurel Joliat, left wing of Canadiens, is second to Morenz with ten points. Bailey, Toronto right winger, has only one point less than Joliat.

Goodfellow Gains.

The lead which the Cook brothers, Frankie Boucher, and other long established stars have been holding in the American division of the league is threatened by Eddie Goodfellow, tall Detroit Falcon center. Scoring in almost every game, Goodfellow has worked his way into second place in the section, only one point to the rear of Fred [Bun] Cook of the Rangers. Cook has twelve points, with five goals and seven assists, while Goodfellow has scored eight goals and furnished three assists.

Four are locked in a tie for third position in the section, and one of them is Eddie Shore, defense player of the Boston Bruins. Shore's puck carrying and play making ability is attested by the fact that his nine points include only two goals, seven being assists. Bill Cook and Frankie Boucher of the Rangers and Harry Oliver of Boston are the other players on even terms with Shore.

Joliat Leads in Penalties.

Joliat still ranks as the most heavily penalized player, having served 38 minutes, three more than Allan Shields, Philadelphia defense player.

Fox River Valley Semi-Pro Basket Loop Opens Jan. 1

Elgin, Ill., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—The Fox River Valley Semi-pro Basketball league has been organized. The following cities will be represented: Dundee, Geneva, St Charles, Elburn, Aurora, Hinckley, McHenry, and Elgin. A schedule has been arranged by which each team will play each other twice during the season. The team that is ahead during the first half will play the team that makes the best showing in the second half to determine the championship. The opening games will be played about Jan. 1.

GUARDS FLIERS' GOAL

Fred Kearney, goalie for the St. Louis Fliers, will have the task of turning aside the Shamrocks' drives on the net at the Stadium tonight.

Shamrocks to Play St. Louis Sextet Tonight

The St. Louis Hockey club will oppose the Shamrocks tonight at the Stadium. It's said the Fliers will have in the lineup three stars who did not play against the Shamrocks in the opening game of the season, and will demonstrate the combined results of new blood and two weeks of hard practice at Tulsa under the direction of Manager Kenny McKenzie.

MacKenzie took the Fliers over a couple of days before the season opened. They were in poor condition, and against the Shamrocks were forced to go on the ice without the services of Larry Goyer, last year's leading scorer in the American league; Nobby Clark, defense player; and Chief Bolieau, experienced wing man.

Cameron's Record Unique.

At least two of these three men, Goyer and Clark, will play tonight. Harry Cameron will replace Moose Jamieson at defense and Art Pattendon will be on the first string forward line at a wing. Cameron, playing defense, scored a remarkable total of 21 points last season.

The starting forwards against the Shamrocks Sunday night will be Larry Goyer, center; Pattendon and Hill, wings. Fred Kearney will guard the net and Cameron and Nobby Clark will pair off at defense. The second Flier forward line will consist of Syl Acaster, center, and Tip O'Neill and Bili Cousins, tho ex-Shamrocks.

Three Shamrocks Ailing.

The Shamrocks are in good shape except Taylor, McFayden, and Donnenay. Taylor has a severe cold and McFayden's injured leg is bothering him. Dennenay needs a little more time on the ice to be in top form.

Lineup:

SHAMROCKS.		ST. LOUIS FLIERS.
Timmins	Goal	Kearney
Taylor	Defense	Cameron
Mulligan	Defense	Clark
Clayton	Center	Goyer
Brydson	Right Wing	Hill

N. Y. RANGERS AND BOSTON BRUINS PLAY 2-TO-2 TIE

Boston, Mass., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Although the Boston Bruins were held to a 2 to 2 overtime tie here tonight by a battling New York Ranger sextet, they managed to increase their lead to a full game over the other clubs in the American division of the National Hockey league.

Butch Keeling, Ranger spare forward, tied the game late in the third period. Circling about a wild jam near the Boston cage, he poked the puck through Goalie Tiny Thompson when it slashed out of the pack.

The Rangers opened the scoring late in the first session, Bun Cook slashing the rubber over the Boston goalie's shoulder after his furious rink-length rush carried him safely through the Boston defense men.

Both of the Bruins' scores were made in the second period. George Owen brought about the first deadlock on a solo rush after halting a Ranger threat. Red Beattie, who has scored in every game since the Bruins obtained him from the Ranger's Canadian-American league farm at Springfield, caged the other goal on a pass from Harry Oliver.

BRUINS, 5; QUAKERS, 1.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The Montreal Maroons gained two points on the division leading Canadiens tonight as they trounced the Philadelphia Quakers, 5 to 1, while their local National Hockey league rivals were idle. It was the Maroons' eighth victory in nine starts.

Nels Stewart returned to his best scoring form to net two of the goals, each on good assists from Siebert and Smith. Gallagher and Wilcox tallied for Montreal on lone sorties and Siebert on a combination play. Milks sank Philadelphia's one goal.

The hard working Philadelphia youngsters lacked ability at close quarters and Dave Kerr, Montreal's spare goalie, had little trouble turning in a good game. Jimmy Ward, Maroon forward, struck his head on the ice and was taken to the hospital suffering a slight concussion.

Bang! Another Cottontail for Hunter's Board

BY BOB BECKER.

Thousands of rabbit hunters have been tramping through the fields of the central states during the last few weeks because this widely distributed animal continues to be a prime favorite among gunners.

It takes a total of $15 or $20 to crawl into a duck blind and bag a limit of ducks. At least $10 has to be paid a landowner for the privilege of killing four geese and one is far from being certain that the geese will decoy. But rabbit hunting, the sport of fields, meadows, and thickets, can be conducted with no such investments. The biggest investment in the sport is in the good will of the landowner, who raises the cottontails and permits a gunner to tramp over his land.

The recent snow in the central states sent another wave of rabbit hunters through the country, because every gunner in search of the fast moving furry targets likes to take to the open following a light snowfall. Along with the sportsmen and preceding them in some counties, have gone the market hunters. The latter have cleaned up in some localities and thousands of the cottontails are being shipped to the cities to be sold to the city dwellers who count fried rabbit or rabbit hasenpfeffer style a delicacy of the winter season.

The common cottontail of the middle west is not in the same class with the big hare or snowshoe rabbit of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and the north country in general. The latter has style because nature gives him a new dress for winter.

For hunting the big hares, as well as the ordinary rabbit, gunners who are just learning the game of dusting shot over a moving target, will find a modified choke gun a much more efficient weapon than one with a full choke barrel. Most of the shooting at rabbits is fairly close. When the cottontails are sitting tight you can almost step on them. Under such circumstances there is absolutely no necessity for a full pattern. A gun of that type will tear a rabbit to pieces. Better to use a modified barrel that opens up the pattern.

We use a 16 gauge double for our rabbit hunting. The right barrel is modified, while the left is full choke, which gives us an ideal setup for both close and long range shots.

KANSAS U. MAY SIGN MULLINS AS COACH OF BACKS

Lawrence, Kas., Dec. 20.—(AP)—University of Kansas athletic officials said today Larry [Moon] Mullins, Notre Dame full back, was among several men being considered for a back field coaching position. The place was made vacant by the return of Paul Murphy to his medical studies at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. F. C. Allen, athletic director, and H. W. [Bill] Hargiss, head football coach, boarded the Notre Dame special train at Topeka recently when the Irish were returning from their triumph over Southern California. Riding to Kansas City they discussed several Notre Dame players, among them Mullins, with Coach Knute Rockne.

N. U. SKATER TO LEAVE TODAY FOR EASTERN MEET

Paul McDonald, reserve center on Northwestern university's football team, leaves today for Lake Placid, N. Y., where he will represent the university in the national intercollegiate skating carnival starting Dec. 27.

McDonald, who is a sophomore, is one of the outstanding skaters in the middle west. Last winter he was a place winner in THE TRIBUNE Silver Skates carnival.

Besides being a star skater and football player he is also a good golfer, and will be a candidate for the Northwestern golf team this spring.

Syracuse Cagers Beat Western Reserve, 46-28

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Syracuse university's veteran basketball squad defeated Western Reserve university, 46 to 28, here tonight. Ev Katz piled up 15 points for Syracuse. Borwald, Western Reserve center, starred for Western Reserve.

FESLER RANKED WITH HARLEY AS OHIO GRID HERO

But He's Still "Wes" to All Buckeye Students.

and probably will be seen at his position of back guard in every game of the season.

He has been known for the last two years as one of the best guards in the Western conference, and has been the most valuable man on the Ohio baseball squad for the last two years, but it was on the gridiron he gained most of his fame.

Taken Out Once for Injury.

Fesler has played more than twenty hours in the twenty-four football games on the Buckeye schedule during the last three years. During the 1928 and 1929 season he played every minute of every game and was taken out for injury but once in his college career—this year against Wisconsin.

Fesler did everything but lead the cheers. He played at his regular position, right end on the defense; went to full back on the offense, called all the team's signal plays from the huddle, tossed the forward passes, did all the punting, and acted as captain for every game of the season.

His experience as a football player before coming to Ohio State gave Fesler a good background. At Youngstown South High school he was a great center. During his yearling days at Ohio State he played at center and also at guard. He was tried at tackle for a while and then transferred to end under Dr. Wilce.

Was Brilliant in 1929.

In 1929 Fesler scored the only touchdown for Ohio State in the Michigan game and paralleled this feat with a 98 yard run against Northwestern. He cut off possible scores in almost every game with his brilliant defensive work.

Fesler does not smoke, is deeply religious, and is one of the most popular students on the Ohio State campus. He has gained scholarship honors every year he has been on the campus and this year was named to Beta Gamma Sigma, honorary commerce fraternity. During his junior year he was president of his class, and turned down the office during the senior year.

He was elected to practically every honorary society in the university, including the Bucket and Dipper and Sphinx. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, and intends to make his home in Columbus if he can make suitable business connections.

Fesler will not play professional basketball, football, or baseball. Neither has he the desire to be a four letter man at Ohio State, although he could easily make his letter in either tennis or track, where he is known as one of the fastest men in the institution. With full football equipment he has been clocked at 10 seconds for 100 yards.

Is Guard in Basketball.

Playing mostly at guard in basketball he filled in at center last year when the regular pivot man was out. In baseball he played in the field, although he was used at first base in many of the games and even started to pitch one game. Last year he won for the second time the Potter runmaker's cup—an award which annually goes to the Ohio State player making the most runs or driving the most runs in during the season.

When he was elected as Ohio's most valuable player and made a candidate for THE TRIBUNE award, only one ballot was taken—the choice was unanimous.

Because he entered the engineering college and then transferred to the commerce college, Fesler still has another year of school work, although he will be ineligible for varsity competition.

To top it all off Fesler, quiet and unassuming, has not been affected by his fame. He is as affable and congenial today as when he was a freshman, and to all the campus, fraternity brothers, and strangers alike, he is known as "Wes."

BRIGHAM YOUNG BEATS WESLEYAN QUINTET, 34 TO 33

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Brigham Young university basketball team defeated Illinois Wesleyan university here tonight in the second intersectional game of the Wesleyan schedule, 34 to 33. The westerners led, 34 to 27, with two minutes to play, but Callans, Wesleyan guard, scored three times in succession to bring the score 34 to 33 as the gun cracked. Summary:

THREE ALABAMA TEAMS WORK OUT AT SAN ANTONIO

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 20.—(AP)—The University of Alabama football squad practiced here from 1:30 until 3 p. m. today and then continued westward to meet Washington State at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's day. Good football weather was encountered here.

Coach Wallace Wade ran three elevens through brisk scrimmages and the husky Crimsons were perspiring freely when they went to the showers. Every one seemed to be in fine shape. Wade said he regarded the New Year's contest as a "toss up."

Chicago "Y" College Five Awaits Annual Cage Trip

The Chicago Y. M. C. A. college basketball team will leave Saturday on its eighth annual Christmas tour. The quintet will visit New York, Detroit, Niagara Falls, and Toronto. The following players will make the trip: Capt. Hanson, Meyer, Wilson, Collins, McFarland, Beck, Showley, and Sandvig.

MOTORS · TRAFFIC · HIGHWAYS

Chicago Plans Uniform Auto Traffic Code

Chicago has taken the first step toward the adoption of a uniform traffic code which its proponents assert will simplify conditions for motorists driving within the confines of the city.

This step is in the form of a meeting held by the attorneys or their representatives for the three major park boards and Alderman John A. Massen, chairman of the city council's traffic regulation committee, for the discussion of machinery that would put into effect one set of traffic laws which would govern motorists on park boulevards and city streets in every part of Chicago.

As it now stands regulations concerning motorists have been promulgated by the city and park boards to cover a number of districts. In some cases rules issued by the various authorities are contradictory, with the result that motorists accustomed to driving on the north side, for example, run into difficulties when they go to the south side.

Three Committees Formed.

To end this confusion the Chicago Association of Commerce recently called a meeting of traffic experts to start the ball rolling in favor of uniform traffic laws. As a result of this meeting three committees were formed—one consisting of attorneys, the second of traffic managers, and the third of police officials—to start framing uniform regulations.

As a starter Ald. Massen secured the passage of a resolution by the city council authorizing himself and members of his traffic committee to sit in with park attorneys in discussion of the proposed ordinance. Massen himself supports the proposal.

"We have been going ahead building boulevards and widening streets to expedite traffic," Ald. Massen said, "but our motorists are befuddled by contradictory regulations when they travel from one part of the city to another.

Motorists Face Arrest.

"Different types of control signals are found in different parts of the city. No motorist knows when he leaves his home that he won't be arrested for some minor traffic regulation. Different procedure exists in the various police jurisdictions in connection with arrests for traffic violations.

"All this should be improved. We need one set of laws to govern the conduct of motorists in Chicago. There should be a uniform set of traffic control lights so that each light change will mean the same thing in Rogers Park as at Madison and Crawford.

"And we need uniformity in the matter of arrests. A motorist taken into custody or given a ticket should know just what to expect whether the offense be committed in Jackson Park or at Broadway and Wilson. There should be uniformity in the manner of arrest or in notifications, and there should be uniformity in bail requirements. This is only fair to the casual offender.

Would Make Driving Simpler.

"We should have uniformity of traffic markers and uniformity of position for these markers. This procedure should make driving simpler. All this uniformity in driving conditions should work for a lower accident rate. A driver who is puzzling over what he should do to make a left turn in a strange neighborhood might easily be the innocent cause of an accident.

"Now, if we can get the various park boards and the city to agree on uniform automobile laws we can start to educate the rest of the cities and towns in Cook county as to the advantages of such a system and possibly we can get them to adopt a law similar to that working in Chicago. Such a procedure would be as advantageous to the residents of their own communities as it would be to the citizens of Chicago.

Chicago Area Code.

"Then the next step would be the adoption of the plan in the whole Chicago metropolitan area. Uniform traffic laws for the metropolitan area would be a godsend to our motorists.

"Once we have settled the automobile problem for the metropolitan area we can tackle other difficulties confronting the city and its tributary territory. For instance, there are problems of police and health as affecting the entire Chicago district."

The Chicago Association of Commerce has been working for years to secure uniform motor laws and only recently was able to bring the various elements together with any hope of success for the project. At the inaugural meeting held a few weeks ago representatives of the various jurisdictions expressed their desire to cooperate.

Four Members on Committee.

The legal committee set up consists of William H. Beckman, attorney for Lincoln park; George E. Gorman, attorney for the south parks; Daniel A. Roberts, attorney for the west parks, and Mr. Massen, representing the city. The other committees are to get busy action after the legal committee has completed preliminary studies to find out just what can be done. For instance, in the various parks there are special conditions which might require regulations that properly should not go in a uniform ordinance.

In making their preliminary study the legal committee is following the model municipal traffic ordinance worked out by the national conference on street and highway safety under the chairmanship of Robert P. Lamont, secretary of commerce.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

ON DRIVERS' LICENSES.

Port Huron, Mich., Dec. 15—One thousand deaths in Cook county by autos so far this year! What a crime, a shame, a disgrace to careful drivers!. I have driven twenty-one cars a distance of 400,000 miles and have had one accident. That was when a woman driver turned a corner into a boulevard without warning. It cost me $130, without a chance to collect. No insurance or responsibility on the part of the offender.

Railroad engineers are required to serve years of apprenticeship as firemen—they must qualify both physically and mentally for fitness—and they run on a given course of two rails. Any jackass, male or female, deaf, dumb, or blind, crippled or mentally incompetent, may send the requisite fee to the secretary of state and receive a license to drive an auto which becomes an instrument of death when in the wrong hands.

On the country highways we find the road hog, who takes his half in the center of the road. The whoopee male and female who passes cars on turns and hill approaches. The young male and female "punks" who cut in and out of traffic and "lets father worry." The "bright light skunk" who has dimmers and won't use them.

What's the remedy? Make every applicant obtain a driver's license after an examination for physical and mental fitness. Make each license application carry an application for a liability insurance policy.
R. E. BRUNE.

DIRTY AUTO WINDOWS.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—I have read item after item in your paper on driver licenses, but no one to my knowledge has expressed the real reason for most of the terrible accidents in the city and on our highways. I believe that many of the accidents are caused by auto or truck owners having filthy windows and windshields, for every one knows that it is impossible to see through a dirty window, especially when one is driving against the sun or street lights or an approaching automobile.

Instead of imposing upon the public another law like the so-called drivers' license act every driver should be compelled to keep his auto or truck immaculate, and there wouldn't be a half the accidents there are today.
M. C. ZUTTERNEISTER.

FLASHLESS FLASHERS.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Those flashing stop signs are good enough when our city can't afford the regular electric ones. I do much driving about the city evenings and find that approximately fifty per cent of these flashers at through streets do not flash. I have noticed four or five corners where the lights were out for four weeks.

I was told that these signs are installed and maintained by some company under contract. It looks to me like this company bid too low or it is saving money by not employing enough men so that it can make donations. Not so long ago we had a terrible accident due to one of these flashers not operating.
J. S.

ABOUT DRIVERS' LICENSES.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—I will gladly pay 25c per year for the drivers' licensing bill if the courts revoke the licenses, say for three or six months, of any driver who drives on the left hand lane at the leisurely speed of 20 to 25 miles an hour. Also revoke the licenses for one year of those who straddle the lanes and give you a dirty look when you sound your horn to let them know you want to pass.

BLUES TO BUY SPRINGFIELD (ILL.) TEAM, REPORT

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 20.—The Kansas City Star says a deal is expected to be consummated Monday by which the Kansas City Blues of the American Baseball association will acquire the Springfield, Ill., club of the Three Eye league.

Under the proposed deal, the Star says, the purchase would be optional. For the first year it would be outright and at the end of three years there would be the privilege to continue the arrangement. If the deal is made the Blues will send to Springfield a large number of young players the club has accumulated since the close of last season. The teams had an exchange player agreement this year.

"There are a number of differences to be ironed out before the deal can be made," the Star quotes George Muehlebach, president of the Kansas City club, as saying. The newspaper adds, that in the event the Blues make the purchase, it is understood Cot Tierney, who was signed several weeks ago as coach, would be selected to manage the Springfield club.

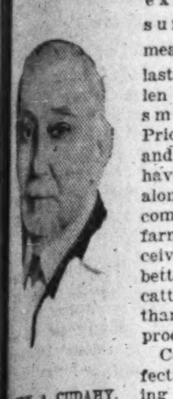
CUDAHY FINDS MEAT DEMAND HOLDS UP WELL

Year's Profit Shows an Increase.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The American people continue to eat well in spite of depression. For example, consumption of meats during the last year has fallen off to a very small extent. Prices of meats and of live stock have declined along with other commodities, but farmers have received relatively better prices for cattle and hogs than for other products.



EDW. A. CUDAHY.

Conditions affecting the packing industry are summed up by Edward A. Cudahy, chairman of the Cudahy Packing company, in his annual report, issued last night. Net profit for the fiscal year ended Nov. 1 was larger than in 1929, being $2,930,318, equivalent after preferred dividends to $5.03 a share on the common stock, compared with $2,-[illegible],650, or $4,13 a share, in the preceding year.

"In view of the world-wide industrial depression and the abnormally low commodity prices which have prevailed throughout the year," Mr. Cudahy says, "we have every reason to be satisfied with the result. Under present conditions it would be somewhat rash to attempt to forecast what the new year holds out for us but certainly we have never been in a better condition to meet all contingencies and to operate successfully than we are today."

Sales for the last year totaled $231,-407,035, compared with $267,960,185 in 1929, but Mr. Cudahy explains the decline was due almost entirely to lower meat prices. In actual tonnage the decline in sales was only 4 per cent and this was due to smaller live stock receipts rather than to any falling off in demand.

The company paid $140,837,566 for live stock in the last year, compared with $172,857,623 in 1929. The average price was $9.22 a hundredweight, compared with $10.60, a decline of 13 per cent. Manufacturing and selling expense, etc., was $84,384,415, compared with $89,054,715 in 1929.

"While the farmer received relatively higher prices for hogs and cattle in 1930 than for any other products of the farm, there was nevertheless a substantial drop in live stock prices during 1930," Mr. Cudahy explains. "In a great measure our profits for the last year have been made possible only by economical management and well sustained effort on the part of our organization, but nothing was done to lower the standard of our product nor reduce the wages or salaries of our employés."

Lower Inventories.

In the report, Mr. Cudahy says that inventories on Nov. 1 totaled $18,615,-[illegible], the smallest since 1922. Current assets and current liabilities are shown at $34,227,589 and $10,211,227, respectively, compared with $42,176,-[illegible] and $16,571,837 on Nov. 2, 1929.

Investments in stocks and bonds increased from $572,566 to $1,459,469, while funded debt declined from $20,-[illegible] to $19,880,000. Surplus increased from $10,473,098 to $10,656,-[illegible]. Fixed assets increased from $36,-[illegible] to $36,331,972. The company purchased a small packing plant at San Diego, Cal.

Weekly Debits Increase Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago for the week ended Dec. [illegible], by 230 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,413,999,000, an increase of [illegible] per cent compared with a week ago [$1,154,871,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$1,746,472,000], a decrease of 19.0 per cent was shown.

Would Permit Rails to Shape Own Destinies

BY SCRUTATOR.

Despite all that has been said and written about the problems of the railroads, there is not extant now and generally understood picture of where they stand in national economy nor of what should be done for them.

Most of the informed opinion on transportation is swayed by position. We have railroad men whose principal anxiety is to make their earnings statements look well in print; we have water way advocates whose earnings statements are disputed by the railway men as misleading; we have the interstate commerce commission, overworked by the details of the job, striving to find an oversimple method of fixing freight rates.

There are other transportation agencies that have been taking business from the rail carriers. On the other side we have a shipping public, needing transportation and getting it where it can. The amount of unprejudiced information furnished it in understandable form is relatively small. A few broad general principles that could be elaborated to the infinite degree can be expressed plainly.

What Public Should Have.

The first of these, perhaps, is that the people are entitled to any form of transportation that gives its services on an economical basis.

The rail carriers have stressed the idea that they are the backbone of the country's transportation. They have stressed likewise the fact that their bonds are held by savings banks, by trust and insurance companies. Because there are certain laws governing the classes of investments such institutions may make, it is pointed out that there is now grave danger that securities of many rails may be barred.

Bad effects certainly would ensue. Rail credit would be injured irreparably and the banks and other investing concerns would be deprived of a logical place to put their funds. The margin above the barring of such investment buying is not large. A recent estimate by the Standard Statistics company showed that thirty-one of the country's seventy-one largest rail systems probably would earn less than one and a half times their fixed charges on capital this year, and that several others were near the line.

Argument Lacks Weight.

But in a dynamic world the argument that somebody is going to lose money unless he can get more for his services than some one else will take has never had much weight. The shipping public is under no obligation to save invested funds for any one. If trucks and common carrier pipe lines furnish a cheaper and more convenient service than rails, it is unfair to place regulation on the latter agencies to force them to go up in their charges.

Admittedly it would be pleasanter for all concerned if the railroads as a whole were prosperous and their investors happy. And they are entitled to all the revenues that their facilities justify. As for their regulation, that grew up in a period when they enjoyed something like a monopoly of inland transportation.

This regulation, beginning as a measure to prevent unfairness being displayed to one shipper as against another, has been so extended that the railroad is now without power, in general, to meet any specific conditions that appear with its own brains.

Stand on Regulation.

Where competition exists, there is no reason for government regulation. There is no good reason why, if a railroad wishes, it should not meet a water rate from New Orleans to the Pacific coast, without having to make a similar low rate to the mountain cities on the way.

What the railroads are justified in asking includes some relaxation of high taxes, the right to fix rates individually to meet competition and to be freed of regulation where competition does exist. To do well they must make enough money to keep their credit and improve facilities, so they may remain the principal transportation agency. They are that; their standing as reservoirs of capital depends on that fact, and as individuals each road should be allowed to work out its destinies.

Plymouth and Packard Factories Suspend Work

Two more automobile factories have temporarily suspended operations, it was announced yesterday. They are the Plymouth, with a working force of 8,000 men, and the Packard, with approximately 2,500 employés.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH BUSINESS

Bank clearings have recovered materially, and are well above those of recent preceding weeks. The total for the third week of December for leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $10,044,-[illegible] is 14.1 per cent below last year's. At New York City, clearings amount to $7,040,000,000, or 11.4 per cent under those of a year ago, while the aggregate at centers outside of New York of $3,004,192,000 is 19.9 per cent smaller.

This year Pixley & Ehlers are distributing $35,000 to their employes in the form of a bonus. For the last eight years this policy has been in effect and despite the general business conditions every employe in the organization is to be rewarded.

Bancamerica-Blair corporation will pay a Christmas service bonus of from 5 per cent to 25 per cent to all salaried employes. Similar payments have been made for the last twelve years.

A gain of approximately 7 per cent in dollar sales in 1930 as compared with 1929 is reported by the Hill Brothers company, New York, although it has reduced prices on several of the food products it manufactures.

The Denver & Rio Grande has just placed an order for 10,000 tons of rails with the Colorado Fuel & Iron company.

The Bessemer & Lake Erie is inquiring for 1,000 to 1,200 hopper cars.

November industrial activity, based on reports from 3,800 manufacturing plants throughout the country using electrical energy, rose 2 per cent from October's level, low point for the year, and is now within 5 per cent of the September figure, Electrical World reports.

Toy buyers for the large stores underestimated the demand for playthings this year and as a result some factories have been running full capacity to fill supplementary rush orders for the holiday trade. This announcement was made by the specialties division of the U. S. department of commerce, which also states that there has been a surprising turnover of stocks in the domestic market.

Operations of the Newton Steel company next week will be increased 10 per cent to 60 per cent of capacity on the bulge in the sheet steel demand from automobile manufacturers. Operations of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company will continue unchanged at 35 per cent of capacity next week.

Sales of natural gas for October by Allegheny Gas corporation, 36 per cent of the common stock of which is owned by Appalachian Gas corporation, amounted to 190,715,000 cubic feet, compared with 94,778,000 cubic feet during the same month last year, a gain of 95,937,000 cubic feet, or over 101 per cent.

J. E. Anderson, works manager of Empire Steel company, announced that 400 men will be put to work Monday in the company's plant here. Anderson said that a number of large orders had been received recently.

QUERIES SHOW INTEREST RISES IN SECURITIES

Investors' Guide Is Seen Barometer.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

If the volume of inquiries received by THE TRIBUNE Investors' Guide may be taken as a barometer of public interest in securities it may be concluded that in spite of the wallops received during the last year and a quarter there has been no waning of that interest. Quite the contrary.

In 1929, the year of the biggest bull market in history, when people who hitherto had not known the difference between a stock and a bond were jamming brokers' offices with orders to buy and a 10 per cent profit in a week was nothing to write home about, the Investors' Guide was deluged with the heaviest mail in its fifteen years' history.

Record Already Broken.

This year that record has already been broken. Mail receipts for 1929 totaled 20,571. In Dec. 18 that figure was passed when receipts for 1930 to date totaled 20,572. At the present rate the number of letters for 1930 complete will be close to 22,000.

Since midsummer there has been an increase each month in the number of inquiries received. In October 1,988 letters came in, in November 1,996. Since Dec. 1 they have been pouring in at the rate of close to 100 daily. As many as 130 letters have been received in one day.

It is true that many of these inquirers are individuals asking why the price of this or that stock has declined. Others ask for reports on defaulted real estate bonds. But a surprising number have been poking through the list looking for "good buys" and trying to discover just how low their favorite will go before it should be snapped up.

Sharp eyes are watching bond prices seemingly with the purpose of buying when the downward trend seems definitely checked. Then, too, there has apparently been a great deal of quiet accumulation of the more conservative bonds, municipals, utilities, and railroads. The people who use the Investors' Guide to check on the securities they hold or contemplate buying represent pretty well a cross section of the investing public.

Potential Buying Power.

When it is borne in mind that the majority of transactions on the New York Stock exchange are purchases for the accounts of the smaller nonprofessional traders and investors it is reasonable to assume that there is large potential buying power overhanging the market waiting for a favorable opportunity to step in.

The small investor has taken a series of bumps in the last fifteen months, but he shows no disposition to call it quits. He is definitely in the market and he is going to be a formidable factor in any future developments in stocks and bonds. However, he appears to have profited by the unfortunate experiences that he has recently undergone. He wears his wound stripes. He is more cautious and circumspect.

Then there is a new crop of speculators in the offing, people who didn't get in in time to go through the experiences of the last year or so. How they will fare and whether they will profit by the experiences of the earlier battalions is problematical. In many a letter there is a sentence like this: "I have never bought stocks before. B— common looks like a good buy. Do you think it would be a good investment?"

Demand Quality.

That there is not to be in the near future a headlong plunge into purely speculative issues is indicated. By far the greater number of inquirers who are hunting for stocks that will enjoy market appreciation demand first of all the quality of the stock bought be better than average.

Down swings in the stock market fail to lessen the number of inquiries received. When the averages go up the speculators step in. When they go down the bargain hunters enter the picture.

For better or worse the public appears to be in the market permanently. That it is not making heavy accumulations at present seems to be due more to a desire to make certain that the bottom has been reached than to indifference.

Profits of 373 Concerns Show 33 Pct. Shrinkage

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Earnings statements of 373 corporations reporting to date show profits for the first nine months this year 33 per cent less than those for the similar period last year, a compilation by Standard Statistics company shows. Industrials and rails are both off 38 per cent, utilities showed a gain. Figures for the 267 corporations for which comparisons with 1928 are available show a decrease of 24 per cent from 1928 profits during the nine months.

DEVELOP NEW COLOR MOVIE PROCESS HERE?

Credit Improvement to Stewart-Warner.

BY HOWARD CARSWELL.

A new colored motion picture process of far reaching potential promise is believed to be in its final stages of development in the laboratories of the Stewart-Warner corporation, according to persistent rumors in the financial district. C. B. Smith, president of Stewart-Warnear, has refused to discuss the matter, however.

C. B. SMITH.

In view of the shroud of secrecy surrounding the subject, official denial may be expected until such time as the final scientific, legal, and practical details are complete.

If reports are true that by such a new process colored movie films may be developed at a nominal cost of three or four cents per linear foot, its replacement threat against the black and white film appears logical. Ordinary black and white film costs about two or more cents a foot to develop, it is said. By the leading color movie process now dominating the field the development cost to the producer is said to be in the neighborhood of eight cents or more a foot.

City Might Benefit.

With an inexpensive color movie process Chicago should become a movie subcapital of Hollywood and New York, enjoying a rival position of Boston, the home of Technicolor, Inc.

Detailed knowledge of the matter is lacking, for obvious reasons. The name of the inventor is not known. Whether such a process would require a color picture camera or a noncolor camera is not known. It is reported that the secret lies in the contents of the chemical solution in which the master film is immersed while being developed so that the film is sensitized to the reception of colors.

Stewart-Warner grew up with the phenomenal strides of the automobile industry and is now rated as a leading manufacturer of motor accessories. It had a humble beginning in the days when the one-lunger "horseless carriage" used to chug-chug down the street, frightening horses.

In the early '90s John K. Stewart invented a mechanical shears for clipping sheep and horses. Its basic principle was a flexible shaft inclosing a chainlike device propelling rotary motion or power for running the clipper. He formed a partnership with one Thomas J. Clark under the name of the Sterk Manufacturing company.

Sees Auto's Possibilities.

About 1900 Stewart saw possibilities in the "horseless carriage." His company opened a one room factory on Wells street, near the Chicago river. They made their first motor accessory, a horn which they called "the long distance siren."

In 1905 the firm began developing the speedometer, applying Stewart's flexible shaft as the connecting link between a gear on the front axle and the dash. The firm was reorganized as the Stewart & Clark Manufacturing company ($25,000 capital stock) and later was moved to a two story structure on the present Diversey parkway site.

The Stewart-Warner Speedometer corporation came about in December, 1912, out of a merger with the Warner Instrument company of Beloit, Wis., a rival speedometer maker. A. P. Warner withdrew from business at the time.

About 1914 a race driver named Webb Jay brought to them a vacuum tank of his invention which was designed to remove the gasoline tank away from the danger of the engine's heat and at the same time guarantee an even, continuous flow of gasoline to the carburetor. This innovation had revolutionary consequences. So Stewart-Warner grew and prospered, their lines expanding to include spotlights, bumpers (largest single item), brakes shock absorbers, heaters, windshield wipers, etc.

Adopts New Lines.

In the meantime the Stewart Manufacturing company was formed to make die castings, many of which were used in making speedometers. This became part of Stewart-Warner in 1920. Later came the Van Sicklen Peedometer and Jones Speedometer companies into the fold. The alemite business was entered in 1924 through the purchase of the Bassick-Alemite corporation of Bridgeport, Conn. This lubricating method proved to be a prosperous adjunct, and now a substantial share of this business includes all sorts of industrial machinery.

Suddenly the radio came and Stewart-Warner entered this new industry during its "growing pains" period, when its scientific and commercial development was so rapid as to render radio sets obsolete in the course of a few months. Officials now believe that the industry is more stabilized, both as to scientific development and production control.

Stewart-Warner stock is currently traded in at around $17 a share on the New York exchange. The following record shows profits of the company for the last seventeen years:

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS RALLY STRONGLY FROM EARLY LOWS OF WEEK

Chicago bank stocks broke through to new low levels last week but in the late trading showed strong rallying tendencies. Central Trust Company of Illinois sold down to 208, regaining a big portion of the ground in closing at 263@268, off 22 points. First National, after early sales at 460, was wanted at 437 with limited offerings at 492. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust improved from sales at 370 to closing transactions at 401@405 ex-dividend.

Foreman-State National was in demand at 418 with offerings at 422, ex-dividend, off 45 points. National Bank of the Republic sold off to a low transaction at 60, but improved from that price, due to a steady increased buying demand, to 70 bid, 72 asked, ex-dividend, off 20 points. Northern Trust improved from early sales at 440 to closing transactions between 450@456 ex dividend.

Chicago Bank of Commerce was unchanged at 135@140. Terminal National was slightly lower at 54@58. Harris Trust and Savings ex dividend was 25 points easier at 585 bid, 600 asked. Peoples Trust and Savings lost 10 points at 375@390. Union Bank of Chicago was 10 points easier at 172@177.

In the miscellaneous group the majority of issues showed lower prices. Elgin National Watch lost 1 point. Chicago Title and Trust company, ex-dividend $7.00, was quoted 400@405, off 20 points. Chicago Daily News common was 2 points easier, being in supply at 17 with best bids at 16, and the preferred, ex dividend, was wanted at 83, with offerings at 90.

Offerings for Week Total 30 Millions

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 20.—A slight increase in the new bond offering, occurred this week with the marketing of new issues totaling $30,167,000, compared with $21,412,000 last week, the smallest weekly total for the year to date, and with $227,479,000 during the corresponding week last year, which represented the high water mark for 1929. As was the case last week, state and municipal financing bulked larger than that of any other group.

The issue of $6,680,000 city of Boston, Mass., 3½ and 4 per cent bonds, due 1931 to 1950, constituted the largest issue of the week. Next in size in the municipal group is that of $4,134,000 city of Baltimore, Md., 4s, due 1936 to 1957.

Lighter than Expected.

Municipal financing this week was lighter than was expected for the reason that no syndicates bid for the issue of $15,000,000 city of Philadelphia 4¼s in its entirety and the bulk of the bonds were sold over the counter by the city officials to dealers who, for the most part, placed the bonds privately.

The principal piece of public utility financing was that of $6,000,000 Virginia Public Service company 5s of 1950. This issue was marketed at a price of 90, to yield 5.85 per cent. No railroad, industrial, or foreign financing was done this week. One loan for an insular possession, that of $500,000 People of Porto Rico 4½s, was marketed at prices to net 2.50 to 4.125 per cent.

Offerings by Groups.

Offerings of bonds by groups for this and last week follow:

	This week.	Last week.
State & municipal	$16,543,500	$17,412,000
Public utility	13,123,500	....
Insular possession	500,000	....
Foreign	....	4,000,000
Total	$30,167,000	$21,412,000

The improvement in the tone of the general bond market at the close of this week may have the effect of bringing out new issues in fair volume immediately after the turn of the year, but during the balance of this month it is not expected that new bond offerings will run very heavy.

FIXED TRUST HOLDERS SHARE 20 MILLIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 20.—Approximately $20,000,000 will be distributed to holders of fixed trust shares in this country, beginning on Jan. 1 and continuing through the month, in the form of dividends and capital distributions accumulated by the trustees during the last half of the year, according to estimates of those close to the business.

A large portion of this disbursement will represent a return of capital to holders of shares in those fixed trusts which sell and distribute the proceeds of all stock dividends, splitups and rights accruing to the portfolio, it is said. This part, tax experts say, will not come under the federal definition of taxable income.

It is now estimated that approximately $400,000,000 of trust shares have been distributed in this country the greater part of this having been done during the present year by about 150 of these companies. This figure, it is pointed out, must be based largely on dealers' reports, in view of the fact that most companies do not announce their sales volume.

The largest distribution, one of nearly $10,000,000, or nearly half of the total, will be made to holders of North American Trust shares, to holders of more than 15,000,000 shares. This is the largest fixed trust in the country, with shares valued at approximately $100,000,000 outstanding. A total of 65.8 cents will be paid on each share.

Illinois Has Radio for One Out of Every Seven

Seven years ago a novelty, today as much of a family necessity as a car is the record of radio, according to the Illinois Chamber of Commerce business survey, showing 1,060,000 radio sets in Illinois—one for every seven persons in the state. The figures, based on latest department of commerce returns, give Illinois third ranking in number of sets, with New York first with 1,752,000 sets and California second with 1,470,000. With over one million sets and 37 broadcasting stations, Illinois is quoted as one of the best states in radio broadcasting and reception.

RAIL RECOVERY AGAIN IS BOND MART FEATURE

New York, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The sharp recovery of railroad obligations was again the feature of trading in the bond market today. Many railroad bonds climbed 1 to 3 points as the buying movement continued without interruption through the short session.

The whole list reflected a constructive trend. Utility and industrials were firm and many large advances were registered. Many foreign dollar bonds that have lagged joined the forward movement.

Carrier obligations of all descriptions shared in the improvement. Convertibles were buoyant. Alleghany corporation issues advanced 4 and 5 points; Rock Island 4½s were up 2, and Missouri Pacific 5½s gained 1. Such gilt edged investment issues as Atchison 4½s, Union Pacific 4s, Burlington 4½s and Chesapeake and Ohio 4½s advanced from ½ to a point or two, but it was the second grade issues that have been selling at prices to yield from 6 to 8 per cent that led the vanguard.

Rock Island general 4s advanced 3 points; Erie 5s of 1967, 4; Illinois Central 4s, 3¼; Missouri Pacific 5s G, 3½; New York Central 3½s, 3⅜; Norfolk Southern 5s A, 3; Wabash 5s B, 3, and Union Pacific 4s, 2½.

MART SLOWS UP AS CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY NEARS

Gains Outnumber Losses at Close.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 20.—The stock market creaked and groaned and gave off strange noises without getting anywhere in particular in today's brief week-end trading session. Price movements were highly irregular throughout. The close found most of the recognized leaders displaying small net losses, but on the whole the plus signs outnumbered the minuses by a good margin.

Traders generally seemed disposed to go slowly pending the passing of the week-end hiatus. This inclination no doubt was due in a measure to realization of the fact that the ensuing week will be broken by the Christmas holiday, thus leaving only three trading days between the closing today and the Yule recess. Also, the slowing up of the advance which seemed to hold out such bright promise and a well settled conviction in many quarters that a secondary reaction is due before the market looks up again was responsible for no little confusion.

Outlook on Market.

Many commentators are saying that the evidence of an improvement in business conditions is not sufficiently convincing to warrant any aggressive bull movement at this time and are professing to see in the sensational upswing which developed about the middle of the week a hand made order of things doomed to wither as soon as the artificial support behind it is withdrawn.

Railroad shares had their worst day in a week. Profit taking cut them down in a group. Atchison, New York Central, New Haven, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, and others prominent on the upside lately were off 2 to 4 points when the final gong sounded. Baltimore and Ohio went along nicely until the last half hour or so and then folded up with the rest.

On the other hand, New York traction shares had another of their occasional flurries, in the course of which Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Interborough, and Manhattan Modified Guaranteed went through a series of rather spectacular fluctuations. Wall street has been hearing with increasing frequency of late that negotiations between the city and traction representatives have reached a stage at which early announcement of the outcome is in prospect.

Prospects for Compromise.

Later reports suggest that most of the details have been settled, with the only real bone of contention now involving the prices to be paid for the stocks of the three aforementioned companies. It is understood that there is something of a spread between what the traction people want and what the city representatives offer, but with prospects bright for a compromise.

In the industrial division gains of importance were registered by Johns-Manville, Industrial Alcohol, Worthington Pump, and Goodyear. United Cigar Stores preferred rebounded 9 points, while United Stores preferred picked up with a gain of nearly 3 points. The rise in these issues was inspired by the declaration of a quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on United Cigar Stores preferred. United Stores is a large stockholder in the first named issue, which had not paid a dividend since Aug. 1, 1929.

LONDON LOOKING TO WALL STREET FOR TRADE PACE

Americans Sell British Government Bonds.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 20.—Wall street has been the dominating factor of the London stock exchange this week. The depression has spread over a wider area and liquidation is being renewed on a considerable scale. Early in the week Wall street sent over fair sized selling orders, chiefly international securities, the liquidation also extending to British government securities. The latter were mainly confined to the funding loan of which many millions of dollars worth of stock are held by United States investors.

The stock fell rather sharply to 93⅝. The American offerings also included 4 per cent consols and 3½ conversion loan, the week closing with noticeable declines.

Wall street's turn around toward the end of the week, however, produced a much better reaction in London and a noticeable change in the stock market sentiment. The last two days of the week featured a general marking up of trans-Atlantic favorites, influencing a better tone generally throughout the house. But the approach of the Christmas holidays and the exhaustion arising out of the prolonged slump are likely still to hold up new business.

Feel Wall Street.

Practically all sections of the market were influenced by the Wall street relapse during the early part of the week. Weakness developed in mines and oils in the foreign and in home rails, as well as British funds and industrials. Continental and local liquidation all helped to deepen the already overwhelming depression.

The general situation, however, is not creating any alarm, although difficulties among the provincial brokers are being rumored. A widespread depreciation of public investment is harassing holders and a reduction of dividends and a passing of interims announced this week did not help the main situation.

Although the week-end shows a recovery, chiefly accentuated by the bears covering, heavy losses were shown, especially by leading international securities, some of which at one time were practically unsalable. The outlook is still far from clear, and despite Wall street's more cheerful turn few here would not be surprised to see a setback before the Christmas holidays.

Gold Demands Continue.

The money market conditions are beginning to reflect the seasonal expansion in requirements and tighter pressure is anticipated the last few days of the year. Withdrawals of gold from France continue with monotonous regularity, the French exchange not showing an indication of rising to a level which would stop the movement of gold from London to Paris, especially since there are still big French balances in London upon which Paris can draw.

For the present the gold import to Germany has ceased, but according to the present appearance of the exchanges it seems likely that shipments from London to Berlin will resume very soon. The sterling dollar rate moved sharply against London under the influence of the American banking troubles, but toward the end of the week New York started bidding for sterling, rallying the rate appreciably.

PARIS BUSINESS SLOW

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 20.—For the first time in several weeks the Paris market showed a favorable repercussion to the rally on Wall street. However, although most prices reflected a general increase on Thursday the whole list declined sharply during the week-end sessions and the market went back to its usual slack condition owing to the unsettled political situation.

The volume of business was small throughout the week and toward the close of Friday renewed selling brought further declines, particularly in oils and other international issues, with Royal Dutch shares dropping to 95.

Americans Selling.

The situation is also complicated by the influence of the year-end settlements which caused New York to sell a part of its investments on the Paris bourse. American sales of French securities are looked on with alarm by the Paris bourse.

It seems that the French market is getting steadily worse judging from this week's quotations, which showed substantial decreases in most of the leading stocks. Besides the political situation the recent events in Spain have also had unfavorable effects on the trend of the market.

LA SALLE STREET MOOD CHEERFUL AS WEEK ENDS

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

La Salle street was in a distinctly cheerful mood as the week drew to a close yesterday. The readings made during the week from that questionable barometer of business—the stock market—had been highly encouraging. The accuracy of the market as a trade index is frequently questioned but the fact remains that it is an important factor in regulating the mental attitude of the financial and business community.

The performance of the market during yesterday's short session was anything but spectacular. For the most part the gains rolled up earlier in the week on the Chicago exchange were protected and one or two issues managed to add substantially to their previous closing prices. Trading was dull with less than 100,000 shares changing hands in the two hour session.

Special Buying.

Efforts to rally the general list proved fruitless but special buying in Swift International and U. S. Gypsum sent both up for good gains. The annual report of the former company will be released early in February and is expected to make a highly favorable showing. It has been rumored for several months that directors were planning an increase in the dividend or a special distribution. It is expected an announcement will be made shortly on the matter.

The volume of trading in the leading Insull shares was greatly reduced as the prices held steady around Friday's last quotations. Middle West crawled up a fraction to 17⅞ while Insull Utility finished unchanged. National Electric Power A turned in one of the best gains in the group closing up over a point.

The efforts to revive a market here in Peoples Gas are meeting with moderate success. About 700 shares of the high priced Insull stock turned over yesterday and the price was marked up 5 points to 194.

Bond Dealings.

Dealing in bonds was confined to Insull debentures and Chicago Railway 5s B. The latter issue on comparatively heavy trade sold down to a new low of 18 then recovered to 20½, off 4⅝ net for the day. Insull debentures advanced over a point.

The compilation of Otis & Co., shows that the market value of the 43 most active stocks traded in on the Chicago exchange at the close yesterday was $1,791,378,181 below the market value on Dec. 21, 1929, or a 48.83 per cent decline. The total market value of the 43 issues at the close yesterday was $1,877,162,430 as compared with $3,668,540,611 a year ago.

ON FOREIGN BOURSES.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Bar silver, 14⅝d per ounce. Money, 1½ per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 2⅛@2⅝ per cent; three months, 2½ per cent.

PARIS, Dec. 20.—(AP)—Prices were easier on the bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 85f 65c. Five per cent loan, 101f 5c. Exchange on London, 123f 60c. The dollar was quoted at 25f 45c.

BROKER REVISES MARGIN RULE ON CHEAP STOCKS

The recent decline in stock prices has changed Wall street attitude toward cheap stocks. Shields & Co., members of the New York Stock exchange, announce that clients will be permittted to carry on margin stocks selling as low as $7 a share, against $10 heretofore.

In times of high stock prices, low priced issues have been regarded with suspicion, but splitups, together with the recent protracted decline, have reduced stocks of some prominent companies into what used to be regarded as the "cat and dog" class. Brokers also point out that the deflation has some issues below the value of net quick assets.

Canadian Bank Reports $300,000 Gain in Profits

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 20.—The Canadian Bank of Commerce today reported profits of $5,378,000 for the year ended Nov. 29, 1930, more than $300,000 in excess of the previous year's profits.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE STOCKS

There was a strong tone to stocks on the Board of Trade yesterday with prices mostly higher at the close. Standard of Indiana advanced 1⅛. Noranda Mines closed 1 point higher. An additional 200,000 shares North American Trust Shares were admitted to trading.

Management Goes Begging.

Current market prices for investment company stocks reflect a changed attitude on the part of the public. No longer is the general management "trust" looked upon as a panacea for investment ills.

Only a little more than a year ago the little fellows were clamoring to get aboard almost any sort of contraption that could be hurriedly thrown together and labeled "investment trust." Shares were sold as fast as new companies could be organized.

Many of the more cautious investors, realizing that the market was uncomfortably high, were seeking to be conservative and at the same time participate in profits. Few stopped to reflect that if stocks were inflated stocks based on stocks were also inflated. They relied on the "management" feature. The big fellows, they believed, would first scent a coming drop and would be in a position to switch to something safe.

Experience has taught them that an investment trust is not an instrument for making big profits without the risk of loss. These people found that many strange new concoctions that had been loosely referred to as "investment trusts" were neither investment nor trust. Sometimes between these concerns and the operating companies were interposed "management" companies whose chief function seemed to be chipping off a piece of the dividend as it went by on its tortuous route from the operating company to the individual shareholder. Into other so-called investment trusts were dumped great blocks of shares that would not sell under their own names but could be marketed when labeled "investment trust."

After the market collapse last year the bad feeling engendered by such concerns colored also the public's attitude toward the better grade of general management investment companies. The good suffered with the bad.

Now the shares of some of the leading investment companies are actually selling below their book value. That means that the market price is lower than the value of assets in the portfolio. This situation exists despite the fact that many companies have taken pains to set forth in detail the complete list of their assets so that the investor may see exactly what is back of the shares. The public, instead of placing a premium on management, is deducting for it. And yet today opportunities for shrewd investment by experienced men are much more plentiful than in 1929.

As with any other type of investment discretion must be exercised by the investor. It is not reasonable to assume that the individual who is not able to choose a stock suitable for his account will fare better in his attempts to select a good investment company to do his choosing for him.

Business Personals

The New York Stock exchange bulletin announces that the membership of Orville E. Babcock of Babcock, Rushton & Co., is posted for transfer to James G. Purcell, a member of the same firm. Mr. Purcell has represented his firm on the Chicago Stock exchange for the last few years. This change will give the firm an active member on the New York Stock exchange.

George H. Howard, president of the United corporation, has been elected a director of Public Service corporation of New Jersey and underlying companies.

California Almond Grove
For Sale or Trade

1,475 ACRES IN ONE PIECE. 500 ACRES PLANTED WITH 33,566 BEARING TREES, 8 TO 14 YEARS OLD. 20 MILES FROM OCEAN IN PASO ROBLES DISTRICT.

This Almond Grove is in the finest condition and best state of cultivation. Income producing. Adjoining the large Paderewski Ranch and in the locality of other splendid estates. Located in the midst of the beautiful oak covered hills that have made this part of California so well known from a scenic standpoint.

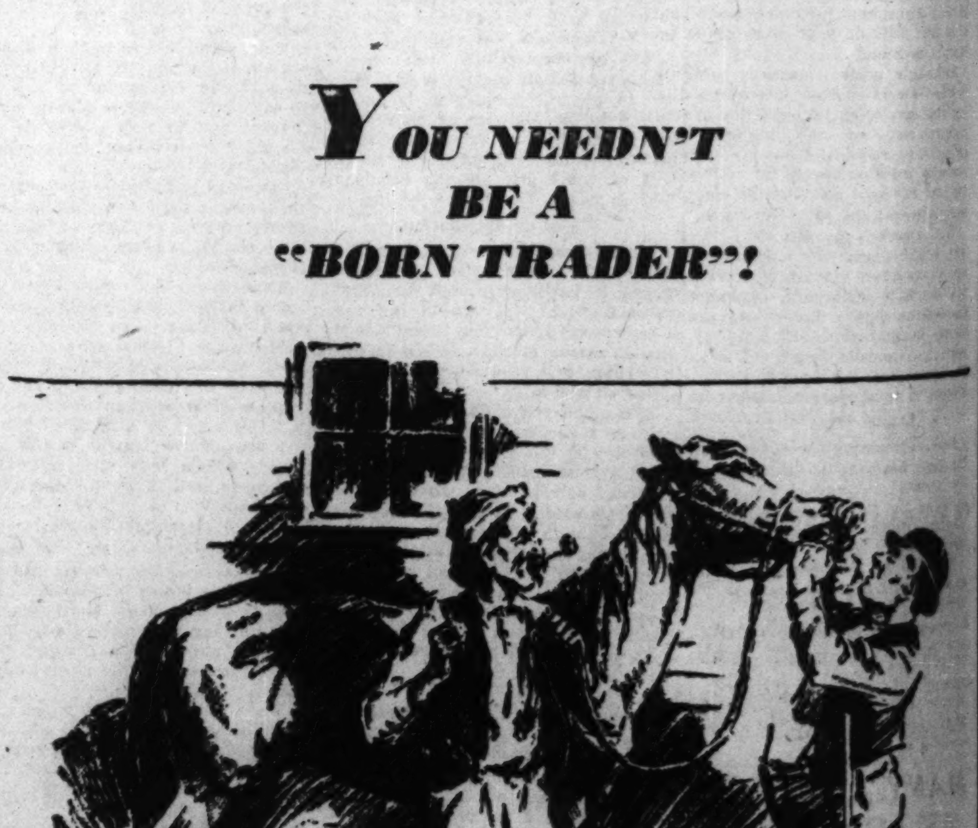
This Almond Grove was being developed by a California resident. On his death it passed to his relatives living in Chicago, who will sell it or trade it for income producing property in the East. This Almond Ranch is free from indebtedness, so only a trade will be considered that carries little or no indebtedness.

A real opportunity for anyone going to California either for an estate or investment. A chance to transfer your investment from the East to the West.

This property will stand strictest investigation. Might be divided. If you have property to trade, kindly give full information and description in the first letter.

ADDRESS O B 515, TRIBUNE

YOU NEEDN'T BE A "BORN TRADER"!



YOU needn't have been born with the eagle eye and "swappin' disposition" of an inveterate Missouri horse trader to appreciate the possibilities of the Barter & Exchange column in the Tribune Want Ad Section. Yet, having read the column, you'll sense the feeling of anticipation and the trader's joy when he is able to swap an unneeded article for something usable!

Wouldn't you feel proud, and happy too, if you traded a stove, no longer needed, for a set of silverware—an encyclopedia for a fur coat—a retired bedroom suite for an Oriental rug! Wouldn't you be glad to exchange your old automobile for your winter's supply of coal—or swap your discarded golf clubs and tennis racquet for a shotgun and a bird dog?

Hundreds of persons are eager to trade with you. They are constant readers of the Barter & Exchange column. They place offers there themselves. They would be interested in reading your offer, too. Give them the opportunity—you never know what rare bargains will be offered you!

SHEEP—Fed western range lambs	$ 6.50@ 8.35
One month ago	7.00@ 8.25
One year ago	12.25@13.25

Top yesterday, $8.35; average, $7.60.

Receipts at Chicago for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 55,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep.

The meager supply of hogs left on the market yesterday, after directs had been deducted from receipts, sold quickly at Friday's advance. Closing prices were largely in line with a week ago, the extreme top and general average prices being exactly the same as they were on the preceding Saturday, at $8.10@$7.80, respectively.

Only pen holders remained at the close. All interests were on the market for hogs, in spite of reports that hogs are moving toward all markets in greater volume than they were at the close of last week.

In spite of the fact that hog receipts were held abnormally small all week, and shipping demand was largest of the season, buyers forced the general average price down to $7.80, a new low since July, 1924. That price was $1.65 below the corresponding week in 1929 and compared with $8.60 in 1928. Total arrivals at the 11 markets at 549,000, the smallest for that week since 1921, was 200,000 below the 10 year average of corresponding weeks.

Outsiders bought 27 per cent of total arrivals at Chicago, against 21 per cent the previous week, 19 per cent a year ago, and 12 per cent two years ago. Weights were heaviest since October, the estimate average at 228 lbs, equaling the average in 1929 and was one pound lighter than in 1928.

Monday's Heavies Bid $7.90.

Bids of $7.90 for Monday's heavy hogs were made on the "to arrive" market yesterday, but there were no sellers at that figure. January contracts were offered at $7.80 and bid $7.75, while March lights were bid $8.25. February mediums were bid $7.50 and bids of $8.00 were made on March mediums.

Although some classes of highly finished steers scored price gains during the last week, due to the urgent requirements of the higher class Christmas trade, the week's general average price of cattle moved down 20c on 22 per cent lighter supplies than a week ago.

The average at $10.40 compares with $12.70 a year ago and with $12.75 two years ago. However, considering the fact that cattle supplies since the first of the month have been running above normal for this time of the year, the market has held up well. The total for the month to date is largest in four years for December.

Lambs Close Higher.

Several reactions were recorded in the lamb market during the week, but the general average at $7.55 was the same as the previous week's average. Closing prices, however, were 25@50c above a week earlier.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 55,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep, against 14,788 cattle, 40,611 hogs, and 16,361 sheep a week ago, and 13,324 cattle, 39,895 hogs, and 11,287 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 34,000 cattle, 160,000 hogs, and 65,000 sheep, against 31,186 cattle, 117,337 hogs, and 54,021 sheep a year ago.

MANY STOCKS AT LOW LEVELS DURING DECLINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 20.—The drastic nature of the decline in the stock market in recent weeks is shown by the fact that at the close of the market last Wednesday 455 of the 934 issues which sold on the New York stock exchange that day were quoted at less than 25, 257 issues closed at 10 or lower, 78 between 10 and 15, and 120 between 15 and 25.

As the result of the decline of many stocks below 10 a movement has been started among brokerage firms to carry stocks selling for 7 or more on margin, it is reported. Formerly nearly all stock exchange firms would refuse to carry on margin stocks selling for less than 10 on the ground that these issues were unacceptable as collateral on bank loans.

SOVIET PURCHASES IN U. S. UP 38.6 PER CENT, AMTORG CORP. STATES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 20. — Soviet purchases in the United States during the fiscal year 1929-'30, ending Sept. 30, 1930, were 38.6 per cent greater than in the preceding twelve months, according to a statistical analysis made public today by the Amtorg Trading corporation, commercial representative of the soviet government in the United States.

More than four-fifths of the total purchases of $149,223,000 during the fiscal year consisted of agricultural and industrial machinery, according to the analysis, and soviet purchases in this country were three times those of five years ago.

During the seven years since resumption of regular trade transactions the soviet American trade turnover totaled $750,777,000, of which four-fifths represented soviet purchases from this country and one-fifth soviet sales in the United States, according to the analysis, which will appear in the forthcoming number of the economic review of the soviet union, published by the Amtorg Trading corporation.

RAIL-WATER ROUTE FATE RESTS IN I. C. C.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Decision whether the Southern Pacific railroad is to be permitted to enter transcontinental freight competition with a combination rail-water route against the all-water route through the Panama canal tonight lay with the interstate commerce commission.

Following completion of final arguments by attorneys, the commission took the case under consideration.

The Southern Pacific seeks to establish a rate 8 or 10 per cent higher than the all water route. It would pick freight up on the west coast and in the Rocky mountain states, transport it to Houston or Galveston, and ship in by water to Baltimore and New York. The time would be greatly shortened.

The shipping board, one of the groups opposing the application, held it would mean virtual destruction of the intercoastal shipping business.

RAILROAD EARNINGS

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO.

Net income for November was $2,856,006 after taxes, charges, and sinking fund appropriations, a decrease of $223,879 from the same month a year ago, and for the first eleven months of this year $31,707,640, down $1,738,830 from the corresponding 1929 period. Per share earnings for the eleven month period amounted to $4.14 a share, par $25, on 7,655,048 common shares, after 6½ per cent preferred dividends, against $4.37 a share last year on the same basis.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL.

Official estimates place net operating income at $1,720,000 for November. Gross operating revenue is set at $10,800,000, which bears out a forecast that the figure would be close to $11,000,000.

ANN ARBOR RY. TO PAY $27 ON COMMON STOCK

Directors of the Ann Arbor railroad yesterday declared a dividend of $27 on the common stock and a dividend of $5 on the preferred, both payable Dec. 31, to stock of record Dec. 29. A statement said the dividend is being paid out of surplus. In June the company paid initial dividends of $6 on the common and $5 on the preferred, both for the year 1929. The Wabash railway owns about 98 per cent of the common and preferred stocks of the Ann Arbor.

United Cigar Stores Company of America has resumed payment of dividends on the preferred stock by declaring a full year's payment of $6, payable in quarterly installments of $1.50 each. The last payment on preferred was made Aug. 1, 1929. The company reports sales continue to run well ahead of 1929.

Pittsburgh Steel Foundries company declared an extra dividend of 12½c and the regular quarterly dividend of 25c. In the previous quarter an extra of 25c was paid.

Distributors Group, Inc., has declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents, payable Jan. 1, to record Dec. 20, placing the stock on a $1 annual basis, against 50 cents previously.

Woodlawn Trust and Savings bank directors declared an extra dividend of $2 a share, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share. The Millard State Bank of Chicago will pay a dividend of 20 per cent on unpaid claims within a week to all who have filed claims up to Dec. 18, according to Will H. Wade, receiver for the bank.

PRICE OF JULY WHEAT LOWEST SINCE YEAR 1901

Government Buying Helps Bolster Up May.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Disappointment over the small decrease shown in the winter wheat acreage in the United States for the 1931 crop in the government report issued late Friday led to scattered selling of July wheat yesterday which carried the price off 1⅛c to 66⅝c, a new low since 1901.

Buying against bids brought about a moderate rally from the inside figures, but the close was ⅞c lower at 67⅛@67¼c. Old crop months were unchanged to ⅛c lower, old December finishing at 76⅝c, March 79⅝c, and May 81c. The Stabilization corporation bought the May and prevented any decline.

While the Winnipeg wheat market closed 1⅜c lower it failed to get as low as on the previous day, although Liverpool December was off ¼c to 63¼c, a new low since 1895. Export sales of 400,000 to 500,000 bu Manitobas were reported in messages from Winnipeg.

There was no material change in the price of old crop wheat futures in Chicago during the last week, with May selling between 81@81⅛, but the July responded to bearish developments in the world's situation and finished 2¾c lower as compared with the previous week. Scattered liquidation in corn resulted in net losses of 2⅝@3c for the week, while oats were unchanged to 2¾c lower, the latter on July, and rye was 1c higher to ⅝c lower, December showing the most strength. Lard gained 10c@$1 for the week, with December acting congested, while bellies were unchanged to 15c lower.

Record Wheat Supplies.

There is no dearth of supplies of wheat for the 1930-31 season and estimates on the world's crop have been steadily raised of late. An official Argentine report placed the crop of that country at 271,000,000 bu, compared with 138,000,000 bu last year, while the carryover is 22,000,000 bu against 20,000,000 bu the previous season. After allowing for home requirements there is an exportable surplus of 208,000,000 bu this year against 85,000,000 bu actually exported the previous year, the crop of 1929 having apparently been underestimated.

A world's wheat crop of 3,784,000,000 bu, exclusive of Russia and China, is estimated by the department of agriculture. This compares with 3,495,000,000 bu last year and is about the largest known. After allowing for the carryover from the old crop and for Russian exports the indicated available supply for the 1930-31 season is 4,434,000,000 bu, the largest on record, exceeding the 1928-29 supply by nearly 50,000,000 bu.

Russia a Factor.

Russian grain cannot be eliminated from the depressing factors that are present in the wheat situation, as the crop of that country is placed by the department of agriculture at 1,157,000,000 bu against 703,000,000 bu last year, and pressure of Russian and Argentine grain was a factor in causing a decline of ⅛@¾d in Liverpool Saturday. Buenos Aires was unchanged to ¼c lower, despite heavy rains in parts of the wheat belt.

Liquidation was on in corn, with the March and May deliveries selling at a new low for the season. May touched 71⅞c on the break, while the December sold at 66¼c, equaling the lowest figure on the crop. Commission houses were on the selling side as were the local element, with support coming mainly from holders of bids and from shorts. Closing trades were ⅞@1⅜c lower, with December 66⅞@67c; March, 69⅞@70c; May, 72@72⅛c, and July, 73⅝@73¾c.

There was some buying at one time on the development of a big cash business, local handlers reporting shipping sales of 315,000 bu, with the basis ⅛c lower to ½c higher, the latter on choice. Buenos Aires closed ⅜c lower, heavy rains in that province being beneficial for the new crop.

Oats Receive Support.

Numerous orders to buy May oats at 33½c seemed to be in the hands of brokers in the pit, and the support was sufficient to hold prices above that figure throughout the day. Some observers said the buying had all the earmarks of being for the same interests who were on that side on Friday. The close was ⅛c higher to ⅝c lower, the former on December, which finished at 32⅝c, while May was 34c. The Argentine crop is officially estimated at 73,000,000 bu, against 68,000,000 bu last year.

The government report on the winter rye acreage for the 1931 crop was largely responsible for a lower range of rye prices, but there was no material pressure on the market. The December acted tight and went to a premium of ½c over the May, closing at 45⅞c.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A moderate export business was reported to have been put through in Manitoba wheats, but quantities were not given.

Local handlers sold 8,000 bu wheat, 315,000 bu corn, and 67,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, with 25,000 bu corn sold to go to store. Deliveries on December contracts aggregated 27,000 bu wheat, 70,000 bu corn, and 11,000 bu rye.

Offerings of cash wheat remain small, with the basis steady to ½c lower, the latter on red. No. 2 red was quoted at 4@5c over the December. No. 2 hard was 1@1½c over and No. 1 northern 1½@1¾c over the future.

Choice cash corn was in demand and the basis ½c higher, while poorer kinds lost ½c as compared with the December. No. 3 yellow was December price to 1c under. Discounts on other grades of cash corn follow: No. 3 mixed, 1½c; No. 4 mixed, 2c; yellow, 1½@3½c; white, 2c; No. 5 mixed, 5c; yellow, 4@6c; white, 3c; No. 6 yellow, 5@7c; white, 4c.

Cash oats were steady to ¼c lower as compared with December, No. 2 white bringing ¾c over and No. 3 white ½c over the future. No. 2 rye was nominally December price to 8c over.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 13 cars; corn, 123 cars; oats, 14 cars; rye, 5 cars; barley, 11 cars.

KANSAS WHEAT OUTLOOK

Kansas is the banner winter wheat state of the country with 12,229,000 acres seeded and a condition of 90, as given by the government crop report on acreage planted for the harvest of 1931. This year it harvested 11,735,000 acres, although more than 12,000,000 acres were originally seeded. The harvest was 158,000,000 bu, or 20,000,000 bu more than last year.

Nebraska has 3,269,000 acres with a condition of 91. This year it harvested 3,622,000 acres, or 70,267,000 bu, compared with practically 54,000,000 in 1929.

Conditions in the soft winter wheat territory ranging from Ohio to Missouri are 67 to 88 per cent, Indiana being the top, and Illinois having 2,249,000 acres and a condition of 86, compared with 2,088,000 acres harvested this year. Texas and Oklahoma have a good condition, the latter being 83, and Texas, 88. Texas acreage of 3,152,000 acres will compare with 2,590,000 acres seeded a year ago, and Oklahoma with 3,877,000 acres compares with 3,547,000 acres harvested this year with a crop of 33,696,000 bu, while Texas has only 28,370,000 bu with a yield per acre of 11 bu against 19 bu last year.

Through the middle west the yields run from 19,000,000 to 37,000,000 bu. On the Pacific northwest where drought has prevailed acreage has increased, with a condition in Washington of 82; Oregon, 89.

LARD PRICES HIGHER

Shorts in December lard were good buyers yesterday, with packers and warehouse interests sellers, the latter credited to purchases of cash lard. Piercing operations are under way and good deliveries are expected next week. There was 400,000 lbs delivered during the day. The price was bid up to $10.60, with the close at $10.50, a net gain of 22½c. January lard was 5c lower and May 7½c higher. Lard in Liverpool was 9d to 1s 6d higher. There were no exports. Hog prices were steady. Prices follow:

PIT NOTES

Continued decline in corn into the weekly and daily bids with prices on December down to the extreme low of the season and with May only about 1½c over the 70c line does not appear to change sentiment from the bearishness that has prevailed of late or induce any investment buying of consequence. Traders who were short covered on reports of over 310,000 bu sold for shipments. With wheat stabilized by the farm board's agency on the old crop deliveries, and with the new the lowest of the season, there is a disposition to give wheat less attention.

"The Canadian wheat pool's policy from now on will be not only to the best interest of the western Canadian farmer but also the trade in general," says John I. McFarland, general sales manager of the Canadian wheat pool, in a letter to a friend in New York. "I feel that western Canada needs all the boosters it can possibly have to help in the sale of its products, and the more salesmen the more people we have working for us. We are going to run this business on a legitimate basis and any exporting business we do will be on profitable basis on Winnipeg values plus, and in just the same manner as any other large exporting country would do. When we sell anything to one of our exporting friends on this side of the Atlantic we want it to be at a price where he can make a profit in competition with prices which he would have to pay overseas."

"Bullish features in the corn situation appear to be more or less latent at the moment, with traders influenced by the fairly liberal run of corn at western markets and by the heavy use of substitutes which is cutting down the demand for corn to some extent," says Logan & Bryan in their weekly review of the corn situation. "The shortage in hay alone offsets the increased yields of oats and barley. Country reports confirm heavy feeding of corn and the feeding out of the 1930 crop began unusually early owing to impoverished pasture lands during the fall."

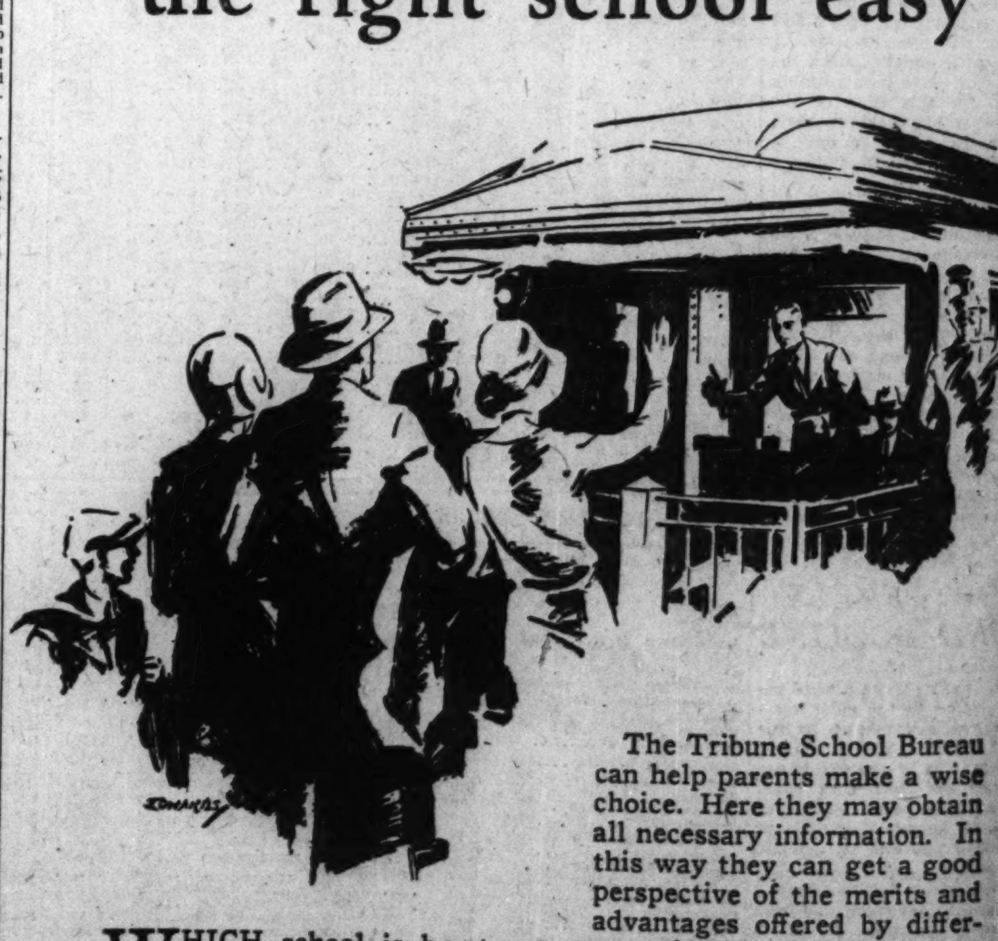
Spun silk fabrics were attracting much attention from buyers, new offerings for spring being shown more freely.

TRIBUNE SCHOOL BUREAU

makes selecting the right school easy



WHICH school is best suited for your son or daughter? Often it is a difficult question for parents to decide. Unfamiliarity with schools frequently stands in the way of making the best choice in this exceedingly important matter.

The Tribune School Bureau can help parents make a wise choice. Here they may obtain all necessary information. In this way they can get a good perspective of the merits and advantages offered by different schools. Experienced attendants, thoroughly familiar with helping parents select schools for their children, further simplify the problem.

There is no charge or obligation whatever for this service. Make use of it! Telephone, write, or call in person.

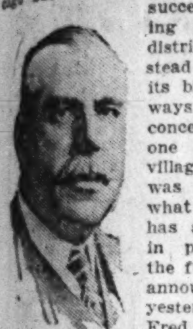
KENILWORTH TO HAVE BUSINESS IN NEW DISTRICT

First Unit of Development Ready to Start.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]



J. FRED M'GUIRE.
[Walinger Photo.]

Kenilworth is one of the few Chicago suburbs which apparently has succeeded in zoning its business district so that instead of straddling its bisecting railways it will all be concentrated on one side of the village. Attention was called to what Kenilworth has accomplished in planning for the future by the announcement yesterday by J. Fred McGuire of McGuire & Orr, that he had ordered the steam shovel which is to dig the excavation for the first unit in the new business development.

This is to be a business block to be erected at the northwest corner of Kenilworth avenue and an extension of McCormick road, by Mr. McGuire from plans by William T. Braun.

Mr. McGuire's determination to build is based on action taken by the board of trustees of the village of Kenilworth in transforming the street heretofore known as West Railroad avenue, an unimproved thoroughfare fifty feet wide, into an extension of McCormick road. It will connect with Wilmette on the south and Winnetka on the north.

Widen to 70 Feet.

The street adjoins the right of way of the Chicago and Northwestern. It has been found necessary by the village to widen this thoroughfare to seventy feet, necessitating the condemnation of twenty feet of land on the westerly side of the road.

A one story brick block of stores at the northwest corner of McCormick road and Kenilworth avenue, owned by Mr. McGuire for the last ten years, has been demolished to make way for the street widening. This wrecking was necessitated by the cutting of twenty feet off the property.

This improvement of McCormick road through Kenilworth is part of a development plan worked out two years ago by the Kenilworth board. They acquired last summer an entire block of land west of the railroad and south of Kenilworth avenue for the site for a village hall and fire station, with park like surroundings.

On this block of land acquired by the village it was necessary to demolish two large brick public garages and several frame structures.

To Be Made Into Park.

The original business buildings on the east side of the railroad have been purchased by the Kenilworth park district with the idea of razing them and adding the land to the present park property.

The rezoning of a new business district was adopted, whereby all land east of the railroads is zoned for residential purposes only. The new business district to be established west of the tracks will consist of four blocks of frontage on McCormick road, extending north from Kenilworth avenue.

The two north blocks of this half mile stretch of business district has been zoned for garages and other business purposes of similar character. The two south blocks will be used for stores.

To Occupy Key Corner.

The building, pictured in an adjoining column of this section, will occupy the outstanding business corner of the new Kenilworth commercial district. It will front 132 feet on McCormick road and 123 feet on Kenilworth avenue. It will contain ten stores, five offices and four small apartments.

Kenilworth avenue is the main east and west thoroughfare in the village. It commences at the lake and runs westerly, past the railroad stations of both the Chicago and North Western and the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroads, out into the country west of Kenilworth.

McGuire & Orr have long been recognized as pioneers on the north shore. Mr. McGuire's faith in this district has been known for many years. He stated yesterday that he considered there never was a time in recent years for more favorable building construction than now. He added that he is favoring north shore contractors with the work which in turn will furnish labor this winter to members of the building trades living on the north shore.

PERCY WILSON ORGANIZATION TO HOLD BANQUET

The annual dinner for executives and sales people of Percy Wilson & Co. will be held at 12:30 p m on Wednesday, Dec. 24, at the Hotel Bismarck, with the distribution of $3,500 in bonus checks and 175 prizes as chief features of the gathering. The dinner will culminate a drive begun by all departments of the Wilson organization on Oct. 1 for new business and for collections on old accounts. The prorata distribution of bonus money to all members of the sales and clerical forces will be greater than in any previous year, according to Mr. Wilson.

W. B. Brown Buys Suite in Hyde Park Co-operative

Walter Burrows Brown of 5011 Blackstone avenue has purchased an apartment in the twenty-six story co-operative flat building at 5000 East End avenue. According to W. B. Seifert of Carroll, Schendorf & Boenicke, there is now only one unoccupied suite of a total of ninety-eight.

ARCHITECT RAPS FADS IN MODERN HOUSE DESIGN

Efficient Plan Is Vital, Says Grunsfeld.

This is the sixth of a series of articles sponsored by the committee on public information of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

BY E. A. GRUNSFELD JR., A.I.A.

ERNEST A. GRUNSFELD.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Any one passing through a typical American suburb can find plenty of material for speculation on the subject of house design. There will be on any one street of any one suburb something like the following succession of houses: First, perhaps, a French chateau six room bungalow, then a hundred foot lot with four houses just built for speculative selling—one Spanish design, one Tudor, one Georgian, and the other colonial; the next house is not yet built, but there is a great deal of black paper being slapped on between thin slabs of wood and it is known that this will one day be a brick veneer of no particular style at all. And so on. There will be imitation thatched roofs, turrets, outside staircases, fake half timber, stone garlands or even crenelated battlements.

The heterogeneity of this scene is undeniable. The problem is to discover how it happened, whether it is good and if not, why not. It is a banality to state that the fundamental principle of good architecture is that a building must be suited to its climatic and topographical environment, to its purpose, and to the conditions of the age in which it is built.

It is also clear that the various modes of building in the past and the styles which were adopted grew out of the particular needs and conditions in particular ages and countries. In addition, therefore, to the fact that our scene as a whole has no continuity or consistency in its external aspects, it is also true that our builders have used the forms adapted to other countries, other peoples and other purposes, and have modified them to fit American requirements without discretion.

Look a Bit Ludicrous.

An Italian villa, designed for a hot, sunny climate, looks a bit ludicrous during a snowstorm in a middle western suburb even if its occupants think it is picturesque in summer. A French chateau, designed as a country house for a Louis, is not even picturesque when scaled down to the proportions of a six room bungalow. And a humble thatched roof cottage or hut seems too primitive a shell for a dwelling that has modern plumbing, an electric dishwasher, refrigeration and all the latest equipment of our age.

Certainly, of these types of design, not each one can be suited at one time to our climate, to modern methods of construction and to modern requirements. A great many of these picturesque houses, in fact, are imitation or "fake" construction as well as bad adaptations of design. Nor are they economically built, for it is cheaper to erect a simple, direct structure than to fake an elaborate, artificial style which necessitates covering up so many incongruities. The problem of building a plain, matter of fact house in no style at all is negligible compared with that of adapting an American living plan and American construction methods to an antique, foreign shell.

The reason for this extreme fad consciousness seems to be that we are afraid straightforwardness will not bring us beauty or individuality. We have come very rapidly in close touch with a great many foreign influences through the advance in communication and photography, and we have become romantic. We like to create atmosphere as an escape from humdrumness, or perhaps as an emblem of the romance we have seen but not altogether understood.

A Desire for Romance.

For it is important to realize that the real chateaux, the real Tudor mansions, the real Italian villas, and the real Spanish houses of which we have so many copies, some even well done, were not shells of modern American living quarters. They were thoroughly consistent with their surroundings and with the requirements of the people who built them. But in a desire for romance we have copied them, made them meaningless, and have therefore forced a borrowed atmosphere, instead of accepting the distinction that comes from integrity of design.

The antidote for this problem already has been suggested. We have copied freely from the past, but we have neglected to borrow the most important contribution of past architecture—namely: the point of view which made the various styles what they were. The principle of making buildings answer the specific problems of environment, of individual needs, and of current building methods underlies each of the great architectures. Now, if we apply this logical principle to our own problem, we, too, will have made a great contribution to house design for our own age.

Furthermore, this will result in far greater economy, which, translated in terms of an actual house, means more leeway for comfort and better materials. A carefully planned house which is designed for efficiency and good proportion has none of the waste space which must come with the problem of meeting individual requirements, plus that of adhering to some foreign, inapplicable style.

Save Space—Save Money.

Economy of space, of course, is economy of actual money in building. Also, eliminating extraneous ornament means saving in time, material, and, therefore, money. It is no more expensive to design a window or door detail well than it would be to design it badly and elaborately. The difference is that well designed details make a beautiful house and make elaborate and fussy ornament unnecessary.

Finally, there is an economy in the straightforward use of material. It is cheaper to utilize building material to express the purpose for which it is intended than to attempt to make it look like something which it is not. Consequently, in this scheme of integrity and economy we can have better houses and more of any given house for the same money.

The objection may be raised that this approach will result in houses of no style and no individuality. If we analyze the factors that enter into house design, we will see that this is not the case. Individuality need not shriek from the house tops, but is achieved through the combination of preferences and the elements that make up a house in combination with each other.

Efficient Plan Essential.

In designing a house we should think first of the most efficient plan. The plans will be based on the individual needs and tastes of the owner and on the site. The exterior form of the house grows from the plan so that the proportion and arrangement will reflect the individual lives of the dwellers rather than some picture book notion. We will no longer have to sacrifice the efficiency of the plan to some preconceived idea of style, with the result that we will have a better place in which to live. Since the requirements of no two families are alike, we shall have differences in arrangement and in proportion between their houses, in addition to the appropriateness which we can achieve only by working at the problem in this direct manner.

But these slight differences will not give us beauty. There are other factors in which we may exercise our purely esthetic preferences. First, we must remember that fine proportion can always be worked out with a simple efficient plan as a basis. In addition to the scale and proportion of the whole, the proportion of windows and doors, of chimneys and eaves, must be well thought out and carefully designed. We shall then have a pleasant, fresh picture.

A Choice of Material.

In considering carefully the details of accent [windows, doors, bay windows, roof lines, etc.] and their relation to each other, we can practically eliminate ornament and still have a most distinctive house. Then we shall have a choice of material. We may have brick, we may want frame, we may want a real stone construction, or we may want even a steel and glass shell with some protective covering. There is a wide choice of material for the modern builder.

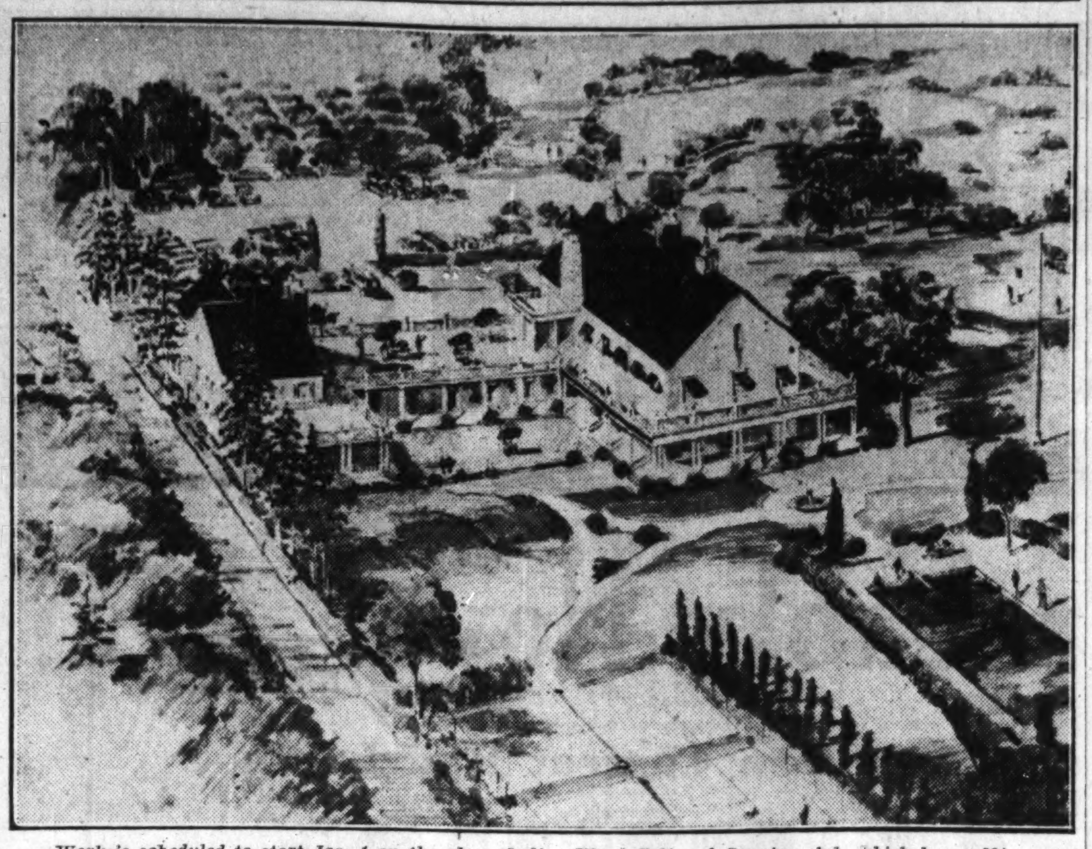
And last, we may consider color. With all the latitude of the choice of the materials we choose—their natural colors, the colors they may be painted, the color relation of the roof to the walls, of the window sash to those, of the doorways or shutters [if we use them] to each other factor—we have a great range of color choice.

There is an opportunity for infinite variety in the combination of all these elements in the design of a house: Arrangement, proportion, material, texture, and color. The result of this point of view in choosing would not be a style in a historical sense nor would it result in monotony. Instead we would have very straightforward, intelligent design with just as much variety in the houses we live in as there is in the people who build them. But in addition we would have a living architecture that is not based on fads, but on the intelligent use of the materials at hand.

1933 World's Fair Brings Restaurant Chain to City

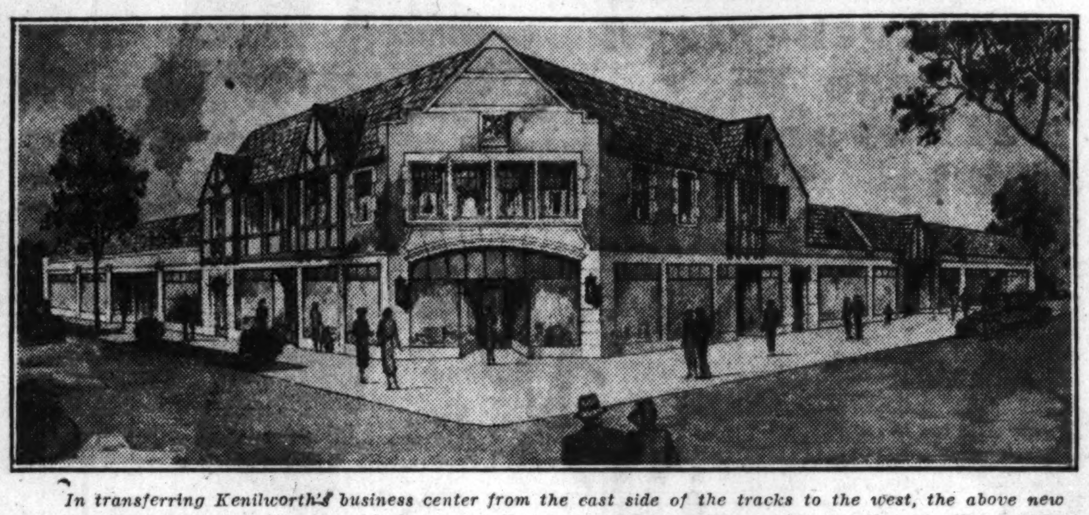
Clark-Edwards, Inc., a chain restaurant concern new to Chicago and attracted to this city on account of the coming World's Fair, has leased its second branch in the Isabella building on Van Buren between State and Wabash. The term is ten years on a basis of a guaranteed minimum rental and percentage of the gross receipts. The company's first store was opened a short time ago at 105 West Jackson boulevard. Frank C. Wells & Co. were brokers. The company contemplates having six more Chicago restaurants.

INDIAN WOOD GOLF AND COUNTRY CLUB



Work is scheduled to start Jan. 1 on the above Indian Wood Golf and Country club, which has a 524 acre tract of rolling land at Sauk trail and Western avenue, two miles south of Olympia Fields Country club. In addition to golf the club will have tennis courts, a swimming pool, etc. This will be two eighteen hole courses operated on a daily fee basis.

NORTH SHORE SUBURBAN IMPROVEMENT



In transferring Kenilworth's business center from the east side of the tracks to the west, the above new project will be the first unit of a development to be along old English lines architecturally. It will be at the northwest corner of McCormick road and Kenilworth avenue.—William T. Braun is architect. This picture was made by S. Chester Danforth.

'Free Lot' Still a Racket, but It's Called 'Advertising Lot'

Shady real estate operators have rejuvenated the familiar "free lot" racket, under the guise of "advertising lots," to the detriment of the public and the consternation of reputable dealers, according to Flint Grinnell, manager of the Chicago Better Business bureau.

"Inquiries and complaints from the public indicate that a veritable flood of free lot salesmen has descended upon loop and residential districts during the last thirty days," said Mr. Grinnell, in a report of the bureau's recent activities in the real estate field, just issued.

The report points out that the change from "free lot" to "advertising lot" is a change in name only, and the scheme remains essentially the same. The public has learned the trickery in the term "free lot" largely as a result of the publicity given the racket by reputable real estate companies, real estate boards, chambers of commerce, and better business bureaus throughout the country. The term "advertising lot" is only a subterfuge adopted by the gentry who would sell real estate under the guise of giving it away.

"Sucker lists" are obtained by these companies through prize drawings in neighborhood movies, exhibitions, food shows, etc. There visitors cast ballots bearing their names and addresses, and are later advised they have been chosen to receive an "advertising lot," the idea being they are verbally to advertise the company's subdivision. It is explained that the only cost is for transfer fees, in the neighborhood of $60 or $70.

As the transaction progresses it develops that a personal inspection of the property is necessary, and at this time the recipient of the "advertising lot" is turned over to high pressure salesmen, who knock the gift lot and endeavor to sell other high priced real estate.

Mr. Grinnell said that complaints have been made to the Better Business bureau and to the state department of registration and education, indicating that various other bad business practices are indulged in by companies using this plan. A number of persons have reported that they were induced by salesmen for these companies to sign a blank contract when making the payment, only to learn later that the payment had been credited only as a down payment on a much more expensive piece of property.

Brokers' Notes

F. L. Peterson, formerly secretary of the Oak Park Real Estate board, is now associated with Nelson, Hunt & Co. He handles real estate brokerage on downtown properties and on the near north side. For the last seven years Mr. Peterson was with Cummings and Foreman of Oak Park, who were later succeeded by John Cummings Lindop. Mr. Peterson is a graduate of the University of Illinois.

Gilbert C. Carter, formerly general manager with Percy Wilson & Co. and more recently in charge of the Chicago office of the Harold G. Ferguson corporation of Los Angeles, has returned to the Percy Wilson organization as head of the securities department.

Albert Swayne Made Head of Property Owners' Body

Albert W. Swayne, a former president of the Chicago Real Estate board, has been elected chairman of the property owners' division of that organization. He succeeds Benjamin F. Lindheimer. Isaac N. Powell was made vice chairman. Directors named were: W. B. Martin, Oscar H. Boenicke, Benjamin H. Bills, Henry E. Hedberg, Victor J. Curto, and Charles L. Sherwin.

Bridge Club Leases Pent House on East Delaware

The Delaware Pent House Bridge club has leased the seven room penthouse atop the 240 East Delaware apartment building. Miss Mellicent Martin negotiated the lease.

CALLS CHICAGO U. S. HIGH SPOT IN REAL ESTATE

That Chicago offers a better market for real estate than any other city in the United States was the declaration of W. Burke Harmon, president of the Harmon National Real Estate corporation and subsidiary companies, at the annual banquet of the Harmon National Realty Trust in the Hotel Del Prado, 53d street and Hyde Park boulevard.

"So far as our company is concerned," said Mr. Harmon, "the upward swing of the real estate market is in progress now."

In substantiation of Mr. Harmon's assertion, W. F. Zent, head of the Harmon National Realty Trust, reported that during the last sixty days his organization had closed sales in the new Roseland development at 127th and Halsted totaling $349,445, of which $55,340 was closed on Monday.

LAW FIRM PLANS TERRACES FOR ITS NEW OFFICES

Williams, Bradbury, McCaleb & Hinkle, patent and trademark attorneys, have rented approximately 10,000 square feet on the 23d floor of the new Board of Trade building, through Albert H. Wetten & Co., agents of that structure. The 23d floor being partially set back enables the tenant to make use of the adjoining roof as a terrace during the summer months. The firm has been in the Monadnock block during the entire period of its existence, twenty-nine years. It has developed one of the largest patent law practices in the United States.

F. W. Woolworth Co. Leases Lincoln Ave. Store

The F. W. Woolworth company has leased the store at 2418 Lincoln avenue from Estelle R. Eisenberg for thirty years for a reported term rental of $157,000. The Schuman Investment company was broker for both parties.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

GIVE YOUR HOUSE CHRISTMAS GIFT; IT DESERVES ONE

Wide Range of Presents Offered for Choice.

At holiday time when the spirit of Christmas giving is all pervasive, the home, which contributes so vastly to our joy of living, frequently receives generous appreciation in some "gift all its own."

Such a gift to the house, however, is indirectly a gift to all who dwell therein. From amid the wealth of modern highly developed mechanical equipment or from out of the realm of lovely and useful home furnishings and decorations, choice of any present for the home depends primarily on home needs and family purse.

Presents of this sort divide themselves into those which are purely useful, labor saving and utilitarian, those which are purely ornamental, and those which combine beauty and usefulness.

Manufacturers and merchants have made delivery and installation of most of the home's utilities and furnishings so efficient that almost any gift for the home, whatever its nature, can be delivered and installed from within 24 to 48 hours after its purchase. Where this is not posible, checks or certificates may be presented—and what house or person would refuse a gift because it came a few days after Christmas instead of before?

Items for Basement.

Most of the labor saving devices are installed in basement or kitchen; so, starting "below," one finds many presents possible to the basement which are wonder working presents in the ease and comfort they afford to those "upstairs."

There is the oil burner, the gas burner, the domestic stoker, the thermostat, the hot water heater, the incinerator, the washing machine, ironer and dryer and the humidifier. Or perhaps there is a basement playroom which needs a fireplace, a radio, a small phonograph, a work bench or gymnastic apparatus. Most of the presents possible to a basement recreation room are duplicated in living room and study above.

Coming upstairs the first feature which presents itself in the kitchen is the mechanical refrigerator. First, because almost any woman who has one would tell you it would be the last thing she would part with! It is a gift de luxe for any home which has not yet been given one.

Indeed, when one considers the kitchen it is obvious that any gift is appropriate—and appreciated by the home mistress who spends so many hours therein, especially during the holiday festivities.

How About Vacuum Cleaner?

Such a gift may be a new range or cabinet or cupboard, a new dishwasher sink or ventilator or vacuum cleaner, an up to date cooking utensil, breakfast room specialty or electrical appliance—and what a wealth of these appliances there are to choose from! It may be kitchen furnishings, folding sets, tables, chairs, and stools.

Emerging from the utility spots of the home, to the living room, dining room, and hall, the choice of gifts is legion.

What room needs especially a new chair or couch, a bookcase, a rug, a table, a smoking stand or lamp?

What room is waiting patiently for fresh draperies or mirrors, pictures or desk?

What radiators call for handsome inclosures or shields, what corner for a cupboard, radio, piano?

Fittings for Fireplace.

Perhaps the fireplace needs new fittings that its smouldering coals or leaping logs may be given added beauty on wintry nights? Or maybe the family has been wishing for a long time for a new gas or electric grate in period design, with a new electric clock on the mantel above.

Dining room specialty gifts include, besides the conventional dining room furniture, such articles of table decorations as gleaming glassware and silver, snowy linens and lovely china, flowers and plants, real or artificial, candles and vases.

Or if the entrance to the home lacks the beauty of forged hardware there are luring knockers, softly shining lanterns illuminating house numbers and mail boxes to bestow.

The bath, the bedroom, the child's room, the study—all these are deserving spots to make presents to, if they lack any attractive article of furnishing or equipment.

Bath or Movie.

A shower for the bath or a new plumbing fixture, a moving picture machine or a set of shelves, a desk or couch or reading lamp for the child's room; closet equipment or wardrobe, vanity or disappearing bed—to accommodate the extra guest at holiday time—for the bedroom.

As for gifts for "modernizing," it may be said that New Year's time isn't the only time for resolutions.

These next months are months when it will be possible to do much desired interior remodeling of various kinds; when porches may be inclosed, new floors laid, walls freshly decorated, new rooms created from erstwhile waste spaces. A check in the home stocking to cover such remodeling will come into its "own" quite nicely during the after Christmas months that lie ahead.

ENJOYMENT FOR ALL

A present to the home at Xmas time is at once impersonal and yet intimate, since it is a gift for all to enjoy. Whether this present is an oil burner or a mechanical refrigerator, a long desired piece of furniture or a check to cover some such modernizing as was achieved when the above old frame house received a handsome coat of brick veneer and a proportionate new lease on life—the result is the same. All those who dwell therein are sharers in the holiday remembrance!

HOW TO INSURE PLENTY OF HOT WATER FOR HOME

Various Systems in Use Explained.

BY HOMER GRANT.

Home owners at this season are, many of them, interested in the various ways and means by which they can have plenty of hot water for bathrooms and kitchen at the most reasonable cost.

"What kind of a heater can I use with a hot water system or a hot air system?" or "Is there any way to heat water through the boiler with a vapor or steam system?" are questions often asked.

Briefly, some type of fire pot coil or heater may be used with a warm air furnace or with a hot water heating plant.

With steam or vapor heating plants one may use an indirect water heating system. There are also heaters of the indirect type, recently offered, for use with any automatically fired hot water heating boiler.

Improvements Noted.

For the encouragement of the home owner contemplating one of the fire pot coils with his warm air furnace or hot water heating plant, one can say that there have been many improvements made in these coils in the last few years.

Formerly the coils were out stock pipe and the construction of the pipe, joined by elbows, had certain disadvantages. Moreover, the coils did not work with all types of fuel.

Now a number of direct heaters have been manufactured for all types of hot water heaters and warm air furnaces, and for use whether soft or hard coal or coke is the fuel. They are made in different sizes and types, and of cast iron, galvanized iron or brass.

As for the indirect heaters, to be used with a steam or vapor system, they come in many different sizes, with heating capacity of from 30 to 1,600 gallons. There are heaters of this type to be used in gas or oil fired systems, and for these heaters for the automatically fired boiler, with gas or oil, one can have year around domestic hot water without extra equipment or separate fire.

An Indirect Heater.

Lastly, one new development of interest is the indirect heater for use with a hot water heating system—provided that the boiler is automatically fired, by oil or gas.

This last type of heater possesses a number of interesting points in that it does double duty, having also an automatic uniform heat control. The burner operates not from room temperature but boiler temperature, and the room temperature [by thermostat] operates a valve which controls the flow of water to radiators.

Bootleg Plumbing Devices Usually Are Defective

Bootleg plumbing fixtures should be avoided, for they have defects, being the culls and seconds which cannot be disposed of through the normal channels of trade.

CACKLING HENS SING PROSPERITY FOR 2 BROTHERS

Indiana Chicken Farm Pays Dividends.

An abiding faith in specialized agriculture that wasn't stilled with a distinct failure in an attempt to grow hogs while the prices kept falling to unthought of levels several years ago has put two Indiana brothers on what they consider a paved road to success with no apparent detours. They are in the poultry business at Atwood, Ind., seven miles west of Warsaw.

In January they expect their four flocks of more than 5,000 laying hens and pullets will be producing around 3,000 eggs per day. They also predict prices will be better than they are at present. But in spite of the present low prices they are cheerful and confident that the methods they are following are practical and profitable.

Save $20,000 Since Start.

Hobart and Russell Creighton have saved or reinvested in less than six years a total of around $20,000 in addition to comfortable living. They make no boast of this fact, but cite it in proof of their contention that methods mean the difference between grief and profits.

Hobart began an agricultural experiment when he bought hogs at 23 cents a pound and fed them corn at $2 a bushel, thinking the price would remain high and that the breeding stock he bought would produce young hogs worth equally as much per pound. The price per pound went down to around 6½ cents and he sold what he had to his brother and obtained a job teaching school.

As prices will, more changes occurred, and Russell was able to finish the hogs off and ship them to market at around 19 cents a pound. Neither of them had much faith in hog raising, however, and yet they still thought agriculture had interesting phases.

The hog money went into some equipment, but the two men literally started from "scratch" in the chicken business. They had to wait until marketing six acres of potatoes that first summer before they could pay for the hundreds of white leghorns they had bought.

"Since then we haven't been worried about whether it's going to pay," says Hobart. "The next year we built another house and added more chickens, and the year after another house and then another. Now each house has between 1,200 and 1,400 laying hens in addition to some cocks and cockerels. We have two electric incubators and expect within the next few months to sell baby chicks enough to add around $6,000 to our 1931 income."

Hens Rise in Early Morn.

True farmers are these more than 5,000 white leghorns. They arise betwene 3 and 3:30 a. m. when electric lights blink into their roosts. Down they come to attack the feed mixture and the ever running water supply. Even when they go back to roost at the end of daylight they have put in around thirteen hours of eating, exercising, and laying eggs.

More than a ton a day of feed is required to pacify their appetites. A special formula devised by the brothers is mixed up at a mill in Atwood only a mile away. The supplies are purchased in ton to carload lots and mixed as needed.

Simple are the houses in which the flocks roost, scratch, sing, and cackle. Just a plain gable roof with two rows of windows, one near the peak and another near the edge on the south exposure with additional windows and ventilators in the south siding. Zero weather requires the setting up of one or two small stoves in each of the houses, but otherwise a half inch fiber insulation on ceiling and walls keeps the chickens warm enough.

The two incubators were purchased in order to keep down costs of obtaining pullets. But, in addition to the 15,000 or more baby chicks that provide new laying stock each year, the brothers have built up a baby chick business which has mounted to sales of between 65,000 and 80,000 each year.

WHAT SORT OF A TRIP DID YOU HAVE?
WHAT IS YOUR OPINION OF THE UNEMPLOYMENT SITUATION?
JUST A LITTLE SMILE, NOW-
HOW DO YOU LIKE THE AMERICAN GIRLS?
HEY!
LEAPIN' LIZARDS! I'VE GOT A LIST O' POOR FOLKS SEVEN MILES LONG- BUT IT'S ALMOST CHRISTMAS- I COULD NEVER GET ALL TH' PRESENTS TO 'EM IN TIME- I'LL ASK "DADDY" WHAT TO DO- HE'LL FIGGER OUT A WAY- HE CAN DO ANYTHING!
SEE, I'VE GOT ALL TH' NAMES AND ADDRESSES AND WHAT THEY NEED- FOOD AND CLOTHES AND TOYS AND CANDY-
HM-M-M-- YOU CERTAINLY HAVE BEEN BUSY- YES- YOU'VE DONE A MIGHTY GOOD JOB- NOW THE PROBLEM IS TO GET THEM DELIVERY ON THIS STUFF, EH?
HELLO, SPIKE? THIS IS WARBUCKS- YEAH- I WANT TO BORROW YOUR PLACE TILL CHRISTMAS- YEAH- GARAGE, TRUCKS, WAREHOUSE, THE WHOLE WORKS- AND SEND ABOUT TWENTY OF YOUR MEN AROUND- I'LL MEET 'EM THERE RIGHT AWAY- THANKS-
BRING THE LIST, ANNIE- WE HAVE NO TIME TO LOSE- HERE'S THE CAR-
THE TROUBLE WITH SO MUCH CHARITY IS THAT THOSE WHO GIVE ARE TOO LAZY TO REALLY GIVE INTELLIGENTLY- I SEE YOU'VE DISCOVERED CASES THAT MOST PEOPLE WOULD MISS- THOSE TOO HOPELESS TO COMPLAIN-GEE- THIS IS RIGHT IN THE MIDDLE OF THE POOREST PART OF TOWN-
YES- THIS GARAGE AND WAREHOUSE WILL BE HANDY TO ALL THOSE FOLKS ON YOUR LIST-
HELLO- IS THIS THE MANAGER OF THE GIGANTIC DEPARTMENT STORE? THIS IS WARBUCKS- I WANT YOU TO OPEN YOUR STORE TONIGHT AND PUT ON A SPECIAL SHIFT- I'LL EXPLAIN LATER- THANKS-
WELL, BOYS- SPIKE SENT YOU OVER, EH? FIRST I WANT TO TALK TO THE TRUCK DRIVERS- GOT A JOB FOR YOU-
YOU'LL GO TO THE GIGANTIC DEPARTMENT STORE THIS EVENING, LOAD UP AND BRING EVERYTHING HERE- ANNIE'LL BE IN CHARGE OF EVERYTHING-
NOW, YOU MEN- TAKE THIS LIST TO THE GIGANTIC DEPARTMENT STORE- FILL EACH ORDER HERE AND BRING ALL THE STUFF HERE TO THE WAREHOUSE ON OUR TRUCKS- WE'LL MAKE DELIVERIES FROM HERE- IS THAT CLEAR?
FINDING WHO TO GIVE TO AND KNOWING WHAT TO GIVE WAS THE BIG JOB, ANNIE, AND YOU DID THAT-SHUX- THAT WAS EASY- IT WAS GETTIN' TH' STUFF TO FOLKS THAT HAD ME STOPPED-
NOW YOU REALIZE WHAT AN ORGANIZATION SANTA CLAUS MUST HAVE TO CARE FOR ALL HIS CUSTOMERS-
GEE- AND WE'RE JUST HELPIN' HIM OUT WITH A FEW POOR FOLKS- HE'S GOT MILLIONS TO LOOK OUT FOR, AND NEW ONES EVERY YEAR- NO WONDER HE MISSES A FEW FOLKS NOW AND THEN-

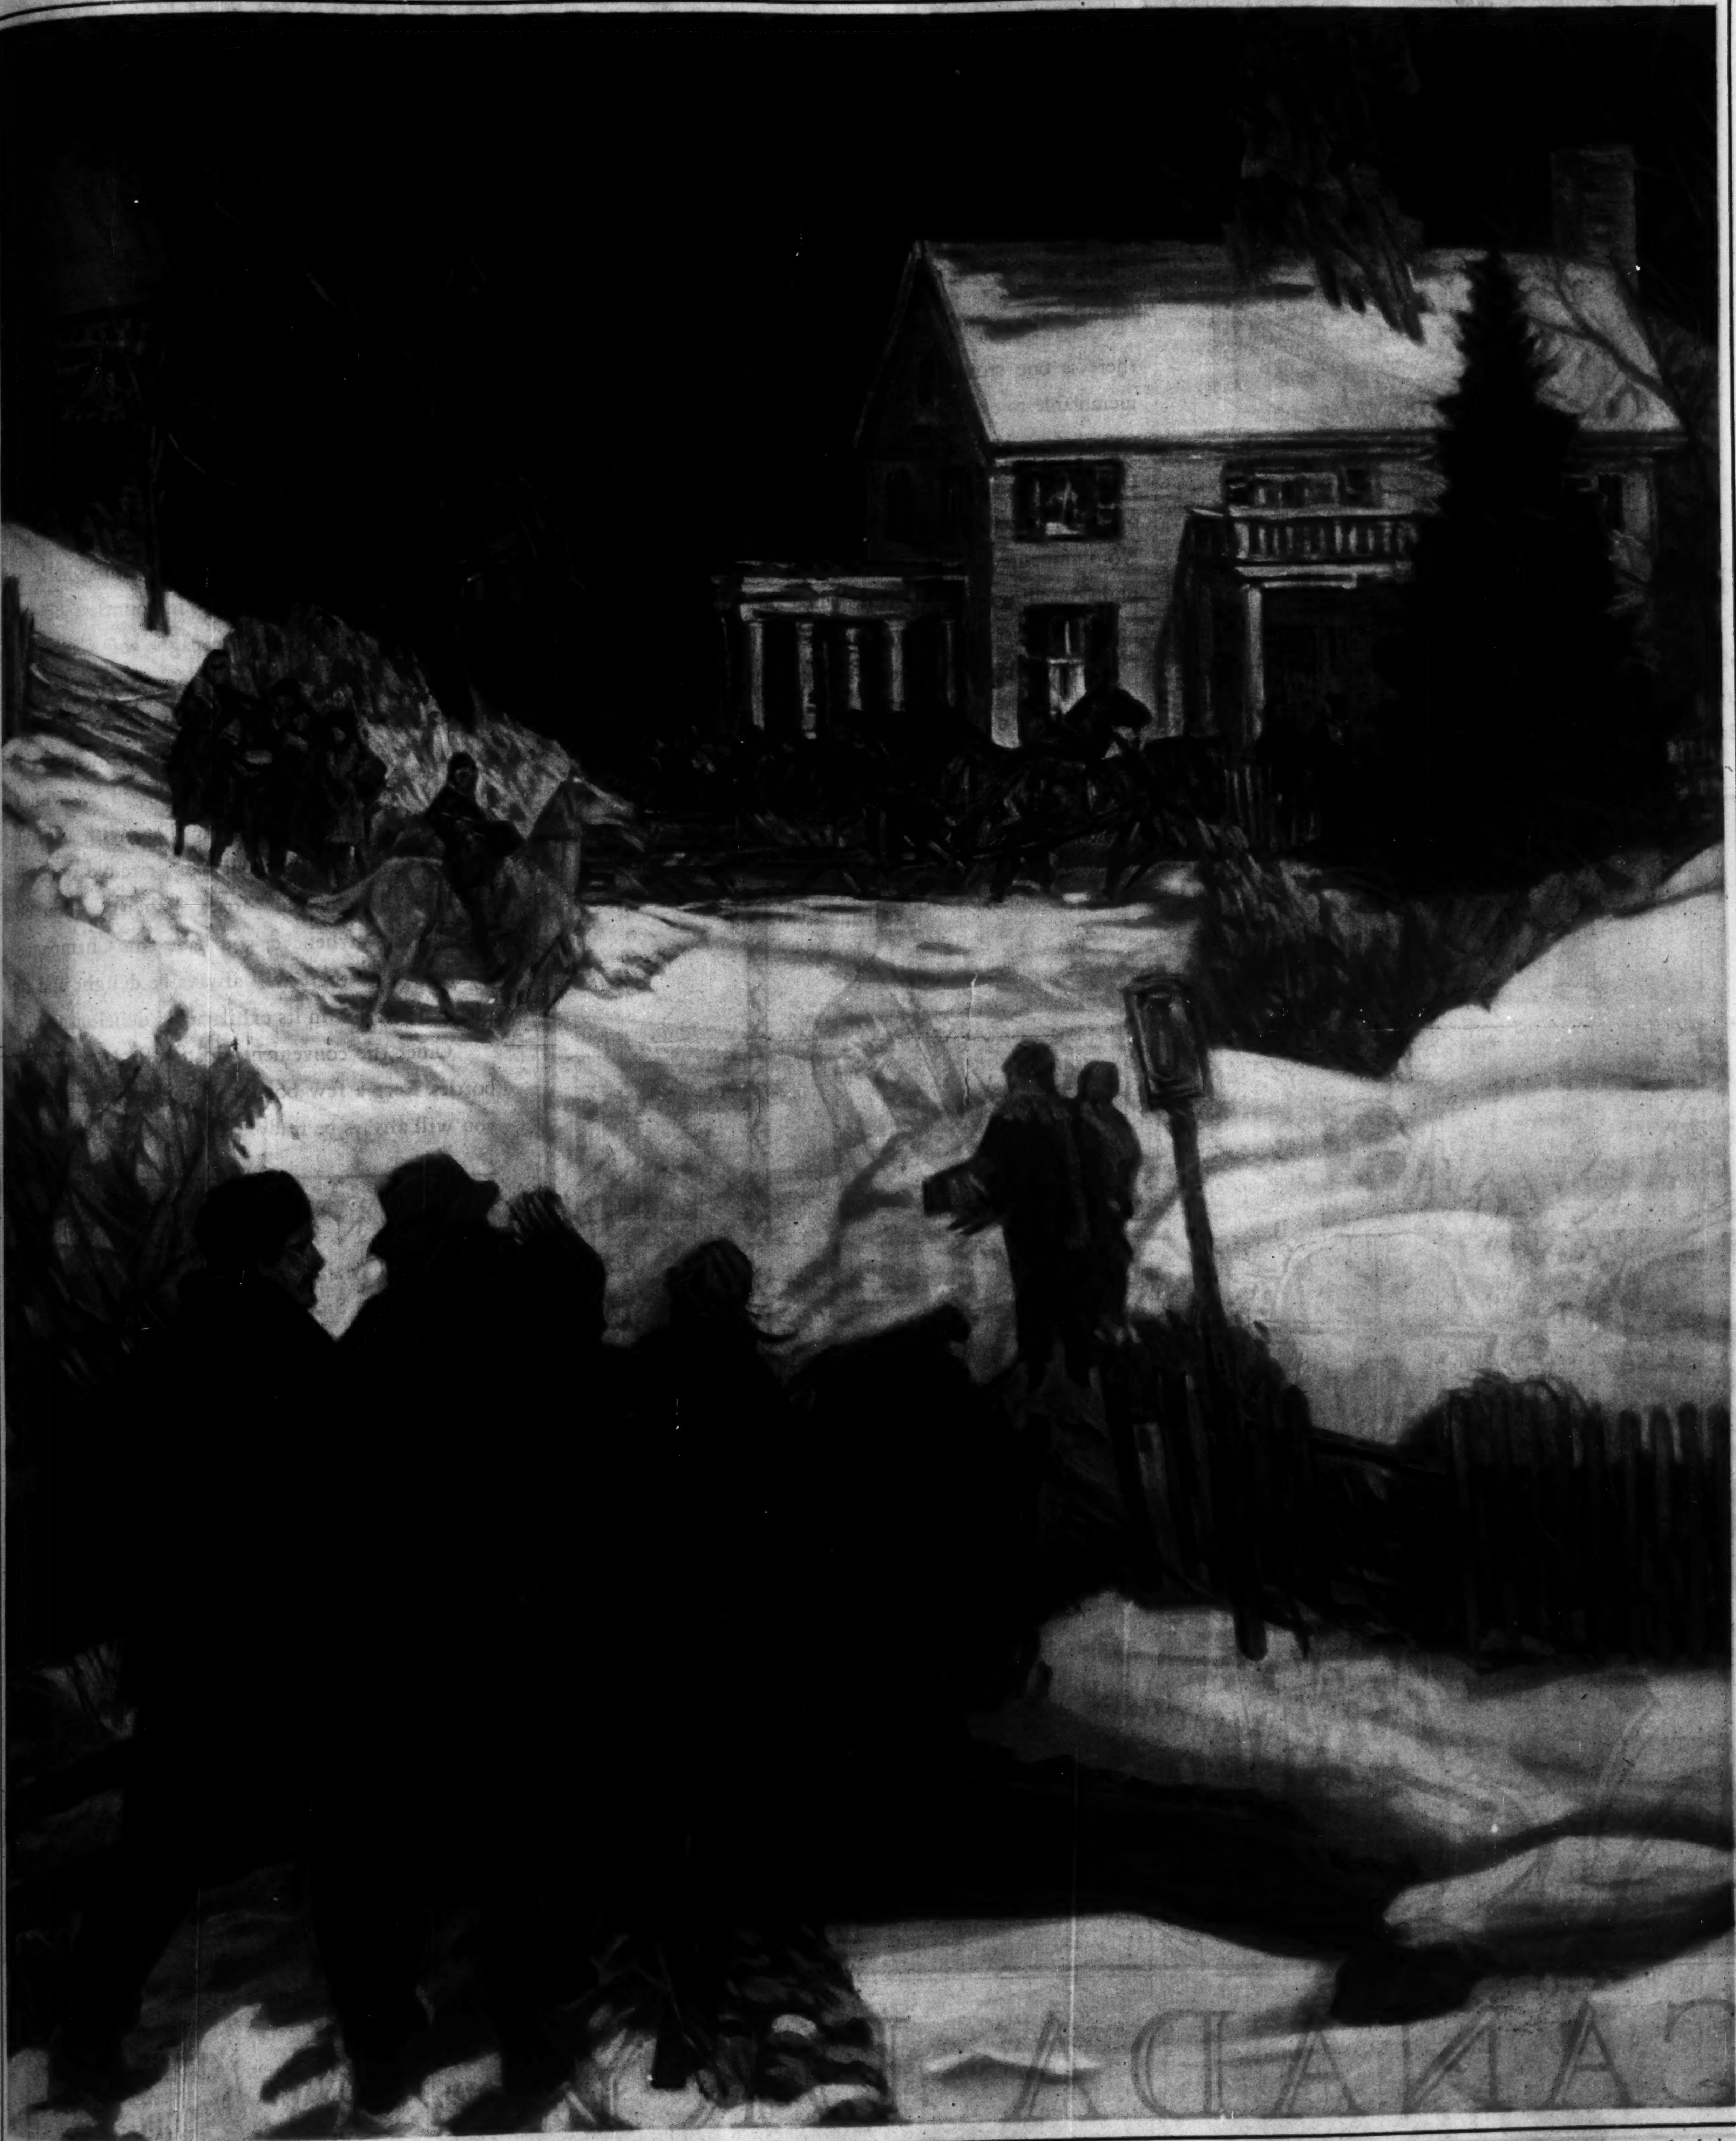
At Christmas Play and Make Good Cheer, for Christmas Comes but Once a Year



MAKE WAY FOR GOOD ST. NICK, ROUND LITTLE, JOLLY LITTLE, RED-CHEEKED MAN! Hang the window with holly wreath, and light it with twinkling taper; above the doorway let the inviting mistletoe nestle; deck the evergreen with shimmering finery of silver and gold and red and green, and top it with a gleaming star. Let hearts be warm as days are cold; let age be jolly, let youth be gay; for the gladdest season of the year is at hand! The merry glow of such a spirit, the glow of the old-fashioned Yuletide, pervades "Christmas Party," by Carl R. Krafft of Chicago. On this page next week will be reproduced a kindred European scene, "Danube Canal," by Olive Bigelow, depicting winter in a continental setting. It will be of interest to contrast the new world simplicity of today's color page with the old world quaintness of that of next Sunday.

Three magic words that lift the curtain to the climax of Christmas Day. And whether that feast is built around America's magnificent bird—the turkey—or is truly English with prime roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, there is one crowning touch that will make the event memorable to everybody—Canada Dry Ginger Ale.

A wonderful drink

Here, indeed, is a rare beverage. No tender firm-fleshed oyster on its bed of crushed ice is more elusive in its flavor. No plump, green olive is more zestful in its tang. No stately plum pudding is more full-bodied in its goodness. No brilliant Christmas morn is more dazzling in its sparkle.

Bring those dark, green bottles, chilled through and through, to the table. Fill the slim-stemmed glasses slowly. What a delicate, bouquet! What color—radiant amber! Then for the thrill! Lift the glass to your lips for a sip. Your taste will be aroused instantly by a delicate, mellow flavor that is not matched by any other ginger ale made.

For the holidays

All over the world they will be drinking Canada Dry Ginger Ale on Christmas Day. In regal dining halls . . . in great hotels and the best clubs . . . in countless homes . . . there you will find this Champagne of Ginger Ales. Yes, your Christmas dinner is an ideal setting for Canada Dry. But, in addition, every day offers opportunities to serve this fine old ginger ale. Throughout this holiday season when friends drop in to wish you the season's greetings, welcome them with a sparkling glass of Canada Dry. Serve it like a rare old wine when you give dinners and parties. Whenever you drink Canada Dry—whenever you have this Champagne of Ginger Ales—there will always be delight and complete satisfaction in its exhilarating deliciousness.

Order the convenient Hostess Package of twelve bottles. Keep a few bottles in your refrigerator. Then you will always be ready for any social occasion.

SANTA CLAUS' UNDERSTUDIES HAVE A SNACK—Some of St. Nick's helpers, who collect funds for the Volunteers of America on the street corners of Chicago, gather for lunch at headquarters at 206 S. Wabash avenue. Perhaps some of these days, when the original Santa Claus is ready to retire, one of these will take his place. Who knows?

Will your Lips look lovely three hours hence?

THIS NEW FOLDING LIPSTICK BY LENTHÉRIC COMES IN THREE FLATTERING COLOR TONES THAT WILL NOT FADE OR RUB OFF

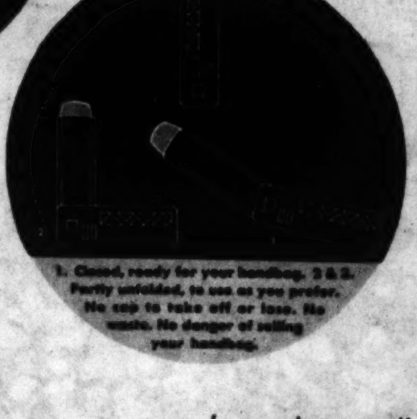
NO matter how satisfied you may be with the lipstick now in your handbag, you should try at once this unique new creation from Paris! ● Color authorities everywhere are acclaiming it. Paris has described it as the first original development in lipsticks in more than eleven years! ● In the illustration at the left you can see its clever folding construction. Like a tiny pen-knife, it is instantly ready for use . . . and as quickly ready for your handbag. ● But to appreciate the true quality of the lipstick itself you must use it! You must see with your own eyes the three lovely, flatteringly natural color tones in which it is offered. You must feel with your own lips its soft, creamy texture. And you must actually experience its amazing lasting qualities . . . a feature that in itself would differentiate it from all competitors. ● This Lenthéric Lipstick, priced at $1.50, is obtainable with other Lenthéric creations at selected department stores and druggists . . . Your choice of two finishes . . . silver and gold or silver and black.

Lenthéric PARIS
Ses Parfums



1. Closed, ready for your handbag. 2 & 3. Partly unfolded, to use as you prefer. No cap to take off or lose. No waste. No danger of soiling your handbag.

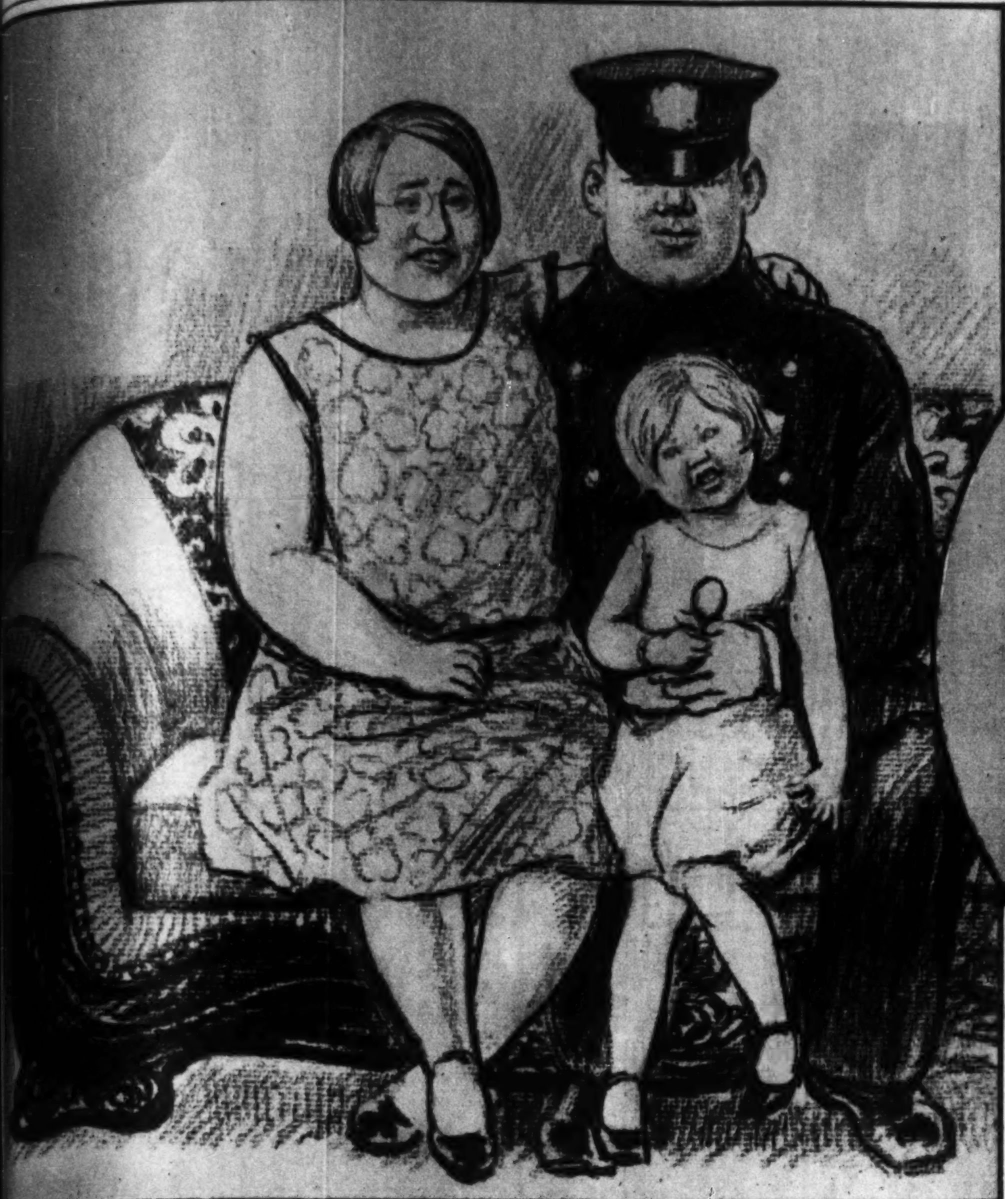
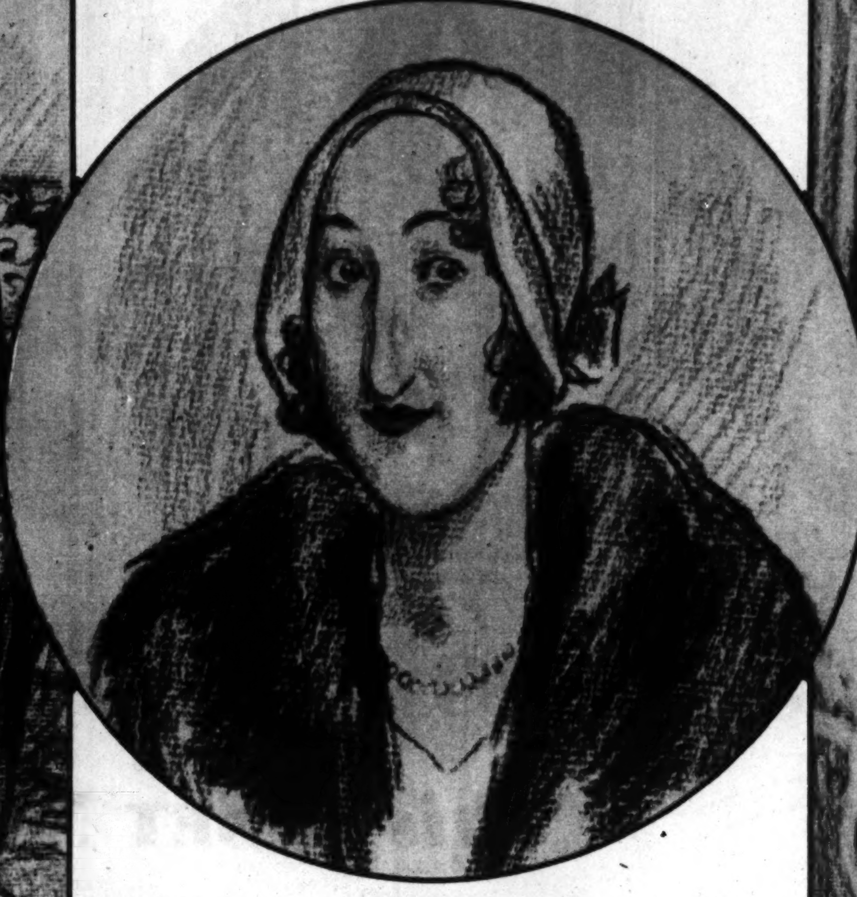
Ladies of the Tabloid

By W. E. Hill

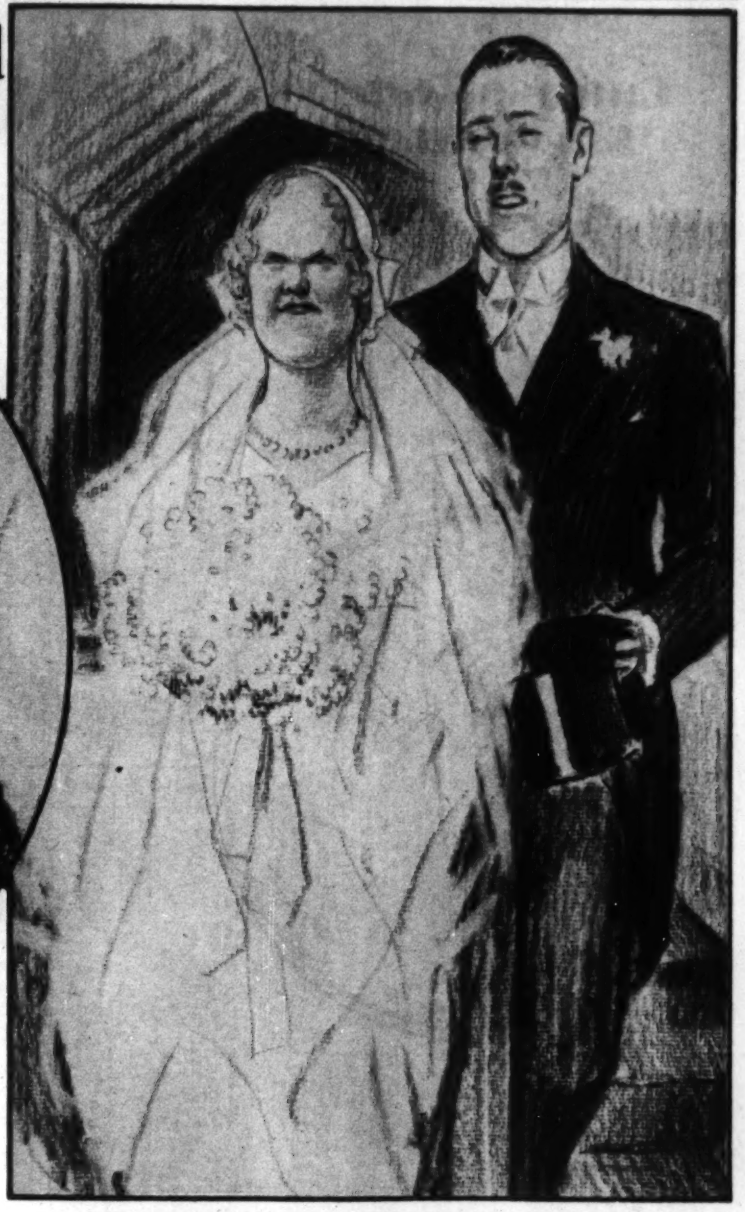
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]



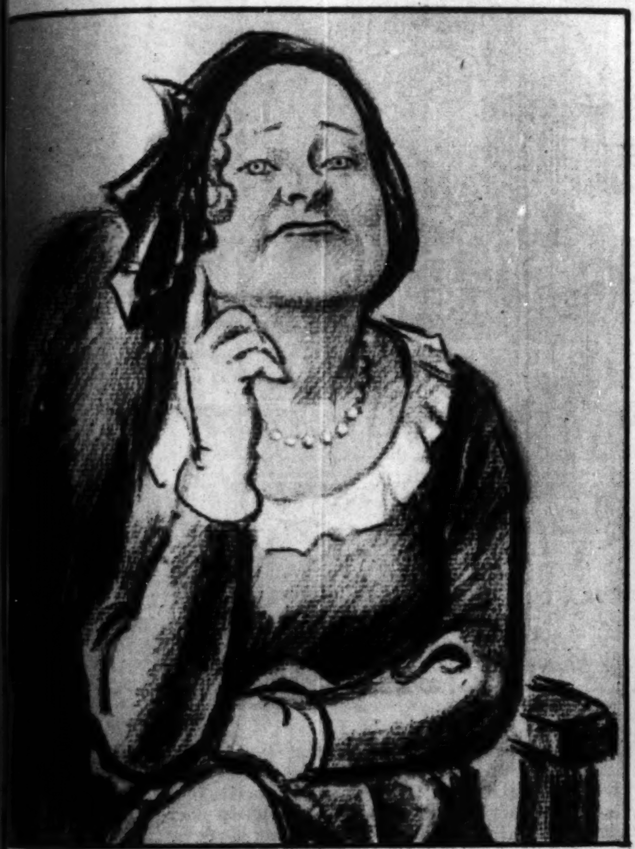
The Rescued Housewife. Childish prank led little Dorothea Mae Sokolonsky to blow out gas in range and escaping fumes nearly choked mama and grandma, asleep in next room. Patrolman Peter Satchel of the vice squad revived them with pulmotor and fire department rescued aged couple from roof. Picture shows Mrs. Patsy Sokolonsky, Dorothea Mae and Patrolman Satchel after the rescue.



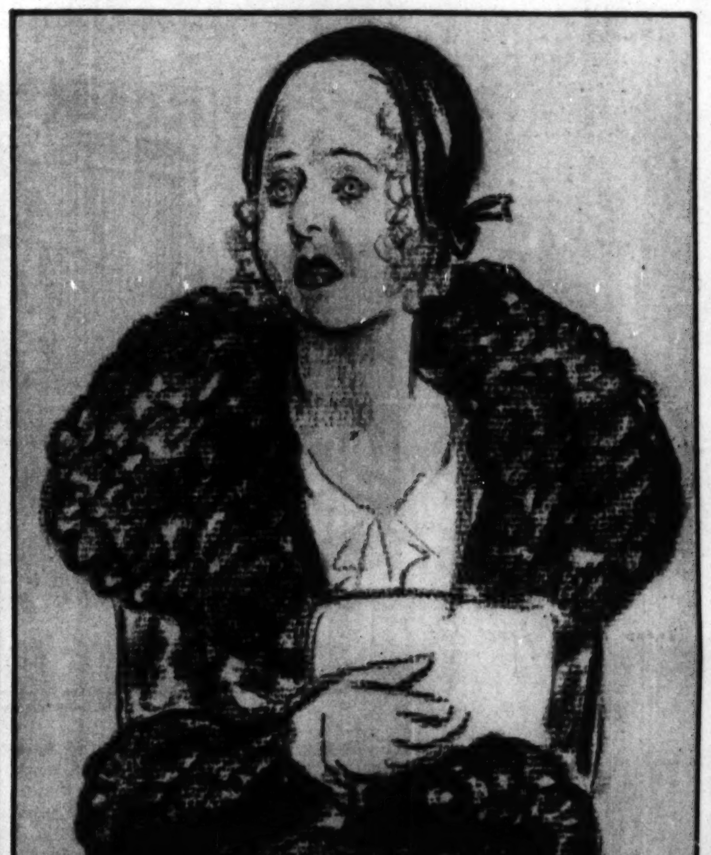
The Inquiring Reporter's Victim. Question: Are you in favor of state co-operation of public works, or would you regard same as just a big nuisance? Miss Zelma Dawn, home girl, 222½ Finnegan boulevard, says, "Y-es, and then again no. It all depends on the person. I am practically a new woman since my operation, but others might feel different after a hospital experience. I think, however, that the American girl can take care of herself in such matters better than foreigners."



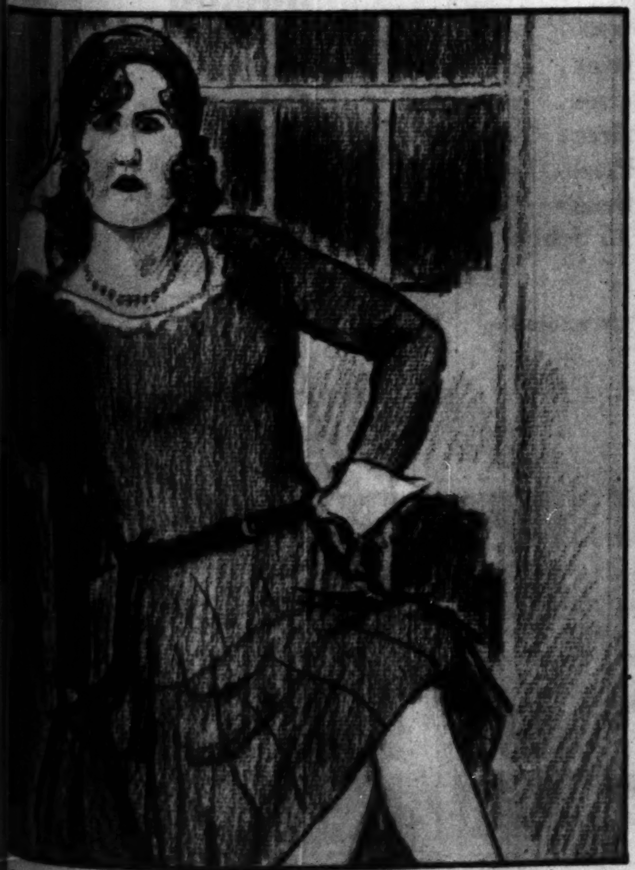
The Society Bride. Mr. and Mrs. Perry Sneeyer-Smythe (she was Winifred Blackhead, daughter of Mrs. Subpoena Blackhead of Bar Harbor and Evanston) leaving the church of St. Bedelia after the ceremony.



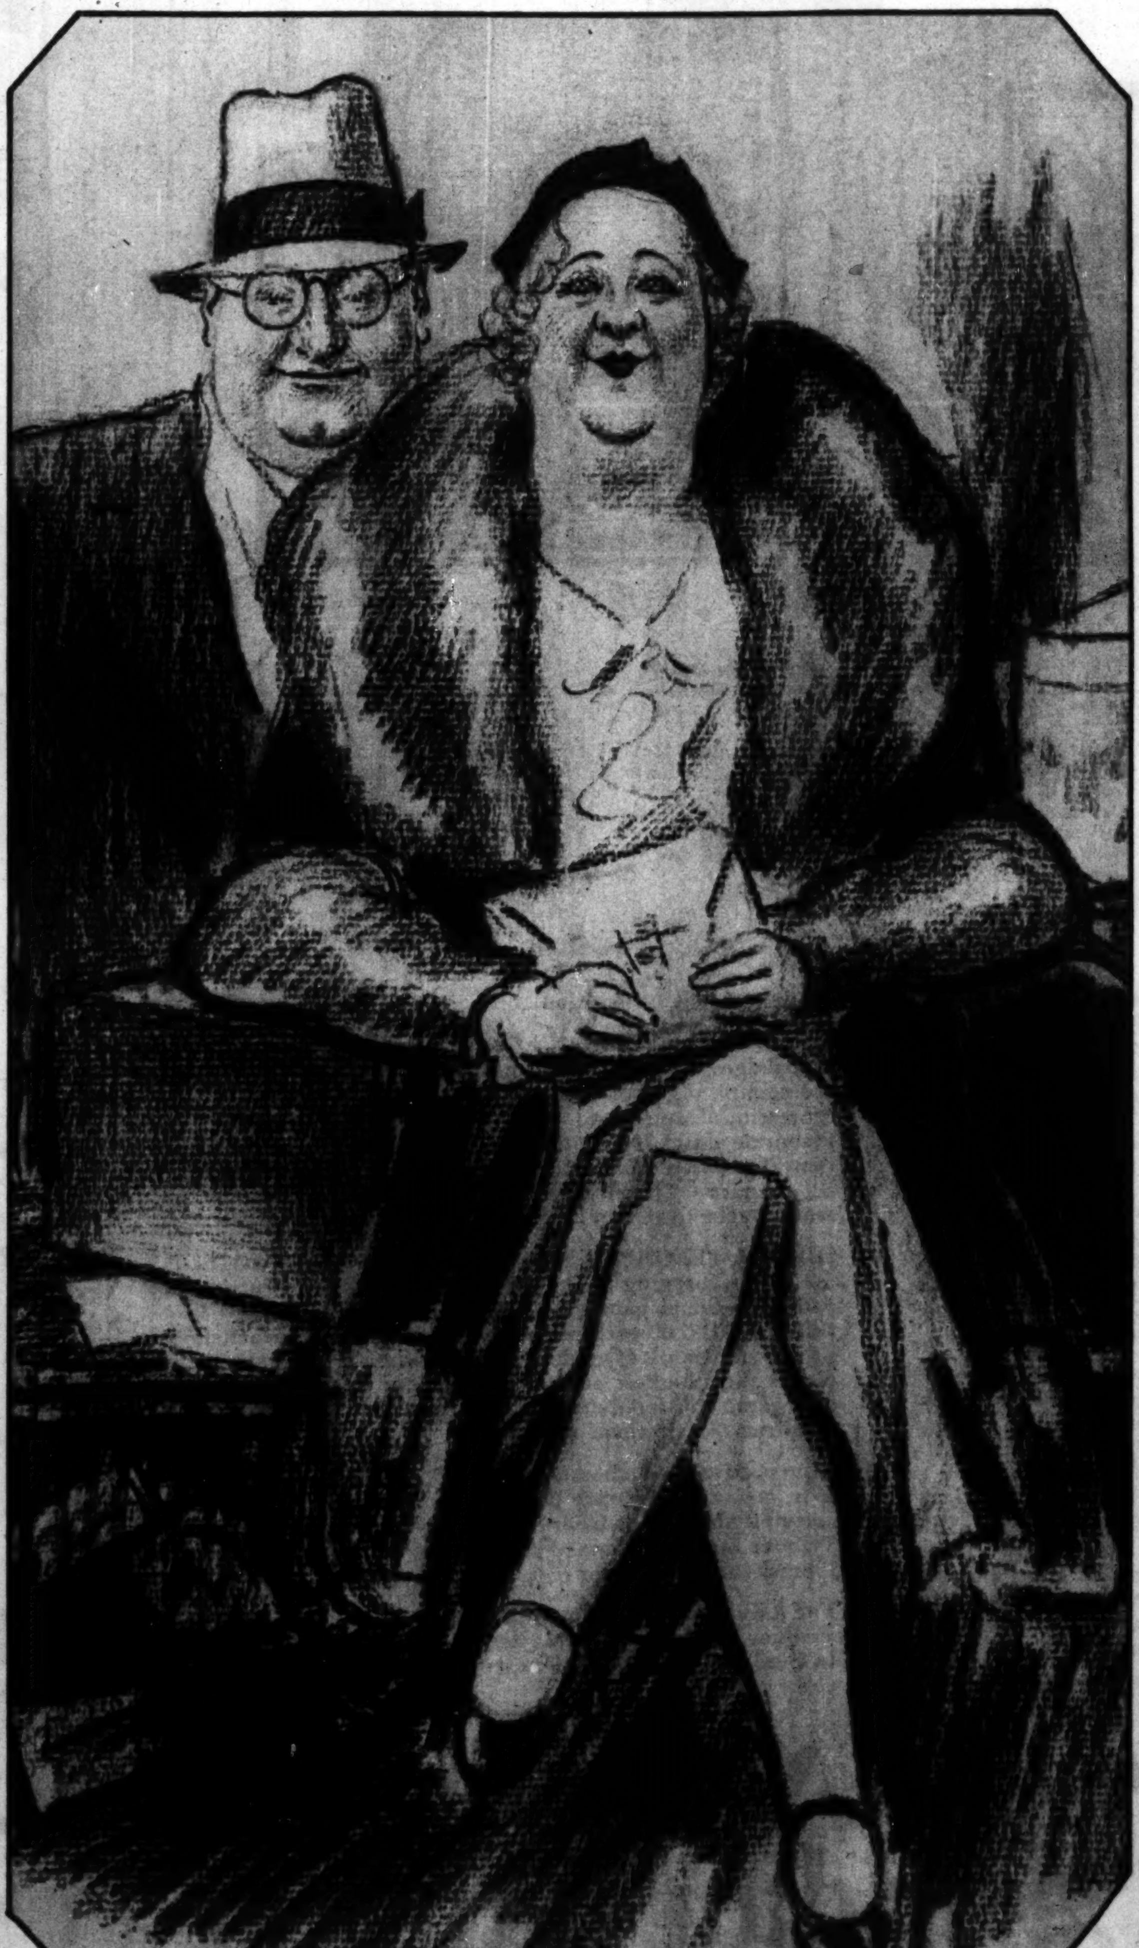
The Wronged Wife. Charging her husband with cruelty, intemperance, bestiality, non-support and incompatibility, Mrs. Jobyna ("Billie") McGillicuddy served legal process against the socially prominent banker playboy, Isadore S. McGillicuddy, naming several members of a burlesque troupe. Mrs. McGillicuddy asserted that her husband had frequently beaten her and blackened her eyes before guests to humiliate her and had otherwise mistreated her, even going so far as to throw coal at her while a New Year's party was in progress. Mr. McGillicuddy made counter charges, including attempted manslaughter and arson.



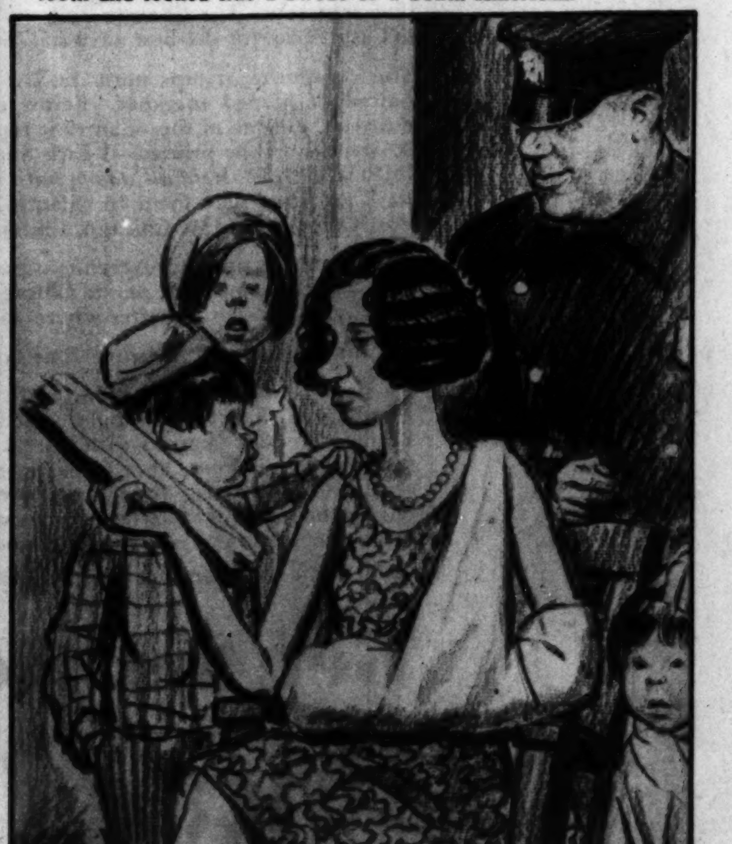
The Pay Roll Victim. When stranger outside west side bank accosted Pearl Mogelman and demanded pay roll of Hit-or-Miss Underwear concern, she screamed "Police" and handed him certified check for $3,000. Passersby gave chase and police took little girl who looked something like robber into custody. She was later released when Miss Mogelman failed to identify her. "I believe I would know the man if I saw him," said Pearl at police headquarters. "He had only one eye and one tooth and looked like a Swede or a South American."



The Gun Girl. Dottie Hooey, night club entertainer, driven almost to the verge of insanity by the unemployment situation (her husband, a dope peddler, had been out of work since July), held up a patriotic parade and, after rifling paraders of their valuables, attempted to set fire to her victims.

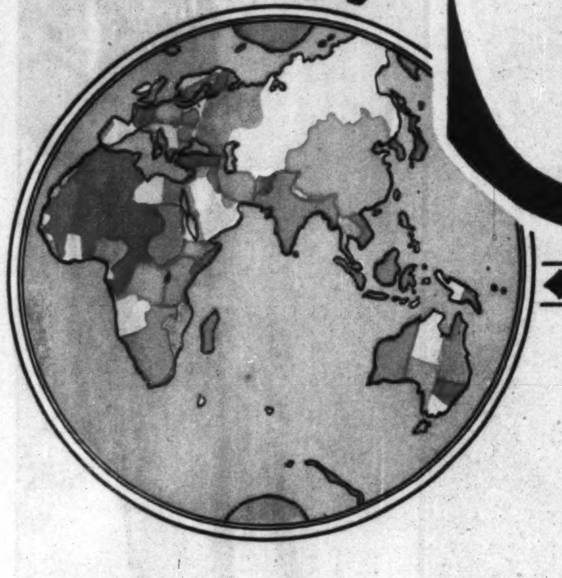


The Returned Celebrity. "Europe is dead artistically," said Mme. Lisa Tootsey, the opera diva, as she disembarked from the Ile de France yesterday, "and American men are the handsomest men in the world!" Mme. Tootsey, accompanied by her husband, Monroe Fishbone, the collar button king, is en route to Hollywood, where she will act and sing in the talkie version of "Goetterdaemmerung" (to be called "I Guess It Must Be Love").



The Accident Victim. Disregarding traffic lights, Mrs. Dolly Goldpin attempted to coast down incline in baby's carriage on way to butcher's, colliding with huge furniture van. She sustained fractured arm as result. Furniture van and driver were demolished. Mrs. Goldpin is shown with souvenir.

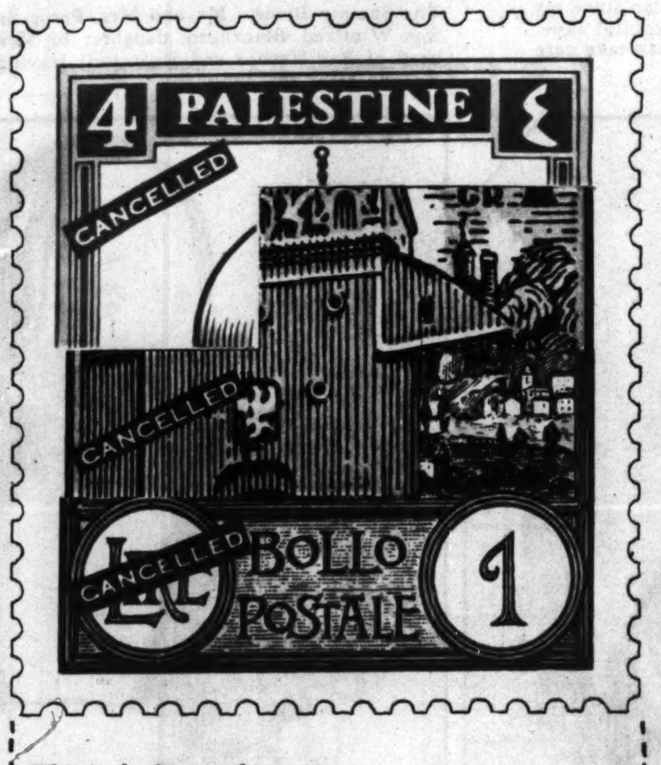
CHICAGO TRIBUNE STAMP ALBUM



STAMPS OF THE NATIONS

$10,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES

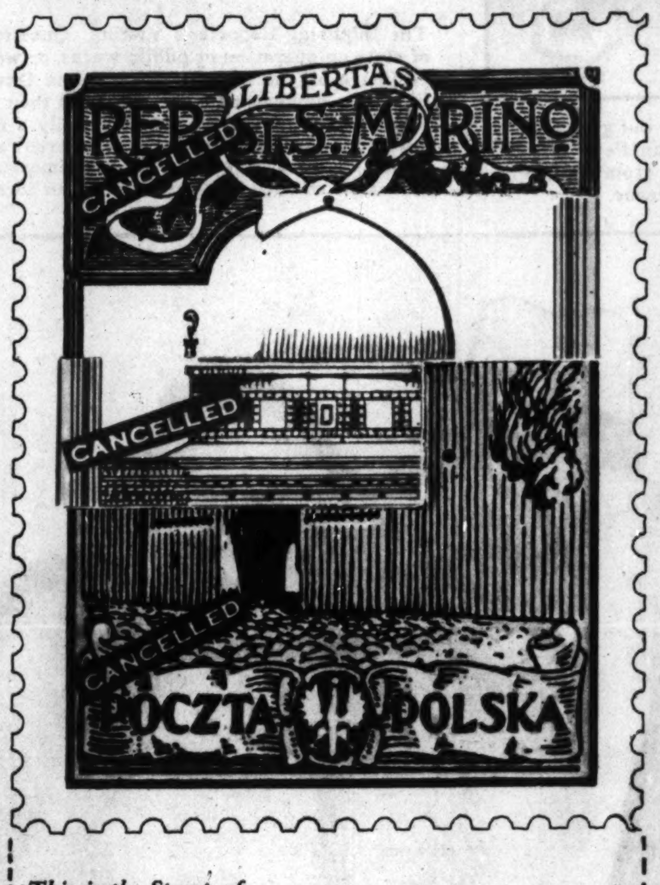
This is SET No. 12



This is the Stamp of:

Write name of Nation here

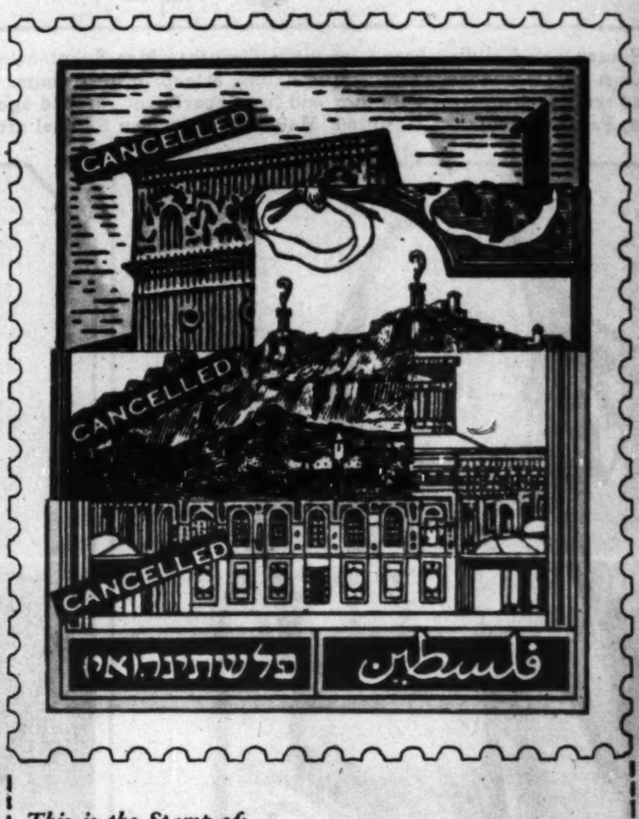
CLUE: A territory lying west of the River Jordan, formerly a vilayet of the Turkish province of Syria is represented by the upper part of this stamp. The middle portion is representative of a Republic ruled by a President elected by the National Assembly which consists of a Senate and a Diet called the "Sejm." The lower part is of the stamp of a European Republic with an area of but 38 square miles.



This is the Stamp of:

Write name of Nation here

CLUE: A state founded in the 4th Century A. D., and which became a republic in 951 A. D., is represented by the upper part of this stamp. The center part of this stamp indicates a country administered by Great Britain under a mandate of the League of Nations. The lower portion represents a European republic which has a "corridor" to the sea.



This is the Stamp of:

Write name of Nation here

CLUE: The upper part of this stamp represents a European nation formed after the World War from parts of Austria-Hungary, Russia and Germany. The central part is of a stamp issued by a European republic which is completely surrounded by Italian territory. The lower part represents a region which includes within its boundaries the former districts of Samaria and upper and lower Galilee.

• THE RULES •

1. Every Sunday for 14 Sundays, the Chicago Tribune will print in this "Stamp Album," a set of 3 composite "Stamps of the Nations." Each set of stamps, when cut apart and assembled properly, will make complete stamps. The public is invited to put the stamps together and name the countries they represent. The Chicago Tribune will pay $10,000.00 in Cash Prizes for the best answers! See Prize List at right.

2. The composite stamps must be cut out, assembled and pasted or pinned together. Below each stamp must be written the name of the country it represents. A total of 42 stamps will be printed—3 each Sunday for 14 Sundays. IMPORTANT! Hold all stamps until you have the complete set of 42. Then send them to "Stamps," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.

3. This contest is open to everyone—men, women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. It does not matter where you live.

4. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

5. All stamps must be in by midnight 21 days after Set No 14 is published. Each entry should be sent by First Class Mail, Postage Prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department. A letter must be sent with your entry giving your name and address and telling the name of your favorite Stamp and why you like it best. Letters must not exceed 50 words.

   Contestants may send as many sets as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one prize. No entries will be returned.

6. The judging will be based upon the accuracy of putting the stamps together, correctly naming the countries they represent, neatness, and merit of the accompanying letter. Elaborate entries will receive no greater consideration than the most simple entries. The prime requirement will be accuracy. Therefore any school boy or girl has the same chance to obtain a prize as any man or woman.

7. SCHOOL TEACHERS, NOTE: To interest School Teachers in encouraging their pupils to enter this instructive and educational game, the Chicago Tribune will award 5 prizes of $100.00 each to the teachers of public, parochial or private schools of grammar or high school grades, whose pupils rank highest among the winners. Teachers! This new game will familiarize your pupils with many foreign countries. Help them win!

8. You need not purchase the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the stamps from the Tribune and assemble the stamps from the copies you have made. The Tribune may be examined at any of its Offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

9. The judges will be a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Entrants agree to accept their decision as final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

Infant Welfare to Benefit from Theater Party

Dec. 29 Is Date Set for Annual Affair.

By Roberta Nangle.

THE principal charity benefit scheduled for the near future is the Kenwood Social Service club's theater party at the performance of "Berkeley Square" at the Selwyn on Monday evening, Dec. 29. Yes, we know it seems that life is just one benefit after another nowadays, but this particular one deserves some extra consideration.

In the first place the Kenwood Social Service club is a branch of the Infant Welfare society, whose work is too well known to need a lengthy explanation here. The Kenwood group is one of the oldest and strongest of the society's twenty-one branches in Chicago. The important thing about it is that its small roster of forty active members guarantees to the Infant Welfare society one of the largest contributions of the branches—$10,000 per year.

This sum is raised in two ways—by keeping open each day Infant Welfare Thrift shop, a large and thriving rummage store which is run jointly by the Kenwood Social Service club and the Hyde Park branch of the Infant Welfare, and by giving a theatrical benefit each winter. The club has taken the entire main floor and balcony of the Selwyn for Dec. 29, and we see no reason why this year's benefit should not be as successful as its predecessors.

On Ticket Committee.

Mrs. Albert Cummins is chairman of the ticket committee and is being assisted by Mrs. Carl Defebaugh, Mrs. Kenneth Sponsel, Mrs. Nelson Utley, Mrs. Kenneth MacLellan, and Mrs. E. P. Strandberg Jr. The flower committee, which gathers extra shekels by the sale of bouquets before the show, is headed by Mrs. Fred Lorish.

Now let's get back to the activities of the Kenwood Social Service members, which are, I am sure, a sample of what Infant Welfare branches are carrying on all over the city. Each previous year they have given a Christmas party for the children at Providence Welfare station maintained by the club at 29th and Halsted streets.

This year the needs of poverty stricken families are so acute that the club has decided to furnish food, clothing and Christmas toys to every needy family whose babies come to its station for attention. The members will not, as in other seasons, turn over any of the names to the already burdened Good Fellows, but will care for each one themselves.

Give Money and Clothes.

A thousand dollars is being raised among the members and they are now busy assembling clothes for the children. In addition, some of the members are donating coffee, tea, cookies, toys, etc., for each basket. At least seventy-five families will be taken care of, and there will be more if they come to the station before Christmas. Mrs. Kenneth MacLellan is in charge of the collection of clothes, Mrs. B. A. Cronson, distribution, and Miss Madeline Magerstadt is raising the necessary funds.

The club has an active sewing committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Harold Jones which finished its large annual quota of babies' layettes some time ago. Just now, however, Miss Place, the superintendent of nurses, is making such an eloquent appeal for more warm garments that the committee members have purchased additional bolts of flannel to make up dozens of little wrappers in their leisure moments at home.

Final plans for the distribution of Christmas baskets will be made at a meeting tomorrow afternoon at the residence of Mrs. E. P. Whitaker at 1110 East 52d street.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THERE were two visiting clubwomen at the club table for luncheon, one from the west and one from the far west. At the next table club members were talking animatedly in French.

"One of our advanced classes in French," explained the committee chairman. "They meet once a week and are pledged to think and talk French while they're together. That large table by the door is a Spanish class, mostly beginners. They seem to be finding its easier to eat in Spanish than to talk it."

"Some of the clubs in my state have what they call 'accredited classes,'" reported the woman from the west. "They are led by professors from the state university. The university fixes the requirements and gives credit for work successfully done."

"The three C's again," interjected the secretary. "Companionship, culture, Credit—a nice combination. Tell us more about them."

"One large club has had the accredited classes for six years," responded the woman from the west. "They cover a variety of subjects—history, art, music, Bible, drama, food, Red Cross are some of them. It's surprising how well they fit in with the department work of the club."

"I'm surprised our members haven't asked for a flying class," observed the committee chairman. "We have some flying members. I suppose the class is just a matter of time."

"[illegible] of wings," the librarian corrected her. "But, girls, did you ever think of the varied interests of the average clubwoman and her desire to learn all she can about them? It's a matter of continual wonder to me."

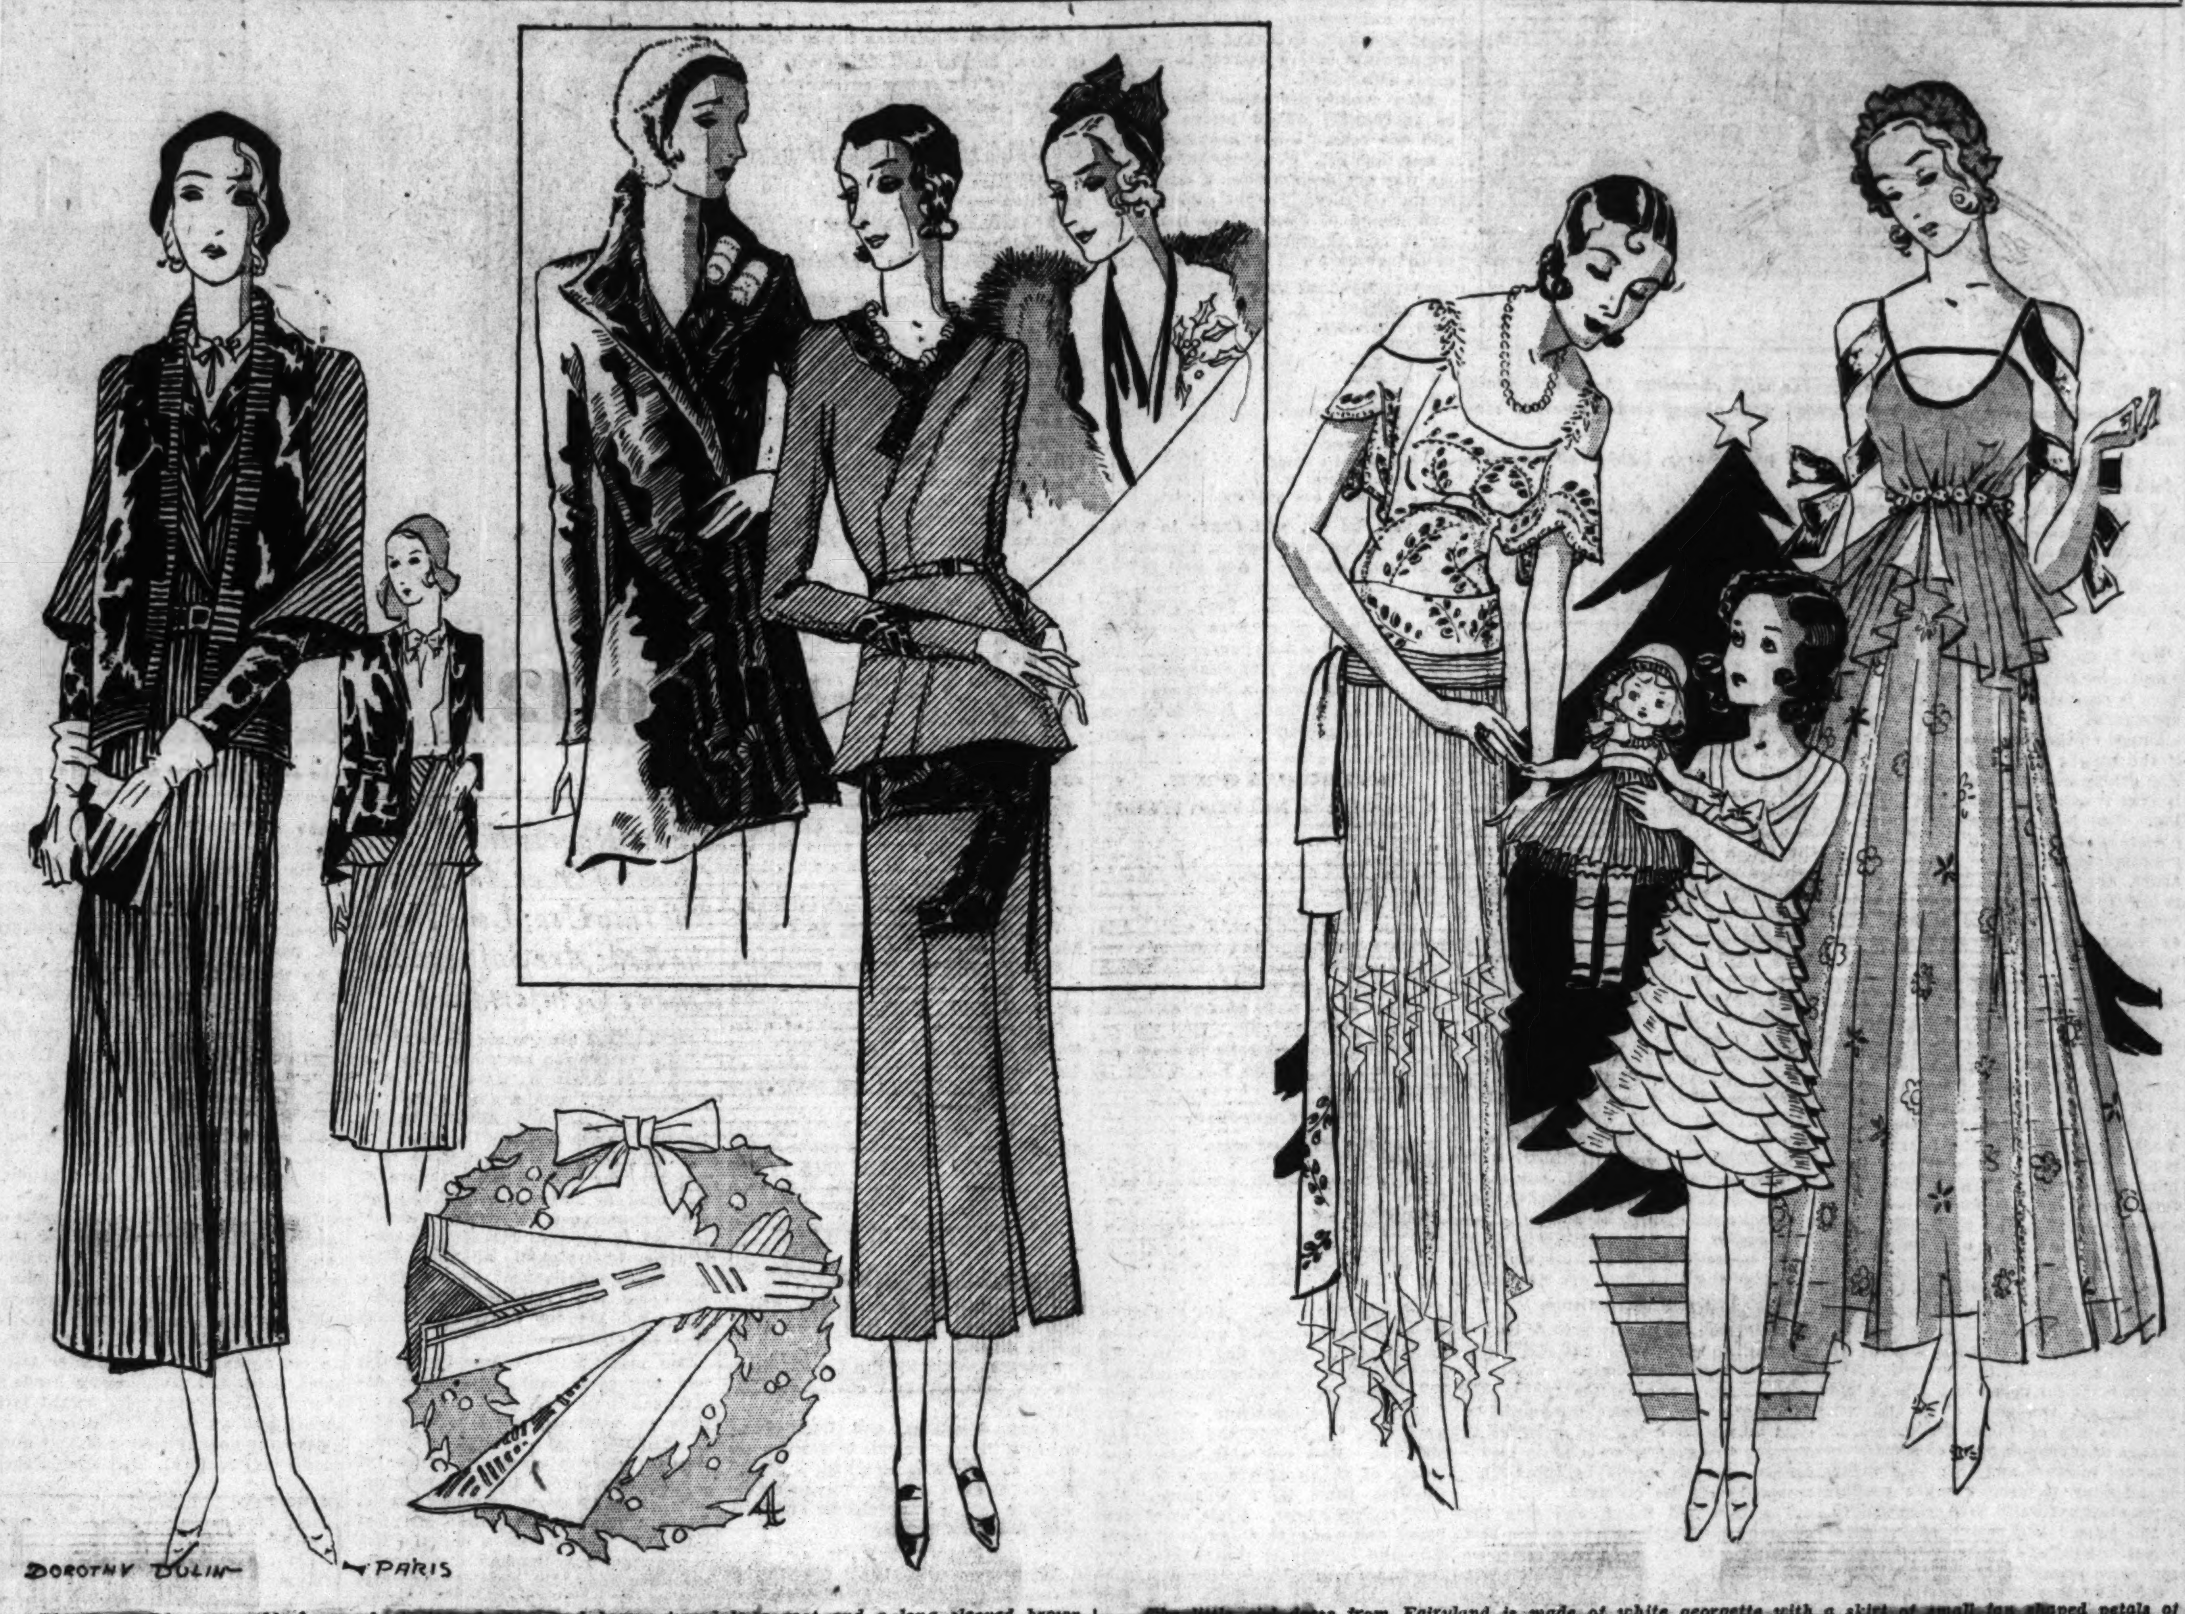
Question.

"Is it considered bad form to appeal from the decision of the chair? —[illegible]"

Reply.

There is no more cause for feeling about appealing from the decision of the chair than about differing from a member in debate.

HOLIDAY MODES FOR THE DEBUTANTE



This Irene Dana ensemble has a short sleeved green and brown tweed long coat and a long sleeved brown pony jacket. The waist is white surah silk and the peplumed skirt is tweed.

Lenief gives the blue serge frock, center, a trimming of broadtail bands. The other hat shown is a Patou cap of reversible velvet tied in a bow at the top.

Worth designed the youthful dance dress of white georgette, first in the right group, with a long, unbelted bodice and bertha trimmed with rhinestone eyelet embroidery. The shoulder straps are strass leaves.

The little girl dress from Fairyland is made of white georgette with a skirt of small fan shaped petals of the georgette. It is sketched between the two grownups.

The Poiret dance frock, shown last, is made of yellow tulle, with yellow velvet ribbon trimming the bodice and short, almost invisible sleeves. The full skirt is embroidered.

Santa Claus Is Loved in More than One Land

By the Rev. John Evans.

WHO was Santa Claus? It may be that this question is not correctly asked. Perhaps it should be asked, "Who is Santa Claus?" In order to find out who he was—or is—it is necessary to get his name spelled correctly.

In Holland they spell his name San Nicholaas. He first came to America with the Dutch settlers at New Amsterdam, now New York. His name continued to be spelled San Nicholaas until people from other countries came. For instance, Englishmen tried to say San Nicholas as rapidly as the Dutch could say it. They succeeded about as well as Americans today. You might try it. San Nicholaas soon becomes Santa Claus.

San Nicholaas came to Holland from Russia—for Santa's home is thought to be somewhere near the north pole. To the Hollanders and Germans almost everything to the north is Russia. But in Russia Santa's name is spelled St. Nicholas, and St. Nicholas is the Russian patron saint. Several czars were named Nicholas.

The First St. Nicholas.

But, the first St. Nicholas was born in a little town in Asia Minor in the third century. He became the bishop of Myra and was a member of the famous council of Nicaea in 325 A. D. Both the Latin and Greek churches hold St. Nicholas' memory in high esteem. Five popes of the Roman Catholic church bore his name. His feast is celebrated on Dec. 6.

One of the stories told of St. Nicholas explains why his name is now so closely linked with the Christmas season. That day in Myra was one in which parents had to give dowries so that their daughters might honorably marry. One poor man in the good bishop's see had three daughters. He did not have enough money to furnish dowries for his daughters and so they faced lives of shame.

Secretly St. Nicholas gave the dowries to the poor man's daughters and they were happily married. Thus the custom of giving secret gifts to friends on the eve of the feast of St. Nicholas, Dec. 5, was soon begun. If any one should ask who gave the gifts, the answer would be St. Nicholas. The custom was transferred to the Christmas season because of the closeness of the dates. And now the secret Christmas gifts are marked: "From Santa Claus."

Old Story Retold.

At Western Theological seminary, Evanston, a celebration of Christmas after the manner of the time of St. Nicholas was observed last Wednesday night. Hundreds of candles flickered in the Anderson Memorial chapel during the colorful pageant. The Rt. Rev. George Craig Stewart, garbed in his episcopal robes, reënacted the part in such ceremonies of a bishop of St. Nicholas' time.

IT isn't the intent of the above caption to remind anybody how few shopping days there are left until Christmas, the policy being to discuss more pleasant things. But if it brings the sparsity of 'em to mind, perhaps one had best be up and doing—what?

By way of confession and credit, today's title, which according to precedent will not survive next Sunday unless the populace bids it stay, was inspired by the customers through their letters, some of which to date have been fair and some warmer. Whatever the color of their contents, we appreciate the interest that directed the taking of the pen in hand, and thank you one and all, especially those who were nice enough to send in contributions, and particularly those who were even nicer in approving the titles or the contributions of this column.

Speaking of Dominica invites mention of Gov. Waldo Evans of the Virgin islands, who at one time was commandant of the Great Lakes Naval Training station. Activities in his jurisdiction include the manufacture of bay rum, an important and renowned product there. Neil C. Ward, who visited Gov. Evans last spring, was presented with a bottle of the liquid by the governor's barber, which he still cherishes as a memento. There is no danger of his ever being tempted to imbibe the contents, as the federal government sees to it that all the bay rum is diluted with denatured alcohol—an old American custom.

Stage-Managing Oneself; How to Use a Little Dramatization

By Antoinette Donnelly.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—"American women know how to make themselves appear beautiful, in a manner suspected only by the great courtesans of the past. . . . The art of stage-managing themselves is one that most American women understand. It was only the genius among women who knew it in the past."

The above was extracted from an interview by the clever New York journalist, Gretta Palmer, with a Hungarian portrait painter, Rodolfe Kiss. An interesting summary of the American woman's beauty activity, is it not? "They know how to make themselves appear beautiful." To paraphrase a French writer's idea that "a woman who has wit enough to be beautiful is brainy enough for any man," let's say: "A woman who knows how to make herself appear beautiful is beautiful enough."

At the suggestion, cannot you, too, conjure up memories, immediate or past, of women who had the trick of appearing beautiful down so well that they were never suspected of not being so?

I think of one stellar screen attraction, among others, who is universally reputed to be a beauty, but who privately suffers a couple of noticeably outstanding physical defects. Of another, I heard a noted artist stress in forceful terms not one but three features that were "all out of drawing." Being no end clever of stage managing herself, the latter is raved about for her looks—and justifiably so, too. By her stage managing, I mean just what the Hungarian artist means, not by any professional adaptation of the term.

Stretching Their Assets.

Women are clever today about their looks as well as in other accomplishments. Given a few good points and brains, they can make their assets stretch into quite an enviable beauty reputation. Not long since I spent an hour with a woman with a remarkable flair for personal stage managing. Not very young, with only good eyes and a pair of remarkably beautiful hands to lift her physically above the average. She still made you come away impressed.

There is another woman with immense pride of silhouette and with good reason. She possesses that "long, flowing line" the fashion magazines urge us all to have before we try to look like their sketches. She has long, slender feet, good ankles and the aforesaid plastic figure. In a burst of confidence, she told a friend that she hated modernistic furnishings because it did not give a woman a chance to make a picture of herself as she sat.

A Thousand Ways.

That reminded the friend of how cleverly the woman played up her exquisite long line from shoulder to toetip. She chose, on entering a room, a chair that would permit her to sit easily erect, a bit to one side of the chair with feet pointing slightly toward the other side, so that in profile and front view there was that lovely line on exhibit. And that's stage managing a best asset.

There are a thousand ways it may be done. A charming hostess rôle often will give a woman the perfectly staged effect to bring out the best beauty points she has. The type of dress, the manner, the charm of the setting, the service, etc., are good stage "properties."

Another person, with a real beauty reputation, has a clever way of dramatizing herself conversationally as the picturesque one of a social affair recently enjoyed. She creates a picture of herself for you in such a way as this: She will tell about the occasion, who was there, and how she enjoyed it. Then she injects into the recital something like this: "I wore my black velvet and pearls. Mr. Blank, the guest of honor, next to whom I was seated, said I must have chosen that frock for the room deliberately. It fitted perfectly. The dining room, you know, is modern—black and white."

There you have a picture created for you of the girl in a setting and you visualize it and her as she presents it. Which is clever, if you can get away with it. But, of course,

Styles Go In for Youthful, Chic Details

French Modistes Keep Flapper in Mind.

Paris Snapshots

Suzanne Talbot is introducing dinner pajamas that are glorified overalls, made of satin or lamé with nothing for waist in the back but crossed straps.

Handkerchiefs of bright or medium or dark red chiffon are doing well in Paris fashions. They're matched to your lipstick and you use them to repair ravages of makeup.

An old material to return to fashions for Palm beach is dotted swiss. Martial et Armand are using it to make Valenciennes lace trimmed dance dresses and soft tailleurs and blouses.

Hermes' dresses of brown knitted wool that are low necked and sleeveless and worn over bright, light green sweaters with long sleeves are the newest Paris sports frocks. They have berets and scarfs of brown and green wool knitted with the same stitch.

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris is giving the flapper a break again by designing fashions specially for her. So far as French styles are concerned the flapper species has been extinct for some time. The feminine movement of modes, that still dominates clothes, has tended to make all females into women, flappers included. Great has been the scorn of the Paris dressmakers for anything approaching the adolescent in aspect or spirit, but in the midseason shows of Paris, that look ahead to spring, I observe the flapper feeling is cropping up again. There isn't so much fitting—demanding a developed figure. A little less sophisticated drapery is hung around dresses.

There is a heap more simplicity, and loads of downright young details. Evening hems show a definite tendency to come up in the world—a concession to strenuous youth and its times. Daytime skirts are freedom itself—almost any length is chic. The waistline problem is equally uncontrolled, with the majority of Paris fashion potentates voting in favor of more skirt to less waist in proportion that is essentially suitable to the young, in figure at least, if not in spirit.

Tweeds Are Assembling.

Tweeds, which were completely demobilized and scattered this fall, are assembling again. They're decorated with new tiny patterns and they run to stripes, checks and snowflake designs. Tweed is essentially the fabric of youth styles. Only a young looking figure can support cloth in allover patterns. And the plaids all Paris is flaunting are something made to order for the flapper.

There is a whole new crop of holiday dance and party dresses, designed for 25 and under—mostly under. Tulle, new jersey tulles, chiffons, stiff silks like taffeta, lace trimmed dresses for genuinely young girls abound. Even satin has a dull surface, so it won't be too sophisticated. Embroideries are appropriate to youth because they are splattered all over such materials as tulle and many holiday evening dresses have eyelet embroideries, which also may be worn effectively by the flapper.

Daytime clothes that have fashion importance and are smart for holiday wear are simple in effect and young in spirit. The short fur jacket worn with a one piece dress, with waist and skirt, or over a suit, is a Paris favorite, and unusually good for the young girl. Fur jackets made of flat furs are going to be worn also in early spring, and the wise maiden picks her holiday clothes with the vernal season in mind. By flat furs I mean really flat furs such as broadtail, pony and shaved lamb.

New Millinery.

New millinery includes holiday hats that are thrilling for all ages, but particularly so for the girl with a fresh complexion and youthful contours. Agnès has hats with garlands of many colored velvet flowers worn around the head à la nymphe that are just irresistible, and she is showing also close fitted crowns of knitted wool with broad braids of shaded velvet ribbon wound around the head, a flattering mode for the young face.

Her dinner and informal evening hats of silk crocheted lace, usually white with a chaplet of white velvet leaves, are something to make you write home for money tout de suite. Hats of felt with round shallow crowns and a brim like a soft, small tire of felt have a silhouette like little boys' sailor hats, and are girlish because they have bows of velvet ribbon laid against both cheeks.

At the other end of the style mart there are red, green and plum colored pumps and strap sandals that are nice for young feet and gloves to match these slippers, or in light shades trimmed to match them.

A color harmony that combines two shades, or even three, is a feature of the new Paris clothes for the flapper, and it is also used for more mature modes. The Irene Dana ensemble shown in our sketch is a youth ensemble that shows one of the newest color harmonies—green, brown, and a bit of white. This ensemble has two wraps and is intended to pass from winter to spring weather with comfort for both temperatures.

Three Shades Combined.

The large figure shows the long coat of striped tweed in green and brown. This coat has short cape sleeves and the long sleeves of the brown pony jacket beneath function from elbows to wrists. There is a scarf of pony edged with tweed in square notched bands and it may be worn with the pony jacket or coat or both. The coat is belted in at the normal waist line and has a tailored collar and revers

First row: Mincemeat drop cookie, springerle, dark pfeffernuesse and cinnamon star.

CHRISTMAS, the most keenly anticipated holiday of the year, is again with us. It is the time for homecomings and fun and feasting. For weeks housewives have been making ready. Plum puddings have been steaming away in their kettles. Fruit cakes and, perhaps, some specially prized cookies have been ageing and growing mellow. Those who make definite plans well in advance get just as much of the cooking out of the way as possible and living up to such a program means more enjoyment and less weariness during the holiday season.

The Christmas day dinner, which is the biggest single event, of course, must be taken care of first. The menu must be planned, the market order made out, and every item that is not perishable should be in the house by this coming Tuesday night. And once we have the details of the dinner worked out, the next question we need to ask ourselves is, what have we done to extend our hospitality to the casual callers who are bound to drop in some time during Christmas week?

I think the pleasantest thing to do is to have on hand a supply of good things to eat and serve them in some quaint and colorful way. And what is nicer than to follow that old custom of a pitcher of delicious punch or egg-nog with plates of crisp Christmas cookies arranged in the living or dining room in the way of good cheer? Egg-nog, that we can make, of course, is not the original kind, but that prepared with the nonalcoholic brandy or sherry which is very finely flavored. Whatever the beverage is, serve it in small, slender glasses.

Make Delightful Gifts.

Cookies are not only good to have around for spreading cheer to the casual callers, but they also make delightful gifts. A variety, however, is needed—springerle with beautiful pictures on them, cinnamon stars pfeffernuesse, macaroons, cocoanut kisses, rocks, oatmeal drop cakes, chocolate nuggets, date sticks, and cookies made of plain dough cut with fancy cutters such as stars, crescents, Christmas trees, four leaf clovers, horns of plenty, and decorated with fruit, chocolate shot and tiny colored candies—to make the most attractive gifts. But be sure that each is crammed full of goodness.

German cookies are especially favored at Christmas time. Germans are famous cookie makers and many of their varieties have been celebrated in song and story. The American housewife even without German lineage, and having no particular longing for German food, treasures a good German cookie recipe.

In making a study of German recipes I find a considerable variation in the ingredients as well as in the flavor and texture of the product obtained. The accompanying recipes are originally from a German cook book owned by a German housewife celebrated for her excellent cookies. The springerle and lebkuchen made according to these recipes are the best I have ever eaten. These recipes differ from others that we have tried in that they contain no fat and for a leavening agent use ammonium carbonate instead of baking powder. Ammonium carbonate in small diced shaped pieces can be purchased at any drug store. It is harmless. Grate it to a powder as you would grate nutmeg. When you do this you will smell ammonia, but it won't be concentrated enough to produce discomfort.

Let Stand Overnight.

Both lebkuchen and springerle should stand over night to slightly air dry. This is especially necessary in making springerle. The beautiful designs stamped on the dough would lose shape if the baking were done immediately. The drying out sets the design so firmly that it cannot come out in the baking. The temperature for baking is also most important in the successful making of springerle. A low temperature, one as low as 275 degrees F. is best to obtain the characteristic delicate straw color. And at least fifty or sixty minutes of cooking is required.

One must be careful not to roll the dough too thin. It should be at least ¼ of an inch thick if the springerle board is used and a little thicker if the springerle rolling pin is used. In my opinion the mold board is much more efficient than the rolling pin and the amateur can do the job much more efficiently with the board. The board illustrated in the picture is a hand carved one, German made and forty years old. It makes beautiful, clear cut designs. This particular board is not mine but how I would love to possess it!

Bread flour is used for making springerle and really is necessary to give the desirable hard crisp texture.

Pfeffernuesse are easily made. No special equipment is required. The dough is simply rolled in the hand into balls about the size of a hickory nut, the top of these are dipped in orange or pineapple juice or some wine flavored mixture and then into sugar. Bread flour is used because pfeffernuesse are naturally hard crisp cookies.

The pastry bag or the cookie press sometimes called a cookie gun is needed for some cookie mixtures like Spritz. With this piece of equipment one can make cookies of most attractive shapes.

Rolled Cookies.

Rolled cookies are perhaps the most difficult. The trouble comes in rolling out the dough. The dough, which should be as soft as possible, sticks to the bread and pin easily. A cloth such as canvas or some heavy white material dusted lightly with flour and a piece of stockinet on the rolling pin, which is also dusted with flour, are very useful. This reduces the amount of flour needed and so lessens the tendency of the dough to become tough. If the cookie dough is first chilled in the ice box it is more easily handled. Pastry flour is best for making rolled cookies. The manipulation which is necessary in this type of cookie naturally toughens the product, so a flour that produces the most tender cookie should be used.

Drop and spread cookies require the least handling. The dough should be stirred very little to keep the product tender. Drop from a teaspoon and leave the surface irregular because the rough surface adds much to the appearance. Either pastry or bread flour may be used, but less bread than pastry flour is required.

Refrigerator cookies, perhaps the most popular of all at the present time, are easily made. The dough needs no extra manipulation. Since it may be made softer than that for rolled cookies it usually results in a more tender cookie. It is most important, however, that the dough be thoroughly chilled so that it will slice evenly. The dough may be formed into a cylinder and put in a pan and placed in the refrigerator or it may be packed into a mold. Any mold will do, such as a baking powder can, or fancier molds may be bought. The refrigerator mixture especially appeals because fresh cookies may be baked at any time they are wanted.

Effect of Ingredients.

In the making of any type of cookie it is well to think about the effect that different ingredients have.

A coarse sugar causes the cookie dough to spread. Fine sugar should be used where there is little moisture to dissolve the sugars, such as in shortbreads. Sugar should be thoroughly creamed with the fat used.

The fats add flavor and give the shortening. Butter is one of the best flavored fats, but since it is not pure fat it does not have the shortening power that pure fat has. Lard and hydrogenated fats are excellent for making cookies. Half butter and half lard or any other fat is a good combination. Butter should never be used to oil the baking tins, because it burns too quickly.

Eggs add flavor, color, and richness. They should be fresh and of medium size. A small egg does not add enough liquid and an extra large one adds too much. In cookie making we always try to avoid the addition of flour and extra manipulation.

Molasses, honey, and sirups produce a softer cookie than one made with ordinary sugar. These substances are hygroscopic because they have great moisture retaining properties. This characteristic helps to keep the cookies fresh.

Hard cookies need to be baked at a slow temperature from 275 to 300 degrees Fahrenheit. Drop and rolled cookies should be baked faster at a temperature of 375 degrees to 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

After cookies are baked they should be thoroughly cooled before storing and too many kinds should not be stored together. Grandmother's cookie jar was not designed for a dozen different varieties. To put cookies of a wide range of flavors into the same jar is sure to result in an admixture of flavors that will not be distinctive.

MINCEMEAT COOKIES.

1½ cups sugar.
2 eggs.
1 tsp. salt.
1 tsp. soda.
½ cup sour milk.
3 cups pastry flour.
1 tsp. cinnamon.
½ tps. cloves.
½ tsp. grated nutmeg.
1 cup mincemeat or
1 cup raisins and nuts mixed.

Cream butter, add sugar in three or four portions, creaming thoroughly after each addition. Add well beaten eggs, salt and soda that has been stirred into the milk. Then add flour that has been sifted with the spices. Stir until flour is just dampened. Last stir in mincemeat just enough to distribute. Drop from a teaspoon onto an oiled baking sheet. Bake in a slow oven [325 degrees F.]. Yield: 4 dozen cookies.

SOFT MOLASSES COOKIES.

¾ cup shortening [half butter, half lard].
1 cup molasses.
1 cup sour milk.
1¾ tsps. soda.
3 cups pastry flour.
2 tsps. ginger.
1 tsp. salt.

Cream shortening until soft. Add molasses gradually and beat mixture until smooth. Add sour milk which has had the soda stirred into it, then the flour sifted with ginger and salt. Chill dough thoroughly. Roll out on a floured board and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.]. Yield: 5 dozen cookies.

LIGHT LEBKUCHEN.

2 cups fine granulated sugar.
4 eggs.
1 scant tsp. ammonium carbonate [1 small cube].
Grated rind one lemon.
4 cups bread flour.
2 tsps. cinnamon.
¼ lb. citron, cut fine.
¼ lb. almonds, cut fine.

Put sugar into bowl. Add egg yolks. Beat whites until stiff and put them on top of the sugar and yolks. Stir for ten minutes. Add ammonium carbonate and lemon rind, then the flour sifted with the cinnamon, working in gradually. Last add the citron and almonds. Roll out only about one-fourth of dough at one time to a little less than ¼ inch thick. Cut with cookie cutter. Place on floured board and allow to stand over night. Rub the bottom of the cookies with the finger wet with cold water. Place on an oiled sheet. Bake in a slow oven [325 degrees F.]. Yield: 7 dozen stars, crescents.

SPRITZ.

1 cup butter.
2-3 cup sugar.
3 egg yolks.
2¼ cups pastry flour.
4 grated almonds.

Cream butter, add sugar in two portions and cream thoroughly after each addition. Add egg yolks and beat well. Then add flour and almonds. Press through a cookie press or pastry tube into shape. Bake in slow oven [400 degrees F.] to a delicate straw color.

PFEFFERNUESSE.

2 cups granulated sugar.
4 eggs.
Grated rind 1 lemon.
4 cups bread flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
¼ pound finely chopped citron.

Put the sugar into a mixing bowl. Add the egg yolks. Beat egg whites until stiff and turn them on top of sugar and yolks. Stir 10 minutes, add sifted flour gradually in three or four portions, working in gradually. Add citron at last. Form into a roll and with the hands form into balls about the size of a hickory nut. Dip top of balls in orange juice, then in sugar. Place on oiled tin [oiled with lard or hydrogenated fat] about two inches apart. Bake in a slow oven [325 degres F.] to a delicate brown. About 30 to 35 minutes is required for baking.

Yield: 8 dozen.

GRAHAM OR WHOLE WHEAT CRACKERS.

2 cups brown sugar.
1 cup shortening [half butter, half lard].
1 egg.
1 cup sour milk.
1 teaspoon soda.
¼ teaspoon salt
3 cups graham flour.
Any flavoring.

Cream the sugar and shortening. Add the egg and sour milk in which the soda and sour milk have been dissolved. Add flour. Stir until flour is just dampened, then add flavoring and stir three or four more times. Drop from a teaspoon onto a well greased baking sheet and place a half date or a raisin in the center of each. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.]

Yield: 5 dozen cookies.

A Common Problem

By Doris Blake

The Specter of Loneliness That Seems to Pursue So Many Young People Is Just a Bogey After All, Says Doris.

IF anybody were to ask about the outstanding problems met in a department of this sort, I should cite loneliness first, because it seems to claim the greatest number of victims. Sadly enough, the majority of these are to be found among the young—both boys and girls. Older women, of course, confide about the seeming hopelessness of lives devoid of human companionship. Single women who have put in years working to supply necessities for the home, education for younger members of the family, suddenly awake to the fact that the social side of their lives has been a complete blank, and the future holds no bright promise of change.

Married women, some still married, some divorced, who have failed to find the companionship matrimony promised in the beginning, are contributors to the tale of loneliness. Mothers who think they have outlived their usefulness with the home nest deserted and children who no longer need them, set up in establishments of their own, confide their unhappiness, too. But somehow age, pitiable though the individual case may be, never seems to hold quite the poignant cry of desolation that comes from the heart of the young in need of friends and friendships.

Sympathy for the Young.

Perhaps we expect a certain philosophy to come with the years; also a self-reliance. Thus we give to youth more commiseration in its loneliness than is allotted age. The impatience of young people prods us and we long to see them have the good time they want and which is rightly their due. Youth does reckless things so often when it is deprived of the society for which it yearns. Young boys fall into company that is most undesirable, through loneliness.

The same holds true of girls if they're driven to evening after evening of solitude. Anything is better than being alone night after night with a few or no resources in themselves to tide them over bad periods. They gamble recklessly, sometimes at the expense of a whole lifetime of happiness.

A story was told me but the other day. The leading character is now dead. She died a crook. A man who knew her well as a little girl, back in the old home town, told me how she got her start. She came of a decent family. Arrived in the city, she got work almost at once because of her vivid personality and she got a fairly good job, that is, for a beginner. The salary didn't allow for any great indulgences, you may be sure.

She wanted fun, but it wasn't coming in the shape of boys, anyway. Two girls she picked up with in a cafeteria one night became her pals. The girls told her they were "shoppers." That sounded impressive, and when the girls invited Molly [let's call her that, though it was not her name] to become a third in their housekeeping arrangements, she accepted.

The girls said they knew a lot of nice boys. Molly wanted to know a lot of nice boys. About a week after the poor kid moved into the small apartment, she and the two girls were taken to the police station. The latter were not shoppers. They were shoplifters, and the goods were found in the apartment.

The Start Down.

That was the beginning of a career of crime for Molly. She said, looking back over her past: "If I hadn't been so lonely at the time the girls asked me to come with them, my life would have been something different entirely. Had it been my luck to have fallen in with a couple of music students, for instance, I might have been a singer, for I had a voice. If they had been studying, I would have studied, too. Or, if I had met a nice boy——"

The injustice of fate in that first arrest of hers, the woman claimed always, made her an enemy of society. Perhaps psychologists would decide her case another way, but enough for us to understand that young people will grab at the first opportunity of release from loneliness. Luck is with them, sometimes, and sometimes sadly against them.

Curiously, too, with all the talk of modern advance in taking the initiative where something is to be done about loneliness, a goodly portion of our young women apparently have not acquired the modern trick of going after what they want. They still hold back, waiting for something to turn up. Their loneliness problem is exactly what it was ten, twelve or fifteen years ago. They want the same thing—boy friends, or, preferably a boy friend, and they don't know how or where to get him.

On the other hand, automobiles, dancing places, movies and theaters are full of young couples who have mastered the art of making friends among the opposite sex. Those who have the initiative to go after friends and the trick of popularity that holds friends, have a glorious time of it. The lonely outsider looking on is not cheered by the sight or knowledge of the popularity of others. That, in fact, is the hardest part of his or her cross.

That Elusive Something.

The pity of it is that the good timers may be no better looking, no better dressed, no better charactered, which makes the lonely one's own state more difficult of comprehension to him or her. But the others have something. Perhaps it is only "cheek." Perhaps it is the gift of making everybody feel happy with them. Perhaps it is the intention to make themselves liked and the fact that their wits are trained in that direction. Perhaps, indeed, it may be that natural possession to which some are born: popularity cannot escape them. Speaking generally, however, and in our particular free era, a young woman or a young man who makes up his or her mind to have friends can have them. But they can't have them, any more than they can have a job, unless they get out and sell themselves as desirable. It is the salesmanship age and you must believe in the goods you are selling or you can't convince a customer of their desirability. Invariably, it is a young man or woman with a marked feeling of inferiority who suffers most the pangs of loneliness—young people who not only suffer inside themselves but make the mistake of expressing their inferiority.

Excessive modesty might have done some generations back, but it is out of place today. Don't I see, as do you, girls of inferior caliber making themselves out personalities through nothing but their own strong convictions about self? They are crack saleswomen. They haven't any hesitation about taking the initiative, of seizing every opportunity, however unpromising it may appear at first, of meeting people.

No Reason for Failure.

If a girl or young man has a decent education, is of good appearance, by which is meant the appearance possible to every young person today, and is agreeable and of good manners, there isn't any reason under heaven why he or she shouldn't have the assurance needed to meet the emergency of friendship cultivation.

With a fairly good opinion of yourself, you naturally will not be victim of a pick-up acquaintance nor cultivate undesirables who may happen across your path. It's a healthy thing to believe in yourself and to expect good things for yourself. It is healthier still to understand that, good as you may think you are, you get the best only through your own personal effort, and this applies to friends as well as other possessions.

Best Recipes

Do you have a favorite recipe that you'd like to pass on to others to enjoy? Address it to "Pet Recipes," Chicago Tribune, and it will be published.

Sandwich De Luxe.

½ cup ground pickles
½ cup ground celery
1 tbsp chili sauce
2 hard boiled eggs, chopped
1 dozen stuffed olives, sliced
1 tbsp minced onion
3 tbsp salad dressing

Chopped nuts may be added. Put between buttered bread. These are delicious for picnics. L. L. H.

Apple Cheese Pie.

3 or 4 apples
½ to ¾ cup sugar, depending on tartness of apples
¼ tsp. cinnamon

Line a deep pie plate with your favorite pastry. Then put apples through medium knife of food chopper. Cover with mixture of sugar and cinnamon and fill the rest of the pie with the following mixture, combined in the order given:

3 eggs
2½ tbsp. sugar
3 tbsp butter, melted after measuring.

Bake in a 400 degree oven for 15 minutes and finish baking in a 350 degree oven for 45 minutes. J. L. M.

Ceremony Adds to the Beauty of Christmas

Brings Spirit of Day to Children.

A mother's Christmas litany signed by Mrs. Bevans will be sent as her greeting of the season on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

SPEED—
Machinery—
Closer living quarters—
More diversions—
Less attention to manners and forms—
Telephoning instead of writing letters—

Have all done their part in banishing ceremony from our lives. It may not all be so gracious or picturesque—but perhaps it's just as well. In any case, we are forced pretty much to accept the fact that the days of old with their good points as well as their bad—with their formality and traditional observances—are behind us.

But we must not go to the other extreme and be too disdainful of ceremony.

Take Christmas time, for example. I know of some families where there isn't a touch of the spirit in the Christmas doings. Christmas means to them only what they gain by it—presents and food. So it is a case of look, grab, eat. The presents and the dinner are the important things. Other families, I know of celebrate Christmas a little more fittingly but still in an absolutely matter of fact way.

Too Rarely Felt.

Ceremony—ritual—form, call them by any name you like, come too little into our lives. In some ways that is a loss, because often these things spell beauty. They decorate existence.

What do you remember your childhood's Christmas by?

Walking downstairs in a procession in the morning, each holding a candle, with music being played?

The spicy, fragrant smell of evergreens and holly and a tree with real candles on it—a picture of ropes of green and candlelight and many people?

The procession after breakfast all around the house, up and down stairs, and then the throwing open of the doors and the sight of the tree with the presents piled up below it?

A Christmas night around the fire, with talk and the lazy popping of corn, and reading aloud, and all those you loved most together?

The gathering around the piano, every Christmas, singing the old familiar carols?

Piling, laughing, and bundled up out into the cold to ride to grandmother's or cousins'—perhaps behind horses, or even in a surviving sleigh—there to find warm welcome and sledding and snow fights?

More than Gifts.

Don't you find that the Christmases you remember stand for something other than the bare gifts you received and the food you ate? And if your family had a special way of observing Christmas doesn't that always tie up with Christmas in your mind?

Christmas has more meaning to children if a little touch of ceremony enters into its observance. And, although it isn't exactly ceremony, I do think the story of the Christ child should be told as part of every Christmas. Or, if you think it is familiar enough in your family, a copy of one of the beautiful old Italian or Flemish paintings of the Nativity or Madonna and Child might be on hand instead. If you can't get one in any other way, go to a good Christmas card store or department and you'll find for a small cost any number of beautiful full color reproductions on cards.

The touch of ceremony you give to Christmas may be simple or elaborate. A Christmas dinner table decorated by you or the children, with funny poems or jokes or place cards, preceded by marching and a special grace if you say grace in your family, gives a very special feeling to the day.

The singing of Christmas carols is one of the loveliest touches of ceremony that can be added to Christmas. Carols are so simple, so folksy, that children always love and understand them.

Necessary to Plan.

Fun and gayety are a very part of Christmas and to get these I think it's often necessary to plan this big day a little. Sometimes, in some families, there's a deadly lull after the groaning board groans no longer! And Christmas day may "peter out," depending upon when you have your dinner and who is at it!

If you plan a little you can prevent this. Old fashioned parlor games and charades can be enormous fun for the children and grownups together. Stage coach and spin the platter and hide the thimble and all that set are fun—if you can be simple again. Charades of course, also, which can be of two kinds—those portraying just a word, and those portraying a wise saying or any sort of thing you choose. Even a limited supply of costumes, or merely old hats, coats, dresses, canes, gloves, etc., to serve as impromptu costuming, will add to the hilariousness of the players and the audience.

Those who love dramatics might plan to give a play—and have as audience either just the family or outside friends.

Your observance of Christmas may be simple or elaborate—but do decorate the day with a touch of ceremony to set it apart.

Bright Sayings

Please adddress all bright sayings of children to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

Lowell had to stand in front of his mother on the street car. Men, hanging on to straps, were all around him. Finally in the middle of a dead silence Lowell piped up, "Mother, next time get me a ticket for the swings." E. L. R.

Little Letha, aged 3, was riding with her parents one dark night when suddenly a cat ran across the road in front of the car, its eyes shining in the dark like balls of fire.

She asked her mother what it was, and when told replied: "Mama, I don't like kitties with their lights turned on." H. E. P.

Holiday Hospitality

By Edith Weigle

A glimpse of a bedroom in Directoire manner.

Guest Rooms the Country Over Are Being Put Into Use; Let's Hope the Beds Are Soft and the Chairs Comfortable!

"EVERY hostess should be made to sleep in her guest room for at least a week of every year," said a very charming lady to me recently. She is known for her hospitality, and to spend a week-end at her summer place is a real joy, for besides the pleasure of returning to nature [nature with all the conveniences, of course] one is assured of a comfortable bed, comfortable chairs and all the little thoughtful details that should go to make up any self-respecting guest room, but are too often conspicuous by their absence.

Too many guest rooms have that cold, unlived-in feeling. Too many are equipped with beds that are covered with the loveliest linen, but are guilty of absolutely rigid springs and mattresses. Only a marathon dancer at the end of a record breaking performance could lose consciousness on them. The average guest spends a sleepless night on such a bed, a night which is not made any the less annoying by the knowledge that good form forbids him to tell the truth when his hostess, at the breakfast table, asks: "Did you sleep well?"

The uncomfortable guest room is the more confounding when one realizes that the ordinary members of the household have beds of downy softness, warm rugs for their bare feet when they pop out of them in the morning, plenty of closet and drawer space and windows curtained with an eye to a too intrusive sun. Why are the guests given the tail end of everything?

Well, that's one of those rhetorical questions that will probably never, never be answered—at least, not until a state law compels every hostess to spend a night in her own guest room!

If you're one of those humane women who really believes in pleasant surroundings, even for guests, why not arrange a little haven like the one in the large picture shown today? This room looks cozy and attractive, don't you think? French provincial furniture made of beechwood is both comfortable and artistic.

The color scheme is keyed in a soft rose with accents of yellow mulberry and green. The walls and woodwork are painted a blush pink. The draperies and upholstery on the dressing table bench and the dressing table flounce are of a new material in a toile design.

This bedroom also has a practical little writing desk, not shown in the picture. It is equipped with a rose colored desk set and plenty of blotters, ink, pens and paper.

An unusually lovely bedroom, seen in a model apartment in a large Chicago department store recently, was more formal than the guest room just mentioned, being directoire in feeling. Draperies of a stunning coral color were used at the windows. At first glance they looked like satin, but they were really heavy glazed chintz, solid color.

If you want an extra, straight chair for your guest room, choose one of simple lines that will adapt itself to many schemes of decoration. A Duncan Phyfe model or one in the empire manner accommodates itself, like a tactful visitor, to any situation. Such a chair is the one pictured. Italian empire, it is made of mahogany with an old crackled white banister and a splat, decorated with classic heads in bronze monochrome. Its height is 34 inches and its width 20 inches.

An extra chair of Italian Em

Now the holiday season is here guest rooms will be filled. Let's hope there are many hostesses who have tried out their own hospitality before the first friend arrives!

Mrs. Quincy Wright, who spent several months recently in the orient while her attorney husband was negotiating some business there, corrects the impression that fashions do not change in Japan. For instance, she relates, there are kimono patterns worn in the fall that are never seen in the spring, and vice versa. Chrysanthemums are sacred to the autumn season, cherries to the springtime. Some years the motif is huge and placed squarely on the front of the kimono. Sometimes it goes on the back, or is moved to one side of the front. Sleeves get longer or shorter by the ruling mode, and the material of the obi, or girdle, changes to correspond. Some of the most gorgeous garments of the aristocracy are at exclusive charity affairs, to which few foreigners ever obtain entrée, Mrs. Wright reports.

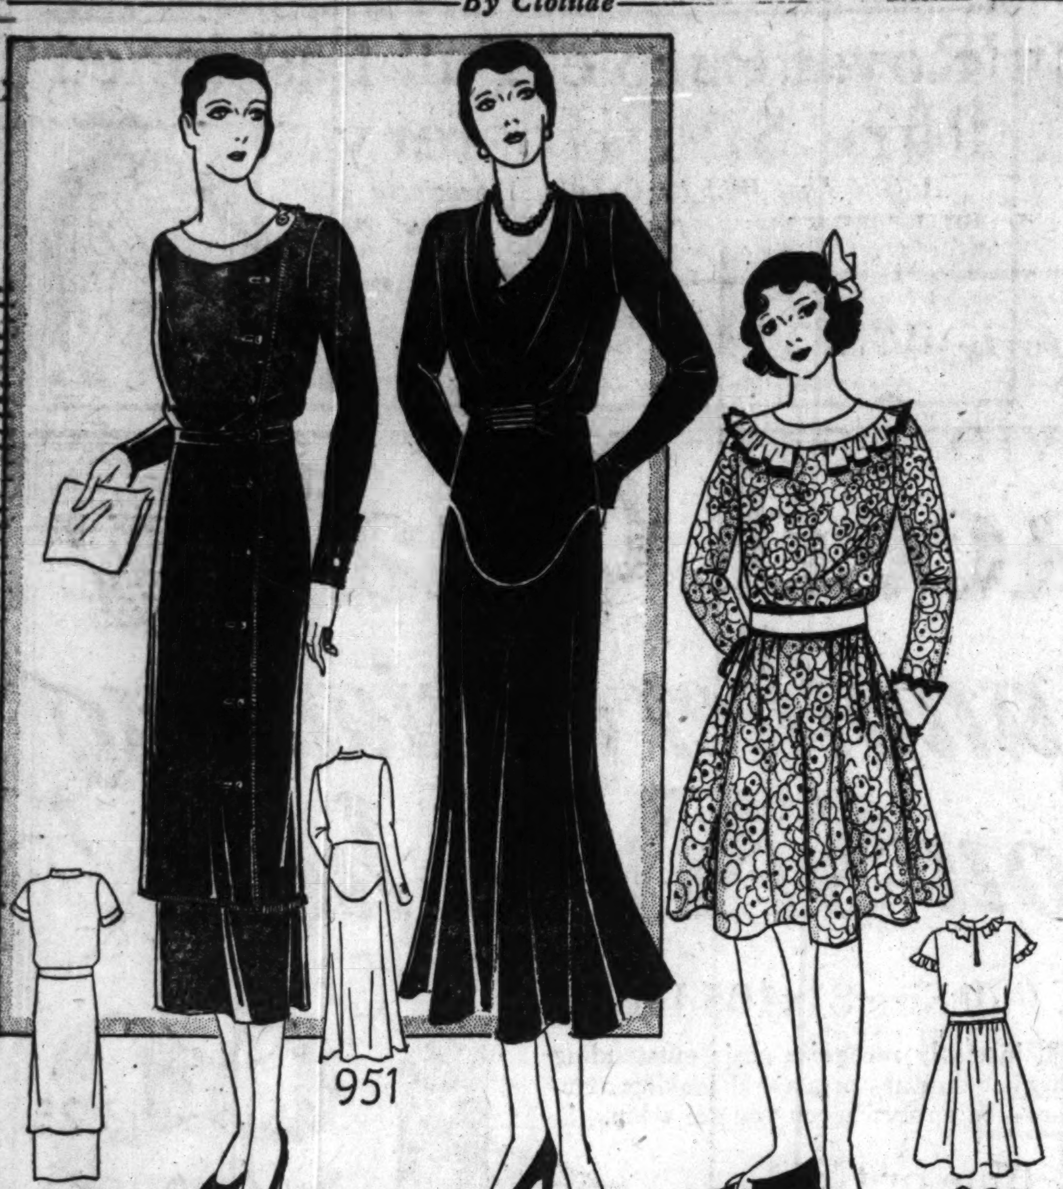
Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde



960—Woman's or miss' tunic frock. Sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years and 36, 38, and 40 inch bust measure. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material with ¼ yard of 27 inch contrasting and 1⅛ yards of 35 inch lining.

951—Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material.

925—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 35 or 39 inch material with ½ yard of 32 inch contrasting and 4 yards of binding.

Add a Smart Frock to Your Holiday Wardrobe by Using One of These Patterns as a Guide.

THE Russian tunic dress is enjoying much popularity, particularly among the slender type of woman and girl. It may be that its newness, offering such a definite change in the wardrobe, is the secret of its success. The pattern, No. 960, is particularly wearable, and in good taste for daytime wear. Besides this, it won't be difficult to make, and one or contrasting materials may be used.

The skirt is cut in two pieces—front and back—and, if you like, lining may be used for the top part. The pieces are seamed together at the sides, and perforations on the left side of the front section show where a slash is to be cut. These slashed edges are then to be bound and finished for closing.

The upper and lower parts of the tunic are cut separately and joined. Follow the directions that come with the pattern closely, about putting the tunic together. The bodice and tunic button from neck to hem, and it will be a good idea, after a buttonhole is cut to overcast it from the wrong side first, then from the right side. After the buttonhole has been finished overcast the edges loosely together, and leave until the final pressing has been given to the dress.

The round neckline is finished with an applied band. This is cut in two sections, and may be made of a contrasting color.

Lay a sleeve on a table when ready to put the seams together, having the under seam edge away from you. Bring the upper sleeve edge over to meet the under without holding the sleeve up. Pin together from the top to the notch indicating where the fullness starts. Then slipping a finger in between the seam edges of the lower part, shift the upper seam edge so that the fold down the outside of the sleeve is perfectly smooth. Then pin together from the notch to the bottom. Hold the sleeve up, and if the fold is smooth the sleeve shouldn't twist.

Plain and patterned wool crêpes, featherweight tweed, wool jersey, crêpe marocain and velvet may be used for this smart model.

Pattern No. 925 is for a pretty dress for a growing girl. The little bodice and skirt are cut separately and joined. The bodice is slashed down from the neck at the back, the edges are bound and finished for closing. A yoke is sewed to the upper edge of the bodice, and may be made of a contrasting color. The pretty ruffle is set under the lower yoke edge.

The skirt is a straight gathered one, hemmed on the lower edge. Both skirt and bodice are gathered into a band—this is also of the contrasting color. A pattern for long or short sleeves is included.

A challis in a navy blue ground, showing red pin dots, will be most attractive for this sort of a dress. Use the plain blue challis for the yoke, band and cuffs.

The cowl neckline is generally becoming and flattering, and seems to be a great favorite at present. The dress made by pattern No. 951 shows this neckline, and the horizontal tucks across the center front of the bodice at the waistline nip the waistline in. These decorative pin tucks appear again at the wrists of the long sleeves.

The bodice is seamed together, leaving the seam open on the left under arm—a perforation showing just how far. The yoke is fitted, the seams finished except for a certain distance at the left side, and then is sewed to the bodice. These seam edges that are left open should be finished with narrow faced and extension hems.

The attached skirt is a circular one, and of course the dress should be allowed to hang for several days before finishing at the bottom to allow for stretching, then the skirt should be evened off and the edge either bound or picoted. Crêpe marocain, flat crêpe wool crêpes and wool georgette are suitable suggestions for this smart frock.

Pet Economy

Would you care to pass on to some one else your pet economy? If so, address Pet Economy, Chicago Tribune.

Free Tablets for Children.

My pet economy is making tablets for the children to use in playing school, and to use as scratch pads in school work. I use wrapping paper for this purpose. I fold it evenly in fair sizes and use about 10 or 12 sheets to a tablet. I then sew across one end on the sewing machine and the result is a convenient tablet at no cost.

The children use the brown pads at home, the white ones at school, and I use a smaller size for grocery lists, etc. I have saved buying many tablets this way. E. M.

Plants from Potatoes.

I had some sweet potatoes that were too small to use, but too good to throw away, so I got two 10 cent pretty candy dishes at the 10 cent store. I put a potato in each dish with a little water, and they grew into pretty climbing plants which certainly brightened up my room. J. G.

Needlework

These Colored Linen Handkerchiefs Finished with White Initials Make Welcome Gifts.

COLORED linen handkerchiefs, measuring 13 inches square are made wonderfully pretty by the style of letters used. The linen, of course, is cut by first pulling a thread, so as to have it perfectly straight. A narrow rolled hem finishes the edges. Only roll about one inch at a time, and keep the roll an even thickness. Hem as you roll, and after a few launderings the stitches will be practically invisible.

Lavender, pink, yellow, orange, orchid, blue and green will all make up attractively. The letters are quite large, measuring at the deepest place about two and one half inches. Instead of the usual laid embroidery, the heavy parts of the letters are made of white handkerchief linen.

The lines would have to be marked on the handkerchief and these white pieces turned in on all edges and hemmed down to the handkerchief. The single lines are done in the outline stich—using floss the color of the handkerchief, but in a deeper shade. This outline stitch is also used to outline one edge of the white pieces.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

Mrs. I. P. B.: Yes, indeed, fagoting is used, and on a great variety of articles, and it isn't hard to do. The most particular part of the work is getting it ready. A piece of rather heavy paper, large enough to have the work basted to is necessary. If you are making cuffs, for instance, you would need a piece of paper a little larger than the finished cuff. Then with a sharp pencil draw a line parallel to the cuff's edge, and one-quarter inch below it. Then the cuff edge, having a narrow hem is basted to the top of the curved line, and the hem is basted to the lower line. Now you are ready for the fagoting stitch.

The needle is inserted under one edge at the left end, taking a small stitch. Then it is inserted in the opposite edge—at a point diagonal—not directly across. Cross and re-cross, taking the same sort of stitch each time. The point of the needle is towards you all the time. After it is finished the work is taken from the paper, and the fagoting shows like insertion.

under the fur scarf. The pony jacket beneath shows like a fur gilet at the opening.

In the smaller figure the pony jacket is shown and the tweed skirt and white surah silk blouse that make the rest of the ensemble. The jacket is collarless and the blouse has a small turnover collar and bow tie, and the V décolleté below them shows the skin. The skirt with its peplum made of the diagonally placed tweed is new and most smart.

In the center of the page is a Lenief daytime ensemble for the young girl, made of blue serge and trimmed with black broadtail. The jacket is made of broadtail and is about finger tip length. It has rather broad revers and a small standing collar, with two puffs of ermine worn at the lapel matching the ermine beret. The one piece frock of blue serge has a tunic blouse with broadtail bands at neck line and on the sleeves. A wider band, shaped like the one at the neck, is placed in the skirt below the peplum of the tunic, and below this the skirt is flared by two inverted box plaits in front.

Patou's smallest and youngest bonnet, designed for flappers, is shown in this group, at the right side. It is made of reversible ribbon—velvet on one side and faille silk on the other. It's a draped cap that ties in a bow like those that tiny girls wear in their hair.

Party Frocks.

At the right are two party frocks for grown up girls and one for a little girl, all having a holiday atmosphere in their chic. The first frock is from Worth and is made of white georgette with a long bodice, eyelet embroidered in tiny rhinestones so it looks like frost on snow. The dropped shoulder bertha is held up by two chaplets of rhinestone leaves that act as shoulder straps. Notice the absence of waist line and the sash around the hips. The skirt of this frock has two accordion plaited tiers of white georgette with pointed hem and it is no more than ankle length.

The little girl dress in the center is made of white georgette with very little waist and what there is is harnessed with bias bands, meeting under a bow in front, while the skirt is made full by small fan shaped petals sewed on a gathered foundation.

At the extreme right is a Poiret dance dress that might have stepped out of a Botticelli painting, and it is called "Bouquet." It is a bouquet of youth. It is made of buttercup yellow tulle and the full skirt is embroidered all over in tiny vari-colored flowers. A garland of flowers marks the high waist line. There is a transparent tulle yoke and short sleeves, and the round neck is outlined with velvet ribbon, while wider velvet ribbon is draped spirally around the sleeves and tied in bows above the elbows.

Very holiday and very smart Vallier gloves are shown in the small circle. The upper glove is white kid trimmed with bands of brown and the lower is pink kid laced with beige kid.

A FRIEND IN NEED

—By Sally Joy Brown—

At Christmas Time Sally Hopes You'll Give a Little Comfort to One of the Thousands Who Are Hopeless and in Want This Holiday Season.

SCANNING the calendar and counting the days bring one to the realization that the festive day for which we've been busily planning and buying is but a few lengths distant. I wonder if your list of "things to do" includes a thought for one of the thousands of helpless, hopeless families whose fare this year has been one of suffering and hardship, augmented by the fact that it is Christmas time and the season of cheer and good will.

Has it occurred to you that the festive occasion will be a happier one if you do something to make the day less cheerless for some one else? These unfortunate people do not expect the luxuries that will be yours on Christmas, but they'll be happy and grateful if you will see that they're not hungry or cold. Your last year's overcoat, the shoes you have discarded because they've been scuffed at the toes, heavy underwear, socks, mittens, and other warm garments will make acceptable and appreciated gifts.

And the things your children have outgrown—think how much they will mean to some boy or girl who must trudge to school each day in thin, inadequate clothing! Their pinched, drawn faces give evidence of empty stomachs, and the parents who have tramped the streets for months in efforts to find jobs can do nothing to alleviate the suffering of their young.

You can help, though, and with little or no effort on your part. A few minutes spent in ransacking closets and wardrobes will mean warm days for some penniless family for whom such an experience is a forgotten luxury.

So you see, even if you can't make a substantial expenditure toward some poor person's Christmas, you can help to make him happy and comfortable by giving the warm things that are no longer being worn in your family. Just make a list of the garments you find, tell me what their sizes are, and I'll send you the name of some one who can make use of them. And you will find that it's a most gratifying pleasure to know that because of you some man or woman, boy or girl is being protected from the ravages of a cold winter.

Mother's Letter.

"The children are badly in need of clothing and underwear, which I cannot buy. And my husband is in need of a suit, size 38, and shoes, size 7½ or 8. The boy is 9 and the girls are 6 and 4. If you can get these things for me, I shall be so grateful to you.
"MRS. J. C."

Here is another mother's plea for her suffering brood. You can relieve their misery greatly if only you will give the clothing you are discarding and the garments your boys and girls are outgrowing. I shall be glad to send the name to you.

Maiden Meditations

My hair may grow straight without shame,
I hope to discover

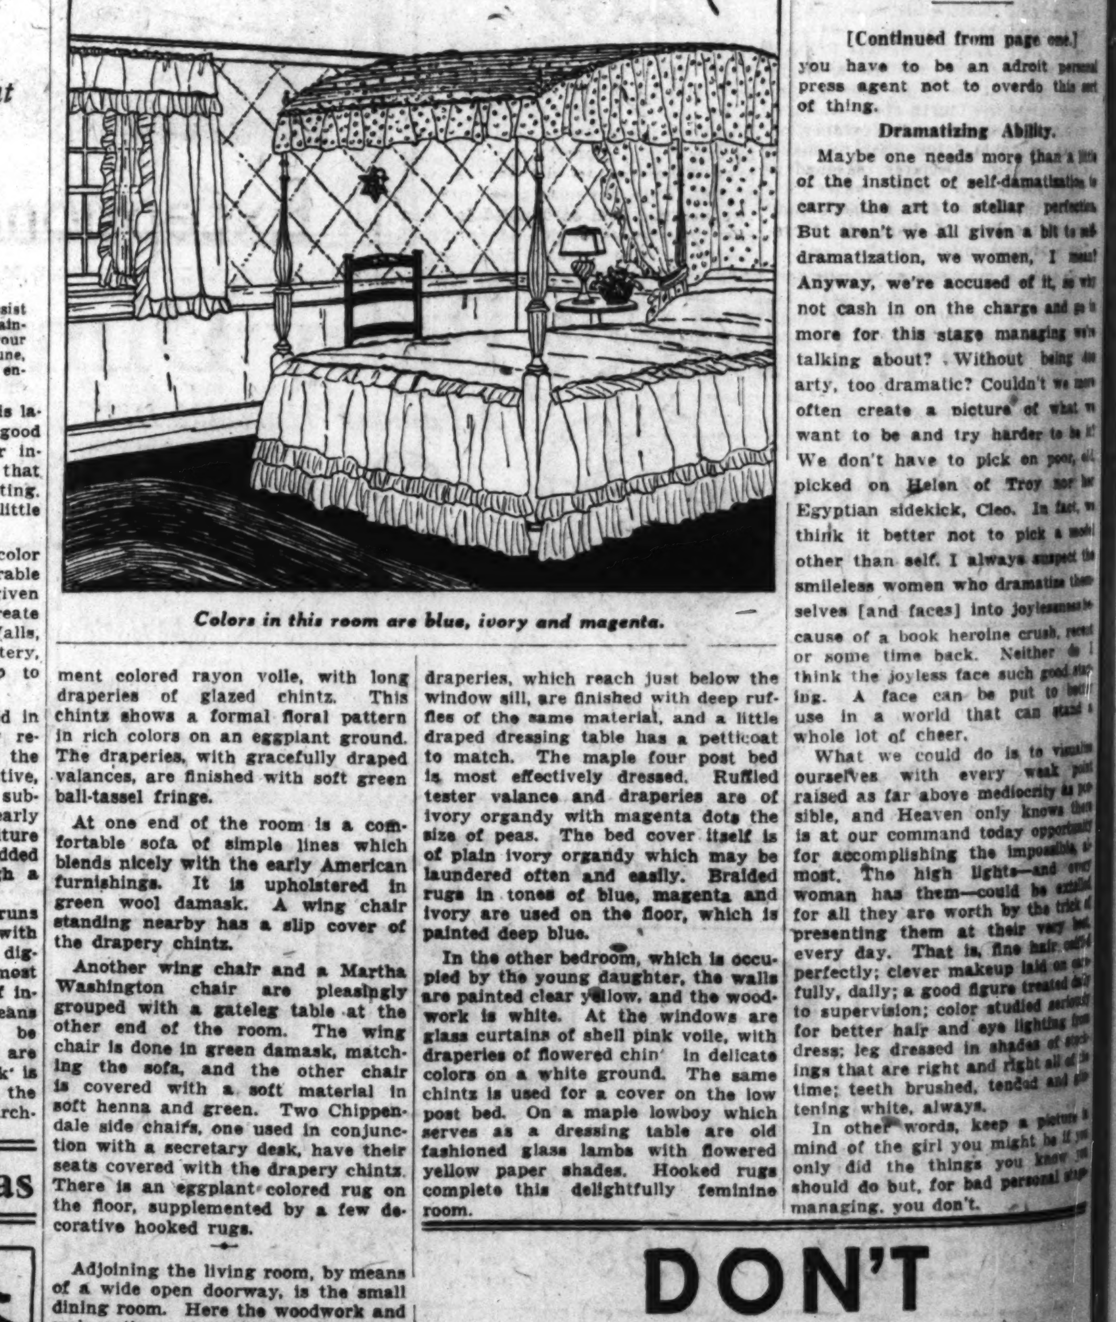
Color Relieves Monotony

By WillElla De Campi

Before It Was Revived This House Was Not Very Attractive, But By Introducing Light Shades and Clever Combinations the Whole Atmosphere Was Changed.

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problem pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



Colors in this room are blue, ivory and magenta.

HOW many times we hear this lament: "My furniture is good—nothing worn, shabby or incongruous, but in spite of that my home seems dull and uninteresting. What can I do to give it a little life?"

In many, many cases, lack of color is responsible for that undesirable monotony. The same furniture, given a colorful background, may create charmingly individual rooms. Walls, woodwork, floor covering, upholstery, curtains, and draperies all help to express a delightful personality.

This theory is clearly illustrated in a little suburban house recently redecorated. Before it was revived the house was not particularly attractive, though it was comfortably and substantially furnished in simple early American style. The same furniture is used now, but to it has been added a wealth of individuality through a judicious use of color.

In the living room, which runs across the front of the house with windows on three sides, a restful, dignified color scheme is carried out most effectively. The walls, marked off into well proportioned panels by means of wood molding [which may be bought by the foot from stock] are painted a soft green. Woodwork is the color of old parchment. At the windows are glass curtains of parchment colored rayon voile, with long draperies of glazed chintz. This chintz shows a formal floral pattern in rich colors on an eggplant ground. The draperies, with gracefully draped valances, are finished with soft green ball-tassel fringe.

At one end of the room is a comfortable sofa of simple lines which blends nicely with the early American furnishings. It is upholstered in green wool damask. A wing chair standing nearby has a slip cover of the drapery chintz.

Another wing chair and a Martha Washington chair are pleasingly grouped with a gateleg table at the other end of the room. The wing chair is done in green damask, matching the sofa, and the other chair is covered with a soft material in soft henna and green. Two Chippendale side chairs, one used in conjunction with a secretary desk, have their seats covered with the drapery chintz. There is an eggplant colored rug on the floor, supplemented by a few decorative hooked rugs.

Adjoining the living room, by means of a wide open doorway, is the small dining room. Here the woodwork and wainscoting are painted green, a few tones deeper than the living room walls. The wall space above is filled with a colorful and interesting scenic paper. This was not overly expensive, since there was only a small amount of wall space to cover after the allowance for doorways and windows had been deducted.

Glass curtains match those in the living room, but the draperies are of plain, heavy rayon in a soft henna color, which sets the figured walls off to good advantage. Corner cupboards, flanking a double window, hold pieces of old colored glass and pewter. A drop leaf table, ladderback chairs, and a lovely lowboy all are of maple. A large hooked rug, with henna and green tones predominating, is used on the floor.

Bright geranium pink has been added to give interest to the kitchen, which was formerly all white and black. Stripings of geranium pink painted into the panels of cupboard and kitchen doors are gay and unusual. A breakfast table and chairs are painted black, with bright geranium pink chambray curtains at the windows. To complete the scheme real geraniums, pink and white ones, in black flower pots, stand in a row on the window sill.

Upstairs there are two bedrooms, separated by the stair hall and bathnium trims, and there are geranium room. The one over the living room is illustrated today. Diamond patterned wall paper is in soft blue and ivory. At the windows are deep ruffled curtains in ivory, with draperies of magenta rep. Both valances and draperies, which reach just below the window sill, are finished with deep ruffles of the same material, and a little draped dressing table has a petticoat to match. The maple four post bed is most effectively dressed. Ruffled tester valance and draperies are of ivory organdy with magenta dots the size of peas. The bed cover itself is of plain ivory organdy which may be laundered often and easily. Braided rugs in tones of blue, magenta and ivory are used on the floor, which is painted deep blue.

In the other bedroom, which is occupied by the young daughter, the walls are painted clear yellow, and the woodwork is white. At the windows are glass curtains of shell pink voile, with draperies of flowered chintz in delicate colors on a white ground. The same chintz is used for a cover on the low post bed. On a maple lowboy which serves as a dressing table are old fashioned glass lambs with flowered yellow paper shades. Hooked rugs complete this delightfully feminine room.

Near Christmas

By Eleanor Jewett.

You'd be surprised if you could know
The secrets in our house.
I peeked inside a package and
I saw a chocolate mouse!

Our secrets fill the closets full,
And inside bureau drawers
You're apt to find a tiger, or
A wind-up lion that roars.

We've lots of secrets everywhere—
We even have a tree
That we are going to trim ourselves,
Dad, Mother, Dick, and me.

Just four more days to Christmas!
O, how I hate to wait!
I'll pray God hard that Santa Claus
Shan't be a minute late.

How to Use a Little Self Dramatizing

you have to be an adroit personal press agent not to overdo this sort of thing.

Dramatizing Ability.

Maybe one needs more than a little of the instinct of self-dramatization to carry the art to stellar perfection. But aren't we all given a bit to self-dramatization, we women, I mean? Anyway, we're accused of it, so why not cash in on the charge and go in more for this stage managing we're talking about? Without being arty, too dramatic? Couldn't we more often create a picture of what we want to be and try harder to be it? We don't have to pick on poor, oft picked on Helen of Troy nor her Egyptian sidekick, Cleo. In fact, we think it better not to pick a model other than self. I always suspect the smileless women who dramatize themselves [and faces] into joylessness because of a book heroine crush, recent or some time back. Neither do I think the joyless face such good staging. A face can be put to better use in a world that can stand a whole lot of cheer.

What we could do is to visualize ourselves with every weak point raised as far above mediocrity as possible, and Heaven only knows there is at our command today opportunity for accomplishing the impossible, almost. The high lights—and every woman has them—could be exploited for all they are worth by the trick of presenting them at their very best, every day. That is, fine hair coiffed perfectly; clever makeup laid on carefully, daily; a good figure treated daily to supervision; color studied seriously for better hair and eye lighting from dress; leg dressed in shades of stockings that are right and right all of the time; teeth brushed, tended and glistening white, always.

In other words, keep a picture in mind of the girl you might be if you only did the things you know you should do but, for bad personal stage managing, you don't.

DON'T FIGHT A COLD

Instead of "battling with it", soothe your cold away, with the new and modern "Pineoleum" oil spray treatment!

Isn't it sensible to treat a cold at the seat of the trouble—the membranes of nose and throat? The "Pineoleum" oil spray method clears the passages, soothes the angry membranes, rids you at once of that stuffed-up feeling. It bathes the inflamed membranes in a spreading, penetrating film of healing, soothing oil that protects the tissues and inhibits the growth of germs.

Use it for children, too—before they start to school. They like "Pineoleum"—it's not like "medicine" and doesn't upset the stomach. At your druggist's.

Bridge by Radio

A PRETTY game was played in the fourth of the radio bridge broadcasts, put on the air last Tuesday by W-G-N. The experts making up the table were Mrs. J. Vail Shipley, Wichita, Kas.; Miss Florence B. Grant, Zanesville, O.; Earl S. Cobey, Rochester, N. Y.; and Henry P. Jaeger, Cleveland, O.

The hands were:

MR. JAEGER.
S—A, J, 7.
H—10, 6.
D—Q, 8.
C—Q, J, 10, 7, 6, 5.

MR. COBEY.
S—Q, 9, 5, 4.
H—7, 5, 2.
D—K, 10, 5, 3.
C—A, 2.

N.
W. E.
S.

MISS GRANT.
S—10, 6.
H—K, Q, 9, 8, 4, 3.
D—J, 9, 7, 6.
C—3.

MRS. SHIPLEY.
S—K, 8, 3, 2.
H—A, J.
D—A, 4, 2.
C—K, 9, 8, 4.

Mrs. Shipley, south, opened the bidding with one no trump. Mr. Cobey, west, passed. Mr. Jaeger, north, with two doubletons in his hand, feared that a no trump contract would be dangerous, and as he is one of the experts who believe that two of a minor should be bid over a partner's no trump when holding some strength in the minor, he called two clubs on his six cards of the suit to the queen-jack-ten. Miss Grant, east, said two hearts, and Mrs. Shipley, south, having only one stopper in the adverse hearts, said three clubs, which held the bid.

Miss Grant, east, opened the play with the king of hearts to show her partner that she held the ace or queen, or both, of the suit. Mrs. Shipley, south, spread her hand for dummy, and declarer, Mr. Jaeger, took stock of his assets. He counted two or three spade tricks in his combined hands; one heart; one, possibly two, diamonds, and five clubs . . . a minimum of nine and a maximum of eleven tricks. He then won the heart king with dummy's heart ace, west played the deuce, and declarer himself false carded the 10, hoping to make the adversaries think he had no more hearts.

To trick two declarer led dummy's 4 of clubs; west played the deuce, north the queen, another false card, and east the trey. Declarer continued the trump suit by leading the 5 from closed hand; east discarded the 4 of hearts; dummy played the 8 of clubs; and west won with the ace. West then led the 7 of hearts, declarer played the 6, east the queen, and dummy the jack. Miss Grant, east, did not continue the heart suit, as she was almost certain that the only heart outstanding was held by her partner, west, and should hearts be led declarer would be able to trump in one hand and discard from the other, which probably would present him with a trick. So to trick five east led the 6 of diamonds, dummy played the ace, west the 5, and north the 8.

Declarer led the deuce of spades from dummy to trick six; west played the 4; closed hand the jack, and east the 6. Mr. Jaeger, declarer, then knew that he need not lose a spade trick, but that he must lose a diamond unless the fourth spade in dummy's hand could be made a winner, or unless he could force west to make a fatal discard. Declarer reasoned it was probable that west held four spades, and it was also probable that he had the king of diamonds; therefore a squeeze might be effective.

To trick seven declarer led the 6 of clubs from his own hand; east discarded the trey of hearts; dummy played the king of clubs, and west discarded the 5 of hearts. Declarer continued trumps with dummy's 9 of clubs; west discarded the trey of diamonds; closed hand won the trick with the 10 of clubs, and east discarded the 7 of diamonds.

To trick nine declarer led the jack of clubs; east discarded the 8 of hearts; dummy the deuce of diamonds, and west the 10 of diamonds.

Declarer then led the thirteenth trump from his own hand; east discarded the 9 of diamonds, dummy the 4 of diamonds, and Mr. Cobey, west, was effectively squeezed. He knew that closed hand had the ace and another spade, and that he must keep his three spades in order to block dummy's thirteenth spade. He was also quite sure that declarer had in his closed hand the queen of diamonds and that an effort to make that good was the reason for the squeeze. Still it was remotely possible that the queen of diamonds was in the east hand and on that chance Mr. Cobey discarded the king of diamonds rather than a spade which was certain to establish a spade in dummy. Of course Mr. Cobey's discard was immaterial. Mr. Jaeger's squeeze had worked and he had the rest of the tricks, winning 30 trick points below the line and 40 for honors above the line. At progressive or duplicate he would also have scored 125 for game in one hand.

Commenting on the bidding of the hand, Mr. Work commended the correctness of Mrs. Shipley's no trump, west's pass, and north's two clubs because of his two doubletons, provided of course that the partner understood that bid to show strength. He mentioned that Miss Grant, east, had a close decision as to whether she should bid two hearts or pass. However, she doubtless reasoned that her partner would have been justified in passing declarer's no trump with a comparatively strong hand and there was a possibility of game in hearts if her partner could support that bid. And even if her partner did have a weak holding, there was small possibility that two hearts would be doubled for business and the bid might induce the adversaries to stay away from no trump. Mrs. Shipley, south, after the heart bid, did well to say three clubs. Had she bid two no trumps with one heart stopper, her partner, Mr. Jaeger, holding six clubs headed by queen-jack-ten and a positive entry, would have passed and game would have been sacrificed.

TUESDAY'S HAND

The fifth of the season's bridge by radio games will be broadcast over station W-G-N on Tuesday at 8:30 p. m.

Four outstanding players will participate. Mrs. E. L. Bradbury of Dallas will occupy the south position as dealer. Her partner will be Mrs. George R. Campbell of Augusta, Me., and they will be opposed by Victor R. Smith of Miami, Fla., in the west and Mrs. Annie Adair Foster of Atlanta, Ga., in the east. They will hold the following cards:

MRS. CAMPBELL.
S—K, 5.
H—A, 5, 4.
D—Q, 10, 8, 5, 4, 3.
C—J, 10.

MR. SMITH.

(It is suggested that these hands be bid and played and the results compared with those of the radio experts.)

There's Still Time to Select Appropriate Last Minute Gifts

By Helen Bartlett

AREN'T things getting hectic with only three more days to go?

But lean on us, children. We're still working on your case and we've rounded up some last minute ideas for you—things we either saw in the shops or thought up in our own little head.

Husbands seem to be in the saddest plight—at least we get more frantic calls for help from them than from any other group; they're procrastinators, too, and lots of 'em haven't done their shopping YET!

Some thoughts for wifey's last minute present: An order on a furrier for a new coat. Furs are down in price this year, and, take it from us, fur coat Christmases are red letter ones in a married lifetime.

Next might come jewelry. And show us the woman who won't be thrilled by it. Diamonds, emeralds, rubies, and pearls are the favorites in precious stones, but don't be discouraged if real "jools" are out of the question. The semi-precious stuff, in either dress or costume jewelry, is exquisite and much in favor. Then there are always watches—wrist, pendant, or the little trick kind in a pretty case to fit in one's bag.

May Be a Safe Venture.

And how about something to wear? If you're the sort of husband who knows the wife's size, most becoming styles, and her tastes, it's a safe venture; otherwise, take a daughter or your wife's best friend into your confidence when you look for a negligee, an evening dress or wrap, a pair of dinner pajamas (they're all the rage now), or a Sunday night dress.

Miss Weigle, over in a neighboring column, has given husbands and families good ideas for Christmas gifts in the line of furniture, but we wonder if she thought of this one—a chaise longue. They're so luxurious—even the ones of contemporary design. But the husband should have a pretty good idea of what goes with what—a modernistic one in a Directoire boudoir would be a sad mistake.

Or, if she already owns a chaise longue, how about a beautiful cover and pillow for it?

Equally Acceptable.

So much for the things that constitute rather grand gifts. There are hundreds and hundreds of other things that are equally acceptable.

In one State street store we found some lovely new things—candlesticks of Venetian glass, in gold with deep blue banding, that are very charming; luscious perfume bottles; toilet sets in French enamels in three lovely boudoir shades, turquoise, peach, and yellow; a pair of lamps particularly suited to a modern boudoir—gay white figures of dancing girls set on silver mountings constituting the base, with perky shades of white taffeta that echo the dancers' flaring skirts; vases and bottles of Mexican glass in a deep, deep blue; and still other lovely lamps, notably some with Napoleonic figure bases and corded, drum shaped shades in silk.

For the Boy Friend.

Next to this husband to wife problem is the inevitable, "What shall I give the boy friend?"

Well, try these over on your Christmas list. Leather things are good always—a portfolio, a bill fold, a cigaret case, a lighter, or perhaps a desk set. If he likes to read, get his favorite author in a good binding; if he likes to play golf, how about a duffle bag, or a golf watch for his pocket?

Something Gay for Mother.

Now, how about mother? Here's our idea: When you buy for mother forget that she is cook, dishwasher and general factotum in a house. Get her something frivolous— a negligee, a bit of jewerly, a grand handbag, stockings that are unbelievably sheer —any gay thing that's not "sensible for a woman her age" and that she'll get a thrill out of, whether or not she admits it.

Now, how about sister or daughter or the gay young girl? Chances are you know what she wants because the gay young things aren't backward about giving Santa Claus a little help, but if you are guessing blindly consider these things:

A tap dancing costume. [Four out of five are tap dancing these days.]

A new party dress—long, fluffy, and very feminine.

Jewelry—a watch, a clip for her bonnet, a girly-girly evening necklace and bracelet, a smart looking handbag with her initials in marcasite.

We hope you have a perfect Christmas!

GOOD MORNING!

Every so often there eases into town, unheralded and unsung, a perfectly charming program movie. "Part Time Wife" is one of these. And the title DOESN'T —MEAN—A—THING!

This is a comedy drama that is really comical and really dramatic. The comedy is the tail that wags the dog, for, while the picture has its serious moments, the sunshiny side is always uppermost. The piece is polished and provocative throughout, daring to be natural, but never overstepping the bounds of good taste. It's a picture that grownups and children will equally adore.

The film relates the story of a pair of young married folks who love each other, but part for a time. The separation is caused by the irascibility of the husband, who lets business worries fray his nerves and brings home to his wife a truly terrible diposition. In time, this fair lady feels she's stood enough, so she up and leaves her barking spouse. He promptly has a breakdown and is ordered by his doctor to eschew business and take up golf.

He says he won't—but he does. His wife, by the way, is an expert with the niblick.

An Appealing Little Caddy.

Now, on the golf course whither our hero hies himself, is a little caddy named Tommy, who, according to himself in his own Irish brogue, isn't "rated very high." He's an orphan and lives alone in an obscure hut he has discovered, and he's saving all his tips to send to Ireland for the passage overseas of his "shepernewfunder" dog, Tony. Don't ask me what IS a "shepernewfunder"; what one looks like or is good for. Learning about "shepernewfunders" is one of the things that makes "Part Time Wife" so richly worth while.

Now Mrs. Murdock, who has taken back her maiden name of Betty Rogers, likes this particular golf course. In due time, her husband, Tommy and the "shepernewfunder" meet and merge interests, and—well, will you PLEASE see this picture?

Cast Is Perfect.

The cast is perfect. Never were Edmund Lowe and Leila Hyams in better form. Tommy Clifford, who plays the caddy, is the little Irishman you saw in "Song of My Heart" with John McCormack. He's grand. As for the "shepernewfunder"—well—there was never before SUCH a "shepernewfunder"! His life is so full of a number of things. . . . !

Minor rôles are expertly handled. Dialogue is snappy, to the point, well delivered—and there's not too much of it. Photography and sound are fine, and the direction is shrewd, smooth and intuitive.

I have your interests at heart when I say to you this Sunday morning that "Part Time Wife" is a film to which you should treat yourselves, and any little folks you happen to have about.

Bits aBOUTem.

THE VOICE of "Mickey Mouse" is Helen Lind. . . . GERMANY has banned "All Quiet on the Western Front" after six days of riotous protests by the Fascists, the censor board ruling that the film dwelt too much on German defeat, painted a false picture of the German soldier and "endangers German prestige abroad." . . . PARAMOUNT now employs two directors on many of its pictures; one is called "dialog," the other "action" director, and neither is supposed to boss the other. . . . A PARISIAN publishing house has bought the book rights to "Mickey Mouse" and "Felix, the Cat," because screen introduction has made the American comic strip characters so popular in Paris. . . . VILMA BANKY and her husband, ROD LA ROCQUE, are appearing together most successfully in the stage production, "Cherries Are Ripe," according to report. . . . MARIE DRESSLER will probably do "Lullaby" from the play by Edward Knoblock. MARJORIE RAMBEAU is second choice for the part. . . GEORGE BANCROFT wants $150,000 for a picture and Paramount designs to pay him a weekly salary instead. Outcome is—to come. . . . CABLE STATES that "With Byrd at the South Pole" is packing 'em in in Vienna. . . DAUGHTERS of the American Revolution rate as A1, "Check and Double Check," "Along Came Youth," "At the Bottom of the World," "Abraham Lincoln," "Lost Gods," "The Silent Enemy," "A Lady's Morals," and "Tom Sawyer." . . . ESTHER RALSTON will be seen once more on the screen with LAWRENCE TIBBETT in "The Southerner." . . LUPE VELEZ and GARY COOPER are said to be married, and Photoplay claims that CHARLES FARRELL and VIRGINIA VALLI are that way now. . . . WILLIAM FARNUM, who "came back" so grandly in "Du Barry," will play the rôle of King Arthur in Will Rogers' next starring picture, "A Connecticut Yankee." SERGES EISENSTEIN, the great director, disgusted with Hollywood, has gone back to Russia, and report has it that Greta Garbo is about to shake California dust from her heels. Short sighted folks, these movie producers, to permit any such exodus! S. S. VAN DINE, author of "Philo Vance," has signed to write a series of two reel detective stories for Warner Brothers.

See you tomorrow.

Civic Opera Plans Special Events for Holiday Nights

By Edward Moore.

THEY are saying at the Civic Opera house that something of a stimulative nature should be done for the operatic schedule during the holiday season. For some little time there has been an announcement that "Aida" would do its part to welcome in the new year. It may now be told that Christmas is likewise to have a share in the festival proceedings.

So if you are planning a quiet party for Christmas eve, put it off, for on that night Mary Garden will make her first appearance hereabouts in "La Navarraise," following it by a revival of "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame." And family dinners on Christmas night might as well be postponed, too, because then the company will give its first performance of "The Bartered Bride."

It has been a theory of many years that these were the two nights of the year when people in general were most capable of amusing themselves without outside entertainment. Evidently the theory is wrong and the Civic Opera company is preparing to prove its fallacy. At any rate, the rest of the week will be made up of repetitions, the season's last performance of "Otello" tomorrow night, "Lohengrin" Tuesday, "Camille" Saturday afternoon, and "Il Trovatore" Saturday night.

A Noisy Opera.

"La Navarraise" has not been often given by the Chicago company, and it never ranked extremely high in the list of successes when it was given. It consists of exploding gunpowder and singing in terms of fortissimo shouts in about equal proportions. There is historical matter to the effect that years ago Emma Calve made something of a hit as Anita, wherefore the way is open to Miss Garden to step in and show how to make a hit on her own behalf. Concerning her Jean in "Le Jongleur" there can be no question. It is one of the loveliest things she ever did.

In the first work she will have the company of René Maison, Jean Vieulle, and Edouard Cotreuil, with Emil Cooper conducting. In the second she will be assisted by Cesare Formichi and Mr. Cotreuil, with Roberto Moranzoni at the baton.

Memories of "The Bartered Bride" —the most recent are of the sprightly performances at Ravinia last summer —are to the effect that it is an entrancing entertainment. It is comic opera, one of the most popular of all comic operas, and it has not only delighted thousands of beholders, but it has actually made history. Concerning the last, the research department of the Chicago Civic Opera company obliges with this:

"'The Bartered Bride,' written by a Bohemian and to be sung in German, is the most popular work of the founder of the Bohemian, or Czechish, nationalist school. With its merry Bohemian folk tunes it forms a part of the remarkable movement in the nineteenth century to revive the Bohemian nationality, long submerged under the German. Even the modern Greeks, who restored their language after a virtual sleep of nearly five centuries, can show no such amazing instance of a whole people made race conscious by artificial means.

"Because they lived under a German royal house, because their foreign trade was almost entirely in German hands, Bohemians had almost ceased to be Bohemians, and had become Germans in speech, customs and manner of thought. In the nineteenth century a movement was started to counteract these tendencies, something like the present Celtic movement in Ireland, but infinitely more successful. The language was revived; patriotism was restored as a virtue, and a new Bohemian culture, including literature and music, came into being. The climax of this movement came just after the late war, when the Austrian empire fell and the Czecho-Slovak republic was established.

First Produced at Prague.

"'The Bartered Bride' was first produced at Prague, the present capital of Czecho-Slovakia, in 1866, and in the United States in 1909 at the Metropolitan. Though it was written in consonance with the Bohemian national movement, the fact that a wider public awaited it in German speaking countries caused it to be translated into German, and it is better known as 'Die Verkaufte Braut' than as 'Prodana Nevesta.'"

The cast that will sing it next Thursday evening will include Maria Rajdl as Maria, Maria Olszewska as Katinka, Sonia Sharnova as Agnes, Theodore Strack as Hans, Eduard Habich as Kruschina, Octave Dua as Wenzel, Alexander Kipnis as Kezal, and Chase Baromeo as Micha. The conductor will be Egon Pollak.

Yale Glee Club on Tuesday.

The Yale Glee club, due at Orchestra hall Tuesday night, is putting up a surprising program as glee club concerts go. This one is much more like the program of a chorus of many years' experience. College songs are reduced to a minimum and placed near the end of the program.

Instead of "Bright College Years," "Wake, Freshman, Wake," and the like, the organization will sing groups of English folk songs, of Christmas music, Spanish, French, and Italian, of American folk songs, spirituals, plantation melodies, concluding with the finale of "The Gondoliers." There will be a special student song, but it belongs of Heidelberg, Heinrich Marschner's "The Testament." Even the soloists have fitted themselves into the plan. J. Van B. Griggs will sing Purcell's "Passing By" and "The Heart of a Man" from "The Beggar's Opera," both early eighteenth century, and Basil D. Henning will sing "Bygone Ballads" of 1843-1854.

It would seem that the conductor, Marshall M. Bartholomew, has an idea that there are musical possibilities in a university glee club, hampered though it may be by an annual change in part of its membership. It will be interesting to see how well this one has been able to work out the dangers of too little seriousness on the one side and too much highbrowism on the other. On the face, the program looks inviting.

Mr. Bartholomew is in his ninth year as director of the glee club. He

New Photography Produces Lifelike Films for Screen

By Tom Pettey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—There is a picture called "Danger Lights" playing at the Mayfair theater where the burlesque queens used to strut. We paid a dollar to see it the other night, and for the first time in many moons we did not begrudge the producers their share of the profits from our well worn bank note. Neither the acting nor the plot calls for praise, but the photography marks a birthday in Mr. Talkie's life.

Natural vision motion pictures, or at least films claiming that advantage are not exactly novelties on Broadway. "Danger Lights," however, is different. One actually does get the impression of depth as well as width. The new photography is the result of fifteen years of research by George K. Spoor, pioneer picture man of Chicago. The film was made by Radio-Keith-Orpheum and is the first feature production to be produced with the Spoor-Berggren process.

Lifelike Pictures.

Several months ago we hurried down to Roxy's theater to see a double size film and about all we got out of it was the idea that some one had switched glasses on us and we were seeing things through magnifying lenses. Afterwards we saw several other "wide films," "three dimension" pictures and "depth" innovations, none of them of more than passing importance.

The photography in "Danger Lights" is said to have been done with two lenses working simultaneously. Men and women, trees, trains and, in fact, everything in the picture sort of step out of the screen and take on a rounded, lifelike appearance. The backgrounds are seldom blurred as in other wide film pictures and objects thirty feet or more behind the characters in the foreground are clear cut.

The picture was shown on a screen twice the width of the ordinary lighted surface and was received with voiced admiration by the audience. Giant locomotives, puffing and emitting clouds of steam, almost leaped at one from the screen; the hero and heroine strolling along a railroad track with great mountains in the background stood out with the clarity of the true life and almost unbelievable depth was gained in panoramas.

This observer would like to see all his pictures on just such a screen with just such photography, for it brings a touch of authentic reproduction to the talkies that makes them seem almost flesh and blood and real stone and machinery. Even the rain in "Danger Lights" looked real, and the five hour train ride to Chicago was a true thriller.

We have no space to bother you with the plot. It is a railroad picture, and Louis Wolheim, Robert Armstrong and Jean Arthur hold the leading rôles. There is a bum who is always hopping freights and who finally manages to take the fastest ride in his career on the hospital special. He should be a great comedian, some day. We did not get his name, but some smart director will nab him for a picture all his own.

Titles Without Logic.

"Only Saps Work" at the Paramount. Well, anyhow, that is the name of the picture and it has nothing to do with the book by that name, except that the film company paid the author for the title. So far as we were

Mix Divorce Recalls Days of Gay Parties

Swimming Pool Center of Many Frolics.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—The Tom Mix divorce suit was, of course, nothing new. But folks have had a great kick out of Tom's saying in a New York interview that he got his wife swimming pools and other things in which he wasn't much interested.

All Hollywood misses the colorful Mix since he has been away on a circus tour, and one of the things especially missed is the sort of grand parties Tom threw while his wife was abroad getting the culture that unfitted her for being the wife of a "simple cowboy." If Tom did not enjoy the big, fashionable house and the swimming pool he certainly enjoyed watching the younger element enjoy them for him. Sunny Sunday mornings often saw all the important pulchritude of Hollywood assembled in swimming suits, disporting like dolphins in the Mix pool. There used to be Margaret Livingston, Phyllis Haver, Lupe Velez, Dorothy Dwan, and many others.

Lots of Temperament.

At this time Tom used to get morose and mourn his misspent life. One touching incident was his fatherly affection for tempestuous Lupe Velez. Lupe used to take off his shoes and rub his feet for him. And Tom would wax lachrymose and tell her she was the most unselfish and thoughtful girl in Hollywood.

Then, when the Paris divorce miscarried and Mrs. Mix came home, Tom made an impassioned statement about the "Hollywood parasites" who had cluttered up his home and eaten his food and abused his hospitality. One can only diagnose Tom's troubles as being an acute case of temperament. Perhaps the words really to express his feelings are not in the vocabulary of what Tom called "a simple cow hand."

Tries to Buy Agua Caliente.

Since stepping out as head of United Artists, Joseph M. Schenck, whose fondness for an exciting card game with thrilling stakes, is proverbial, made an effort to buy out the Agua Caliente gambling casino and hotel enterprise.

Schenck's offer was made on behalf of a syndicate of Los Angeles film and sporting men, one being Lou Anger. The offer was rejected last week, according to Sol Zemansky, promoter, speculator and sporting man of Los Angeles, whose brother, Joe Zemansky, had a part in financing the original Agua Caliente enterprise after participating profitably in sundry concessions at Tia Juana.

Gotham Loses Old Theater to the Films

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The cinema has triumphed frequently over the legitimate drama along Broadway, in so far as the picture producers have been able to outbid play producers for the use of certain Broadway theaters. I do not know the exact number, but I should say that at least twenty of the playhouses that formerly were devoted to spoken plays have this year been leased by the movie men and turned into museums for the talking pictures.

The cinema men rent the theaters, install their sound reproducing apparatus, rebuild their fronts to resemble modernistic sideshows, hire a couple of tall boys to serve as ballyhoos, dress the boys like army generals, and station them out in front to urge the crowds inside. Then they put a price on the entertainment that appeals to even flattened purses and the cinemaniacs respond, not always in droves, but at least in very respectable and, I assume, highly profitable groups.

Republic Bought by Invaders.

The newest of the older theaters to have been bought up by the invaders is the Republic. It has been rather out of the competition for some time, but it still is most advantageously located just off Seventh avenue on Forty-second street, around the corner from Times square. The Rialto stands on the corner, occupying the location of the old Hammerstein Victoria Music Hall.

When I came to New York, which was long enough ago to make me almost an old timer, the Victoria was actively Hammerstein, though Oscar was beginning to slip a bit. In the summer he had a roof show on top of the Victoria, and it ran back over the roof of the Republic, where some sort of model farm had been established with a live cow and one or more flirting milkmaids.

After that the Republic gained fame as the home of "Abie's Irish Rose" during the six years of its run there. "Abie" had been started at the Fulton and was about to die when Oliver Bailey, having leased the Republic, took it over. Anne Nichols mortgaged her Bayside home to make the move possible, and that was the beginning of an adventure in play nursing and reversed public and critical opinion that will figure in all future American theater history.

One Victory for the Stage.

However, the legitimate theater of Broadway has at least one victory to its credit over its rushing competitor. At least it has if you would speak of a noisy and expansive revue as representing anything legitimate. Last week a large and costly Broadway theater, built as the Colonial and intended for the pictures, was turned back into regular channels and devoted to the production of a revue called "The New Yorkers."

The Colonial is huge and handsome, is leased by B. S. Moss, whose fortunes rose with the popularity of the screen, and seats something over a thousand people on its orchestra floor alone. Probably there are another thousand seats in the long sloping balcony, which gives it many more seats than any other playhouse in town devoted to entertainment in the flesh.

The new production is in the nature of an experiment. Ray Goetz, who last season successfully produced a piece called "Fifty Million Frenchmen" for the Warners, is of the opinion that even an expensive musical revue can be made to pay if the seating capacity of the theater in which it is played makes it possible to sell seats at reasonable figures.

The pay roll of the new piece is an item. The stars include Clayton, Jackson and Durante, Charles King, Ann Pennington, Hope Williams, Frances Williams, Marie Cahill and Richard Carle. It is not a list that excites me particularly. I am one to whom the night club antics of the Durante trio appeal but lightly, though most of my colleagues find them highly novel and even excitingly different.

Players Limited by Producers.

Charles King, grown plump in pictures, sings a bit fattily, and Ann Pennington, though she has kept her figure and her dimpled knees, is forced by circumstances and her producers to depend upon those of her dances most familiar to her largest public.

Frances Williams is a hoarse voiced moaner of the current blue songs, and those kindly remembered veterans, Miss Cahill and Mr. Carle, are given a chance to do no more than read a line or two for the use of their names. Hope Williams is the newcomer. She is the society actress Arthur Hopkins took away from the Comedy club and put first into "Paris Bound" and then into "Holiday." Why she should want to play around with the revues I have no idea.

In this one she is engaged to give the piece a tone. Being a fast living society girl, fed up with life, she visits a doctor for treatment, takes a dose of his medicine and dreams the show. She hails, she says, from Park avenue, "where bad women walk with good dogs."

The best of "The New Yorkers" is in the scenery and the sketches, both either designed or suggested by Peter Arno, the favorite caricaturist. Herbert Field also helped with the book and Cole Porter wrote the music. It is a lot of entertainment of its kind for the prices Mr. Goetz charges, and probably will make something of a show place of the Broadway the rest of the season.

Negro Player Dies.

Wesley Hill died last week. Which will mean nothing to you unless you happen to know that Wesley was the colored actor playing Gabriel in the still popular "Green Pastures" and that his performance was one of the minor delights of the adventure of seeing that play.

It is Gabriel who first sounds the keynote of the performance. In the opening scene in heaven, peopled by all the angels at a celestial fish fry, Gabriel announces the approach of the Lord.

"Gangway for the Lawd God Jehovah!" he calls from offstage.

His words carry the first slight

Stage Leaders Fear Approach of Censorship

Theater Must Reform Self, "Equity" Declares.

By Charles Collins.

THE question of censorship is troubling theatrical affairs. The Actors' Equity association has frankly announced its fears that if the American stage does not reform itself from within, the reactionaries, fundamentalists, and professional prohibitors will clamp down the lid with drastic legal measures.

"Equity" has invited the organized playwrights and managers to join with it in discussing the formation of an unofficial play jury, which will operate in the national source of theatrical production, New York, seeking to improve the soul of the drama, in the hope that economic blessings will follow. The Dramatists' Guild has answered with an emphatic negative, saying, in effect, "We want not less liberty, but more," and the managers seem to be evading the issue.

Nothing will come of "Equity's" reasonable suggestions, one may be sure. It is a gesture in the right direction, and it may serve to put a sense of shame into some of the sinners; but coöperation between the various theatrical groups to weed out the mildewed plays that are blighting their wholesome brothers is a uptopian dream. We come, then, to the other horn of the dilemma—the ominous prediction of Frank Gillmore, "Equity's" president. He puts the alternative grimly: "We may confidently expect a political censorship by Easter, engineered by religious and law enforcement groups."

Day of Reckoning?

If I dared to assume the mantle of prophecy, I should postpone the day of reckoning much later than that. I should say that it will come only when the groups that Mr. Gillmore views with alarm have lost their fight in defense of their greatest idol, Prohibition, and are gnashing their teeth for vengeance upon any easy prey within reach. The theater will then be at their mercy. Its behavior has been flagrant; it has apparently been hunting for trouble, and the prohibitory groups will be wrathful enough, when the day of their great defeat comes, to land upon it hammer and tongs.

There is much evidence to support the contention that the modern stage is in need of a censorship, or of some form of enlightened restraint, that will tone up its occasionally sinister morals and correct its frequently atrocious manners. But an Olympian intelligence is needed for the task, and where can it be found? Censorships have a vicious habit of falling into the wrong hands, especially where the arts are concerned.

I can think of only one man whom I would recommend for the job of curbing the bawdiness and chastening the vulgarity of the American stage, and he, unhappily, is not available for public service. He is King Magnus of Shaw's comedy, "The Apple Cart." And he, I suspect, would say: "Other aspects of modern life being what they are, why blame the theater for attempting, in its crude and blatant way, to depict them? Let's begin farther back."

Pirandello Players.

"As You Desire Me," which will come to the Harris theater Dec. 29 under the auspices of the Dramatic league of Chicago, is the latest play by Luigi Pirandello, Italy's philosophic and modernistic dramatist, to reach these shores. He bears an impressive reputation among the deep thinkers of the theater; his work, dealing with subtle problems of personality and identity, is far off the beaten track of stage material. For a specimen of his method, "Six Characters in Search of an Author," which was staged at the Goodman last season, may be submitted. It is the only play by Pirandello that has thus far been seen in Chicago.

Judith Anderson, who was the Nina Leeds during most of the run of "Strange Interlude" here last season, will appear as the central figure in "As You Desire Me"—an Unknown Woman about whose identity the story is concerned. She is found in Berlin by an Italian who claims that she is his wife, taken from his home by invading troops ten years before. Around this woman of mystery Pirandello spins his web of discussion about the Me and the You and other delicate points of psychology which worry the minds of philosophers.

The husband in the case will be played by Henry Daniell, who acted here with Ethel Barrymore in "The Laughing Lady" some seven or eight years ago, and who was leading man in her revival of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," a little later. The rôle of the woman's protector, a German novelist, has been assigned to Douglas Dumbrille, last seen here in an operetta called "Princess Flavia." It seems that he is an actor with a penchant for musical shows, for he was the Athos in Mr. Ziegfeld's "Three Musketeers." He saw service with the Theater Guild during the New York engagement of "A Month in the Country."

An incidental rôle in "As You Desire Me" will be played by Jose Ruben, a well known character actor, especially in rôles of French, Spanish and Italian flavor. He is most quickly remembered here from his appearances with Mary Nash during the period of heir marriage. His last acting in Chicago was as Cardinal Richelieu in an operetta based on Stanley Weyman's romance, "The Red Robe"—a brief incident of the Majestic's season two years ago.

Theater Guild, Etc.

"In the Meantime" didn't seem like much of a title for Claire and Paul Sifton's play which the Theater Guild will bring to its New York premiere Monday, Dec. 29. So it has been changed to "Midnight." The guild is not in the habit of altering title during rehearsals, like other managements, but in this case a new label seemed to be in order. "In the Meantime" was a phrase that did not fasten itself in the playgoing memory. Moreover, it recalled the able to discover, the title has nothing to do with the picture.

Leon Errol, who has a pair of trick knees that collapse about where Ann Pennington's dimple is, made his talkie debut in "Only Saps Work." As a versatile sort of kleptomaniac he steals a suitcase full of cash from a handy bank and the fun starts.

For some reason or other this title business is getting more and more confusing. For instance, there is "Sin Takes a Holiday." Try to find a reason for the name in the film. The stage play "Half Gods" becomes "Free Love" on the screen, then there is that coming movie, "The Devil Was Sick," which once was known as "A Husband's Privileges." Just try to reason it out.

The producers seem to think that certain titles have box office value. Maybe they have, but I'll have to be shown. It is the same way in the stage world. There is the play "The Greeks Had a Name for It." Nobody yet has figured out the name for it.

The picture houses have strung their Christmas bells and hung their holly wreaths. There is a Santa Claus on every corner ringing his bell for pennies, nickels and dimes. The beggars have come to town and it is just about time to mail those Christmas cards to distant friends.

Stage Leaders Fear Approach of Censorship

Theater Must Reform Self, "Equity" Declares.

By Charles Collins.

refrain of a recently popular song: "In the meantime—in between time—ain't we got fun!" And as the play happens to have the electrocution of a murderess in its background, this suggestion was not in order.

The secret service men of the New York Times' theatrical department have been shadowing that new play by Philip Barry, called "Hail and Farewell," for the time being, and they have something to report. The piece is said to bear no resemblance to "Holiday," or "Paris Bound," or even "Hotel Universe." Its scene is a small Indiana college town, and its story deals with the tragic romance between a young professor and the wife of one of the trustees. Thus it would seem that Mr. Barry has walked out on his favorite social set of smart talking, ritzy young moderns, and taken up with the plain American people.

Otis Skinner is said to be yearning to play the central rôle in Marcel Pagnol's "Marseilles," which failed to repeat the success of the same Frenchman's "Topaze" in New York. His idea is to buy the production from Gilbert Miller and take it on the road, where shows are scarce and he is popular. He did this with "A Hundred Years Ago," later called "Papa Juan," and wangled a profitable season out of it, much to the wonderment and annoyance of the original management.

Revivals of old melodramas seem to be the latest wrinkle at the side street and semi-pro playhouses. "The Drunkard," which dates back to 1840, is being given at the Civic Arts theater, 1358 North Clark street, and "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," a howler of 1900, is being offered by the North Shore Circuit theater, formerly the North Shore Theater guild. The latter play was written by Owen Davis, who is still active as a dramatist.

Charles Dillingham has five expensive failures on his Broadway managerial record this season, and so he isn't in a reckless mood. He has abandoned his intention to stage the English musical comedy called "Mr. Cinders," and his interest in the play called "Cynara," hopefully imported from London by Edna Best and Herbert Marshall, is cooling rapidly. Mr. Dillingham intends, however, to put on a play called "The Bad Penny," written by William Anthony McGuire, whose libretto for Mr. Ziegfeld's "Smiles" was so heartily denounced by the New York critics. Glenn Hunter will be in the cast.

A new manager named Sidney Ross did a lot of promising last summer, chiefly dealing with Russian dramatic importations. He now admits that his plans are at a standstill because the soviet government is opposing the departure for capitalistic climes of Meyerhold of Moscow. Also, the commissars are not inclined to give Dantchenko an American vacation for the purpose of staging "Resurrection." So all that seems to be "cold."

Booth Tarkington's return to playwriting will be celebrated in Columbus, O., next Friday night with the first acting of "Colonel Satan," under the management of Mr. Tarkington's old buddy, George C. Tyler. . . . And next Tuesday night Brock Pemberton will stage, in Atlantic City, his first production since "Strictly Dishonorable." Its title is "Made in Hollywood."

"Saint Wench," an adaptation from the Hungarian by John Colton, is announced for production by John D. Williams. Maybe this is the play from the pen of the author of "Rain" that Mr. Williams intended for Maude Adams' return to the stage. Hopes for the latter happy event are growing dim.

CHICAGO PLAYBILLS

OPENING:

"The Tavern," with George M. Cohan; Blackstone; opens tonight.

"Ripples," with Fred Stone; Illinois; opens tomorrow night.

"Berkeley Square," with Leslie Howard and Margalo Gillmore; Selwyn; opens Thursday night.

CONTINUED:

"Simple Simon," with Ed Wynn; Grand Opera House; third week.

"Hay Fever," by Noel Coward; Goodman; third week.

"Michael and Mary"; Dramatic league production; Harris; fourth and final week.

"The Sea Gull"; Goodman; Jan. 6.

WEEKLY CHANGE:

R-K-O. Palace theater; continuous vaudeville and talking pictures; Rae Samuels, headliner.

Kedzie theater; dramatic stock company; "Twin Beds."

TORCH SINGER

WINI SHAW.

SHE sings "Ten Cents a Dance" and other heart-breaking ditties in "Simple Simon," at the Grand Opera House, as one of Ed Wynn's auxiliaries, and thus may be classified as a "torch singer." A torch song, it might be explained, is a sentimental ballad of feminine woes which has turned slightly blue from overexposure to modernism. Miss Shaw is a vivid representative of her species, and a much applauded member of Mr. Wynn's company.

Here Are Three New Playbills for Xmas Week

Mr. Cohan, Fred Stone, and 'Berkeley Square.'

GEORGE M. COHAN will begin a three weeks' engagement at the Blackstone theater tonight in a revival of "The Tavern," which was popular ten years ago because of the emotional intensity with which it burlesqued old school melodrama. It was a famous play of its time, a puzzle to some, a gaudy jest to others. It ranks high among the hoaxes of the American stage.

The play was written by Cora Dick Gantt as a serious romance. Mr. Cohan doctored it—without her knowledge, it is said—and keyed up its scenes by stage direction until it became a travesty for the sophisticated theatergoer. A striking box office success was the result.

Mr. Cohan, in this revival, has the rôle of the vagabond originally acted here by Lowell Sherman. Oothers in the company are Joe Allen, as the hired man; Isabel Baring as the governor's daughter; Shirley Grey as the woman; Robert Middlemass as the tavernkeeper; Edward F. Nannery, Kathleen Niday, William Jeffrey, Eda von Buelow, Willis Claire, and Theodore Newton.

Fred Stone will begin an engagement at the Illinois theater tomorrow night in "Ripples," his latest musical extravaganza. This will be the famous comedian's first appearance in Chicago since his airplane accident of two years ago. His daughter, Dorothy, is co-starred with him, and a younger daughter, Paula, is making her stage debut in this amusement.

"Ripples" is a modernization of the legend of Rip Van Winkle. The libretto was written by William Anthony McGuire, and the music and lyrics by Irving Caesar, Oscar Levant, Albert Sirmay, and Graham John. The production was handsomely staged, with scenery by Joseph Urban. Besides Mr. Stone and his two daughters the company includes Andrew Tombes, Billy Taylor, Hilda Spong, Cynthia Foley, Ruth Farrar, Charles Collins, W. J. McCarthy, Charles Mast, Colonel Caspar, a Tiller ballet, and a troupe of midgets.

The Christmas week matinees will be given on Friday and Saturday.

"Berkeley Square," a dramatic fantasy which is usually rated as among the ten best plays of the past year, will begin an engagement at the Selwyn theater next Thursday night, with Leslie Howard and Margalo Gillmore in the leading rôles. It has had seven months' run in New York, and comes here with its original cast, so far as the principal rôles are concerned.

John L. Balderston, the author, found the germ of his plot in a bit of fiction called "The Sense of the Past," by Henry James—a story whose completion was interrupted by his death. It deals with a certain American who moves into an old house in London, and relives, or dreams, the life of an ancestor who had dwelt there 144 years before. A charming love story is woven into the picture of Georgian manners.

Mr. Howard and Miss Gillmore are supported by Louise Prussing, Alice John, Lucy Beaumont, Dorothy Blackburn, Charles Romano, Tarver Penna, Henry Warwick, and Frank Andrews.

For Francine Larrimore.

The young Mr. Newman who produced "Bad Girl" [now headed for Chicago] sold the talking picture rights for $75,000. So he thinks that show business is grand, and will stage Sidney Buchman's "Storm Song" in Philadelphia a week hence. The action of this play takes place on a fishing schooner, and concerns fourteen men—almost a crew for the "dead man's chest"—plus Francine Larrimore. After that Mr. Newman will put on something called "Old Man Murphy," written by Patrick Kearney, with Arthur Sinclair and Maire O'Neill, the original Irish players, heading the company.

BROADWAY OPENINGS

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—[Special.] Broadway's new offerings for the Christmas holidays are eight in number. They include Greek tragedy, Shakespeare, Russian farce, musical comedy and plain American drama. Here is the list of openings:

"Ballyhoo"—Opens tomorrow night at the Hammerstein. W. C. Fields is the star of this musical comedy, whose librettist has had the happy notion of casting him as the promoter of a transcontinental foot race. The show is the work of a virtually new trio—Harry Ruskin, Leighton K. Brill and Lou Alter—and the comedian's supporting cast will include Janet Reade, Max Hoffmann Jr., Don Tomkins, Chase Chase and Grace Hayes.

"The Inspector General"—Opens Tuesday night at the Hudson. Gogol's celebrated farce, in a version prepared by John Anderson, will be Jed Harris' second production of the season. Romney Brent, Claude Cooper, Dorothy Gish, J. Edward Bromberg, Lina Abarbanell, Eugene Powers, Eduardo Ciannelli, Frank Conlan and Edward Rigby will be in the cast.

"King Lear"—Opens Thursday night at the Ambassador. Fritz Leiber and his company, beginning another engagement in Shakespearean repertory under the auspices of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society. Mr. Leiber's associate players include Lawrence H. Cecil, Hart Jenks, Ingeborg Torrop, Mary Hone, Virginia Bronson and John Burke.

Ruth Draper—Opens Friday night at the Comedy. The distinguished dramatic recitalist in a four weeks' engagement, offering her character impressions.

"Elektra"—Opens Friday night at the New Yorker theater. The first of the plays of classical Greece to be presented here by Marika Cotopouli, a visiting Greek actress. She will appear for six performances in a modern Greek translation of Hugo von Hofmannstahl's version of the Sophocles tragedy.

"The Life Line"—Opens Saturday night at the Vanderbilt. A comedy by Gretchen Damrosch Finletter. Leo Bulgakov, the Russian director, will be the producer, and the cast will include Lewis Leverett, Eunice Stoddard, Carroll Ashburn and Akim Tamiroff.

"Purity"—Opens Thursday night at the Ritz. Florence Reed, returning as the star of a play adapted from the French of Rene Wachthausen by Ralph Roeder. Others in the cast will be Richard Bird, Malcolm Williams, Maude Odell and Marcella Swanson.

"Five Star Final"—Opens Friday night at the Cort. Louis Weitzenkorn's newspaper play and the latest production by Al H. Woods. Conspicuous in the cast will be Arthur Byron, Berton Churchill, Malcolm Duncan, Merle Maddern, Frances Fuller, King Calder and Kenneth Dana.

"The Truth Game"—Saturday night at the Barymore. Ivor Novello's second play to be produced on Broadway this season. The author and Billie Burke will be starred in it; others prominent in the cast will Viola Tree, daughter of the late Beerbohm, and Phoebe Foster.

Freak Play Titles.

Another freak title has turned up in the managers' promises. It is "She Lived Next to the Firehouse." L. Lawrence Weber says he owns a play of this label, and may be rash enough to stage it. . . . "The Greeks Had a Word for It" made the grade on Broadway, after dragging its weird appellation uphill for a few weeks. But Frederick Lonsdale's smart slogan, "Canaries Sometimes Sing," proved to be merely a dirge.

"Sons o' Guns," with Harry Richman as its star, ended its tour in Philadelphia Dec. 13. The show was apparently haunted and hexed by the ghost of Jack Donahue. And to make a little coincidence, the London production came to its close on the same night.

The London Telegraph says that the next play by the busy Edgar Wallace will be called "Smoky Cell," and that its scene is laid in a New York state penitentiary. Which suggests that Mr. Wallace has heard something about "The Last Mile."

shock and the first thrill to the listening audience of adults who are about to hear the Bible story retold and see Bible history reënacted as it takes form in the minds of a Negro Sunday school class in the deep south. And it is Gabriel who brings the play up short with another heartening chuckle when he grows increasingly anxious to blow his trumpet and settle all the Lord's troubles. One blast on that old horn and judgment day will put an end to the worries of God and the most rebellious of his children. It might crowd heaven a bit, but it would be a grand experience.

Gabriel takes the trumpet down from the hat rack where it hangs in God's office. God's back is turned. He is busy at his desk. Affectionately, and just a little slyly, Gabriel gives the horn an extra polish with his blue robe. He wets his lips and puts the mouthpiece to his mouth.

"Now, watch yo'self, Gabriel," cautions the Lord without turning around.

"I wasn't goin' to blow, Lawd," insists Gabriel. "I jest do dat every now an' den so I can keep de feel of it."

A Genial Favorite.

These are favorite scenes in the play and they helped make a favorite of Wesley Hill. He was a genial, round-faced chap, and had been on the stage most of his life. He had played in medicine shows, minstrel troupes, through vaudeville, to "Porgy."

He was on his way home from the performance when he was struck by a taxicab in Harlem. The driver stopped and carried Wesley to the hospital, but he was dead when they got him there.

His funeral services were the largest attended by his people in recent Harlem history. Richard B. Harrison, who plays the Lord so effectively in "Green Pastures," and who was formerly a Shakespearean reader and lay preacher in the south, spoke Gabe's eulogy, and the angel choir of the play sang its spirituals in his honor, punctuated by the expressed grief of Adam and Eve, of Moses, and Noah and all the heavenly host.

It is a dead time in the theaters. The town is out shopping and wondering about its bank accounts, if not its banks. But, optimism being what it is, there is a schedule of new plays announced for the holiday weeks and immediately thereafter that reads like a second opening of the season.

John Vanderlyn's Adventure

by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

What Has Gone Before:

JOHN VANDERLYN, a young American, is visiting at the villa of the Marchesa Trescobaldi, near Monte Carlo. The marchesa takes her guests, Col. Bruce, Joan Peveral, an English girl, and John, to an Arabian fortune teller. The Arab tells Vanderlyn that he is going to have an adventure with death and that he will not return to America until after he is married and his wife has borne him three children. On the road back to the marchesa's villa the guests rescue two victims of an auto wreck, Dina Hitrowo and the Countess Gregorovitch. Vanderlyn is greatly attracted by the girl, but she leaves without bidding him good-by. He goes to Monte Carlo in search of his lost passport. He sees the girl playing roulette in the casino. He finds his passport in his pocket, but cannot account for its reappearance. John proposes to Dina. She refuses him, explaining that, though she loves him, she cannot marry him. Early in the morning he sees a servant carrying a valise, stealing away from the château. Later he learns that one of the guests has been robbed of her jewels and that her maid has been shot. Vanderlyn talks to the police about the affair, and then arranges to leave the château.

INSTALLMENT XI.

Discovery.

THE next evening it took Vanderlyn very much longer than he had expected to row from his friend's little estate to the spot for which — was bound. And it was nearly eight o'clock instead of seven when he found himself drawing in towards the eerie-looking building which stood back so strangely between the dark trees and the high gray stone seawalls.

As he rowed towards the shore he told himself that the Villa Bella Mare looked entirely shut up and deserted; and, as he maneuvered his skiff nearer and nearer in, a sensation of doubt, and even fear, swept over him. What if the countess had insisted on Dina going with her to whatever place she was bound for today?

And then, with exultant joy, he suddenly saw that there was a light in what he knew to be the salon, where he had had his one brief glimpse of the house where the Russian girl had now lived for two years. Pale yellow lines of—were they candle light?—gleamed brighter and brighter between the slats of the closed wooden shutters as his narrow boat shot between the breakwaters. But, as he beached his little craft on the shingled beach, the light in the room above was suddenly extinguished.

In the fast gathering twilight he looked about him eagerly. What a strangely built house, and how old it must be!

The front half of the Villa Bella Mare had been erected on pillars; and now, under the pillars behind a kind of colonnade just above watermark, he could see, dimly, a wide double wooden door. Behind that door must be the cellars where the Napoleonic smugglers had hidden their booty. He looked round him dubiously. Surely there must be some way of reaching the upper part of the villa from here, apart from through the cellar? He walked quickly first to one end of the beach and then to the other, expecting to find a row of steps cut in the stone walls. But no—there was no kind of foothold with which even a cat could have climed up into the garden of the villa. And at last he went and stood just opposite the locked door giving into the cellar or cellars of the ancient house.

He waited for what seemed to him a long time, and then he saw the wide old door open slowly and Dina Hitrowo, holding a lighted lamp high in her right hand, appeared.

As she came towards him between two of the pillars her slender figure had a wraithlike appearance.

"You are very late," she exclaimed nervously. "I have been waiting, O! so long, for the sound of your boat."

"It took me longer to row here than I thought it would. Have the others been gone long?"

"They left far earlier than they said they would! That is why the time has seemed so long."

"Are you ready?"

He was looking at her with some dismay, for her head was bare and she was only wearing a thin cotton dress.

"I shan't be many moments! I was afraid to take from my room the few things I felt I must have till I knew you were actually here. What I am bringing are only small mementoes of my childhood; they will take up very little room."

But, even so, she lingered. "Where have you left your automobile?"

Though they were so utterly alone together on the dark strip of beach, she asked the question in so low a voice that he scarcely heard her.

"In a locked up garage, of which I have the key. I paid a week's rent in advance. And in three or four days from now I will post the owner the key."

Something of her restless nervousness had communicated itself to him and he felt relieved when she exclaimed, "I had better go in now! I will not be long—perhaps ten minutes."

He said impulsively, "I don't like your going back into that empty house alone, Dina. Let me come with you?"

She hesitated perceptibly. "It is absurd to feel afraid, as I know they are all far away by now. But I feel frightened," and she shivered.

Trapped

They walked side by side through the pillars to the now open door. It swung loosely on its hinges and, as Vanderlyn had rightly supposed, gave entrance to a roomy cellar.

He took the lamp—a heavy, old fashioned copper lamp that threw out but a poor light—from the girl's hand, and saw that the cavernous place extended fully under half the house above. There were boxes, casks of various makes, even remnants of old furniture, heaped up in the corners. Yet it was in vain he looked for a staircase.

All at once his foot struck something hard. "Take care!" cried Dina, and he saw then that there was a ladder he had missed in the dim lamp light which warred with the deepening twilight outside, for the door giving on the seashore was open.

Dina swung herself quickly up the stout rungs. He, more slowly because of the lamp in his hand, followed her, to find himself at last emerging through a trap door into the kitchen of the villa.

Vanderlyn glanced round him with some curiosity. The now open trap door was under a square plain table, round which were placed four wooden chairs.

The charcoal stove was in a corner, and the exiguous batterie de cuisine hung on pegs on the wall behind the stove. There was a roomy cupboard-larder and a buffet of carved walnut wood—the sort of buffet which is to be found in most houses of the small French bourgeoisie. The window was wide open on to the dark garden.

"It is here," his companion said a little breathlessly, "that I have always done all the cooking." As if to herself she added, "They were in such a hurry to be gone this time that they actually left that window open! Had I only known they would do that, you would have been spared that long row in the boat."

Even as she whispered these words she let the trapdoor fall into its place and covered it with a gay, rough looking little woolen rug.

Holding the lamp in her hand this time, she opened the door and led the American into the corridor into which he had forced his way the only time he had been there.

As they stood for a moment outside the kitchen door he longed to take her in his arms. But there was a wild expression of fear on her white face and she muttered, "My nerve is gone. I keep thinking that I hear footsteps. Hark!"

Infected by her terror, he listened. But there fell no sound on the still air but the gentle murmur of the Mediterranean.

"Will you wait here? I shall not be many moments!" she exclaimed, and showed him into the narrow salon.

Restlessly he began pacing up and down, now and again stopping to peep through the wooden shutters at the still, now starlit, sea, gleaming with opalescent lights. Far away a lighted-up vessel—no doubt a yacht belonging to some wealthy American or Englishman—rode at anchor.

His mind swung over to Belle Colline—so short a way from here. They must be all at dinner now, a shrunken, quiet party, for tomorrow morning the funeral of poor Miss Pridgett was to take place in the Protestant cemetery at Cannes, and the whole household was going to be present.

His Great Secret

After a while Vanderlyn began to feel extremely anxious. Each minute seemed like an hour, and he started drumming with his fingers on the wooden bar of one of the shuttered windows.

And then, suddenly, his heart stood still, for from the garden to his left came the thud-thud of footsteps. Two or three people were evidently hurrying along the path which ran under the high wall that shut out the sea.

He tried to tell himself that the mendicants who haunt the roads and byways of France probably try each night to find good sleeping quarters in deserted villas. But as he had subconsciously known would be the case, there came the ominous sound of a key turning in the lock of the front door which, apart from the trapdoor he had just come through, seemed to be the only entrance to the villa.

Moving noiselessly back from the window, he stood quite still, listening. Fool, fool that he had been not to compel Dina to come away at once when she had first joined him on the beach! However, another opportunity would soon occur, and he had already made up his mind how to explain his presence tonight in the villa to the Countess Gregorovitch, and he felt a touch of sincere relief that Dina Hitrowo was not with him here in the salon.

From the passage now came the tramp of heavy steps. To his excited fancy it sounded like a battalion marching past the salon.

Then he heard the kitchen door open and the Countess Gregorovitch in an angry voice exclaim in Russian: "Why is the window open?"

And then there rose on the now still air a man's falsetto voice which Vanderlyn, with unease and surprise, knew he had heard before. But where, and when, had he heard those curious accents?

"I was in haste to be gone, Excellence, so I forgot to shut it. But what does it matter? I can hear the little lady moving about."

When the door behind which he was now standing was slowly pushed open and the countess walked into the room he was ready with his story.

"Dina? Are you here?"

The question was asked in a toneless voice, yet through the man standing there came a stab of fear. There was something so cold and so sinister in the sound of the guttural voice.

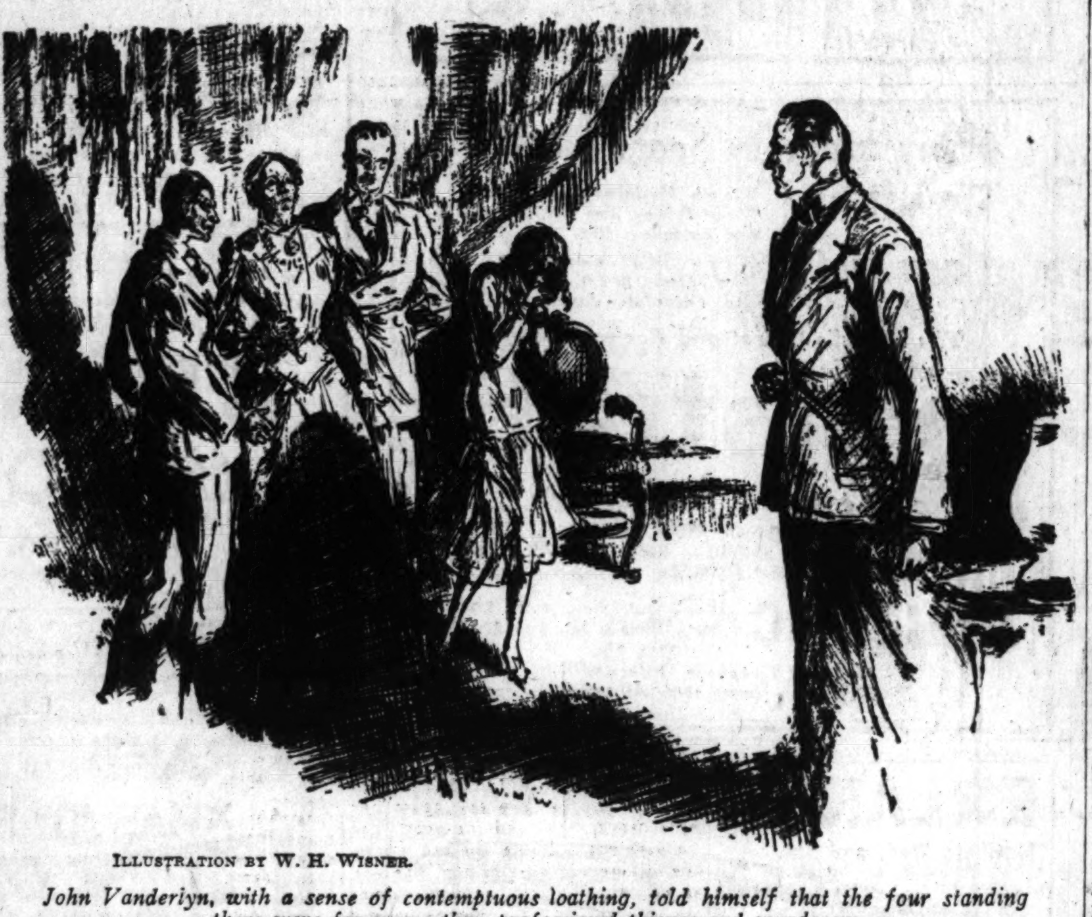

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WISNER.

John Vanderlyn, with a sense of contemptuous loathing, told himself that the four standing there were far worse than professional thieves and murderers.

But John Vanderlyn had often been in a far tighter place than this, and he was stout of heart. He told himself again that, after all, it could only be a question of waiting a few days, maybe only a few hours, before his chance of taking the girl away from this horrible woman would come once more.

So, resolutely and in a cheerful tone, he exclaimed in French: "You must forgive my breaking into your villa, madame! But I had something of serious moment to tell you. In fact, had you not come in I should have written to you—of course, under the seal of secrecy—what I am glad to have this opportunity of telling you face to face."

When he had first spoken, before she had known, he supposed, who he was, he had seen her right arm make a quick, instinctive movement—could it be in search of some sort of weapon? But suddenly she recovered her composure.

"My dear Mr. Vanderlyn! Mine is indeed a strange way to receive a guest, and especially one to whom I owe so delightful a dinner and so charming a drive as I had the other evening. But will you excuse me a moment? I have only just come in from a long excursion."

Angry Voices

She turned and went out of the door, closing it behind her. Feeling ashamed of what he was doing, Vanderlyn moved close to the door and listened.

She was going into the kitchen now, and a moment later he heard angry, impatient voices raised in discussion. Now and again he caught a Russian word, but there seemed to be three or four people there all talking together. But for the fact that he twice heard the name Dina uttered in wrathful tones he would have supposed them to be discussing a matter unconnected with anything of interest to him.

The door opened suddenly again and he stepped back only just in time to allow Dina Hitrowo to come into the room. And he saw that on her face was a terrible look of piteous despair.

"We are caught," she whispered. "Caught like two poor beasts in a trap, my friend."

He took her hand. It was icily cold. And he saw she was shaking as if with the ague.

"You have nothing to fear!" he whispered back. "I've thought of a perfect way to account for my presence here tonight. In fact, it concerns something I was going to tell you as soon as we were well away; something that the Countess Gregorovitch has a right to know."

She looked at him helplessly, her face twitching. He could see that she did not feel in the least reassured by his words.

The voices coming from the kitchen died down. There came the sound of a door opening and shutting and of footsteps coming nearer and nearer.

Slightly raising his voice, Vanderlyn exclaimed, "I do not feel, mademoiselle, that I can tell you my secret until the Countess Gregorovitch is here to hear it, too—"

As he uttered her name the older woman came into the salon. She took no notice of the girl, who was now standing at right angles from Vanderlyn. Indeed, Dina Hitrowo might, as far as her guardian was concerned, have been forming part of the heavy, sultry night air of the apartment.

"I thank you for your visit, Mr. Vanderlyn. But it is late, and I am going out again to a friend who is giving a roulette party in her villa. So we will make an arrangement to meet another time. You had better leave now and return to Belle Colline."

He said frankly, "I am no longer at Belle Colline, countess. I stopped here to see you, at this unconventional hour, because I am now on my way to Paris."

"On your way to Paris? Do you mean alone?"

Even he could not but notice the extraordinary relief in her husky voice.

"Yes," he said pleasantly, "I am motoring to Paris alone. And I shall be delighted to give you a lift to wherever you may be going this evening; for of course my time is my own. But before we start there is something I really must tell you."

He waited a moment, for he had all at once seen Dina's convulsed face. It was filled with terror and bewilderment.

"I fear I am going to give you a shock," he went on hesitatingly, "and, indeed, what I have to tell you is a very distressing thing from more than one point of view."

A Word of Advice

"You have to tell me something which will distress me?"

For the first time the countess turned right round and looked menacingly at Dina Hitrowo.

Vanderlyn said quickly, "I have said nothing of the matter in question to mademoiselle."

And again he felt rather than saw how much relieved the Countess Gregorovitch felt by his words.

In an ill assured tone Dina murmured: "Had I not better leave you?"

"By no means," said her guardian sharply. "It is best that we both hear what this gentleman has to say."

Dina moved behind her guardian and stood there gazing at the other two with an expression of fixed endurance on her face.

"Now, then, Mr. Vanderlyn, tell me your great secret," said the countess with a grimacing smile.

"What I came to tell you tonight," he said in a low voice, "will, I am sure, amaze you. But it is the truth."

He waited a moment and, for the first time, a feeling of misgiving as to whether he was going to act wisely crossed his mind. But he had gone too far to go back.

"The tall, dark woman servant who let me into your villa the first time I called here, when I was bringing you a letter from the Marchesa Trescobaldi, is undoubtedly the accomplice of a gang of thieves, of whom one is an assassin."

The chair in which the countess was sitting creaked suddenly, though the face which was looking at his with a steady stare did not alter. Indeed, not a muscle of it moved. But he saw Dina Hitrowo suddenly put out her hand and steady herself with the help of the back of one of the arm chairs. But for that quick movement the girl would have reeled and fallen.

Perhaps the expression of distress and surprise which flashed across his countenance caused the countess to turn round.

"Dina," she said in Russian, "I suppose it was you——"

Vanderlyn cut across quickly. "I ought to tell you, countess, that I know Russian."

In a tone of derisive contempt she exclaimed, "You know Russian, Mr. Vanderlyn? Does that mean you are in the secret service of your country?"

"By no means!" He even felt amused at the suggestion. "The truth is that languages interest me. But, of course, that has nothing to do with what I came tonight to tell you. You are probably aware—the whole countryside knows it—that an English lady's maid was shot by a burglar in the château of Belle Colline three nights ago. The burglar was escaping through the poor girl's window; she sprang at him, and I suppose in what he would call self-defense he shot her. It is that man who is the accomplice, maybe the lover, of your maid."

"And what makes you suppose such an extraordinary thing, Mr. Vanderlyn?"

As she asked the question the countess rose from her chair and turning, she looked quickly from the American to the girl, who had moved forward, as if wishful to protect him.

Without waiting for an answer, she said emphatically, "I assure you that you are mistaken."

"No, I am not mistaken, countess. I myself saw your servant, dressed in the peculiar uniform worn by the women belonging to the Marchesa Trescobaldi's household, creeping away from the château at dawn. And she was carrying in her hand a large bag, in which, without doubt, were the jewels which were found to have disappeared the next morning."

"What made you think it was my worthy bonne à tout faire? You only saw her once, I understand?"

"My bedroom window swung back and the woman turned and looked up. I could swear to her anywhere!"

"And have you informed the police of your discovery? It is true, is it not, that you were deputed to go to Cannes and describe to the commissary of police what had happened?"

Vanderlyn had time to tell himself that it was curious that this elderly lady should be aware of that not very important fact.

"No," he answered, in what he intended to be a conciliatory tone, "I have told no one of my discovery; for I knew that to do so would cause you, madame, great unpleasantness. As I had the honor of knowing you and Mademoiselle Hitrowo, I thought it far better to tell only you of my discovery. After all, you can make some excuse to send the woman away at once."

Locked In

As he ended the sentence he saw Dina crumple up on an armchair which was just behind where she was now standing. Her head sank forward on her breast, and she looked what Vanderlyn had often heard of but had never seen in the flesh. That is, the image of despair.

"I am grateful for your consideration, monsieur," exclaimed the countess, but he felt the jeer under those civil words.

He said earnestly, "If I may venture to give you a word of advice, it is that you get rid of this person tonight. The police believe that they are already on the track of the gang of thieves, including the man who shot that English girl. And then"—he shrugged his shoulders — "the man, when he is caught, may or may not betray the woman who is now your servant."

The countess made no direct answer to what Vanderlyn had just said. "All that remains is for me to thank you again for your courtesy, monsieur. I take it your automobile is somewhere nearby?" she observed.

She looked at him inquiringly, and Dina sat up quickly. She shook her head and put her finger on her lips. He asked himself, what did that signal mean? So he answered evasively, "My car is waiting to take me the first lap of my journey to Paris."

The countess got up, "I will give orders for a little refreshment to be prepared for you."

As he protested she turned round, made a sign to the girl and Dina, rising from the chair on which she had fallen a few minutes before, followed her, tottering, out of the room.

As she passed by Vanderlyn she threw him a terrible look—was it one of reproach as well as one of anguish and of terror?

As the door closed behind them the American heard the sound of a bolt being shot into its socket. What an extraordinary thing for his hostess to do? Hastening to the door, he turned the handle. Yes. He was shut in; for the moment imprisoned. There came over him a most unpleasant sensation—that of being what Dina Hitrowo had said they both were—trapped.

He remained by the bolted door, and once more he heard loud talking in Russian. Two men and Countess Gregorovitch were now speaking excitedly together. Now and again he could catch a word, "Ill chance," "unfortunte," "Dina."

Then in a strong man's voice came clearly the question: "But how can we be sure he had told the truth?" And then with a strange suddenness the voices died down into whispers.

It had grown quite dark outside; so much Vanderlyn could see by peering through the slatted shutters. And, as it grew darker outside, the lamp seemed to throw a stronger light inside this curious and, as he suddenly perceived, airless, unlived in looking room.

His bewilderment, his astonishment, his discomfort grew and grew as the time went by, O! so slowly, in the salon of the Villa Bella Mare.

The armchair on which the countess had sat became to him an evil thing, associated with her horrible, mysterious personality. Why was he left like this, locked in the one sitting room of the house? What was it that had thrown Dina Hitrowo into such an agony of terror? And, above all, why had the girl looked at him with such despairing reproach when he had told her guardian the unpleasant fact about her servant—a fact which he had naturally felt the Countess Gregorovitch ought to know?

All kinds of wild, strange surmises darted through his excited brain.

At last he again heard heavy footsteps in the corridor. They came up close to the door behind which he stood and a moment later, with a sudden sick feeling of shame and pain, he heard Dina Hitrowo's voice utter the astounding words:

"He is my lover! That is why he came here tonight. There is no other reason. He thought I was to be alone till morning. I let him into the villa through the open window. Why should any of you think anything else?"

And then Vanderlyn lost a few words, for he was mentally reeling under the shock, the unutterable loathing and disgust which had filled him when he had heard that beloved voice utter those words.

Now Dina was speaking again, more collectedly.

"But for me, what could you have done at Belle Colline? There is much I can still do for you. But I swear [illegible] that unless you spare this man, my lover's life, you will have no more help from me."

The Countess Gregorovitch broke in soothingly, "Dina, don't talk nonsense."

And then the falsetto voice which still seemed familiar to Vanderlyn cried out gaily, "If we could transport your loved one in an aeroplane and drop him down into—what is it called, God's own country?—we would do so willingly indeed, my little lady. But alas! That is impossible, in spite of the progress of modern science."

Stark Horror

But Dina went on as if she had not heard that interruption and in a strong, passionate tone she exclaimed: "For two years I have not only been your accomplice but your slave. Again and again have I helped you in a way no one else could have done. But most solemnly do I swear, by the memory of my father and my mother, that if you do not spare my lover I will do no more for you."

Again that voice which had such singularly familiar inflections in it observed: "What the little lady says is true, excellency. She has been a good comrade to us all! Why should she not have the reward she claims? If this American is her lover he might join us and prove himself very valuable."

The bolt was pulled back and Vanderlyn saw that four people, two men and two women, were standing in a group at the door.

But his blazing eyes became focused on the one there whom he at first had taken for a stranger. He was a short, thin man, dressed in an ill cut gray suit. His black hair was neatly parted now on each side, but the dark, malicious looking eyes, the thin, mocking mouth and the high cheek bones were those he had seen when the mauve-clad feminine figure had turned on the terrace and thrown back its head to see from where the sound above was coming from.

With a feeling of stark horror Vanderlyn now knew that both the creature who had admitted him to the villa the first time, who had then accompanied him to the locked gate in return for his largesse of fifty francs, and who had slipped out of Belle Colline loaded up with loot the morning of the murder of Eliza Pridgett had each time been this man dressed as a woman.

The Countess Gregorovitch looked grim, collected, watchful. And on her bloodless face there was the cynical look which had so repelled him in the restaurant attached to the secret gaming house.

She stood now between the man-woman and the sturdy Russian—surely her son?—Vanderlyn had loathed from the first moment he had seen him standing behind Dina Hitrowo at the roulette table in the "kitchen" of the Casino at Monte Carlo.

Dina was on that man's other side. Her face was hidden in her hands; she could not, would not look at the man she had but a moment ago proclaimed her lover.

As he faced them silently John Vanderlyn, with a sensation of contemptuous loathing, told himself that the four standing there were far worse than professional thieves and murderers—they were all four the sort of people, the amateur bandits, of whom the commissary of police had spoken with a mixture of disgust, yes, of fear, yesterday morning.

Mourns Fate of George O'Brien.

Dear Mae: Here's three rousing cheers to that undeniably clever young man who, in my estimation, is one of the finest, clean cut fellows in Hollywood, and that is none other than George O'Brien.

I can't for the life of me figure out why Fox persists in producing pictures with such terribly weak plots for the talented and capable actor that he is, with his abilities—a fighter, a clever horseman, and a real all around "he" man that is constantly "up and at 'em," and yet can be as equally polished and refined.

George can be a comedian, or he can be dramatic. His voice has unusual quality and carries well. He can play historical rôles as well as modern ones. His heart and soul seems to be in whatever particular rôle he plays and yet he fails to be the popular young man that he should be.

I don't think it's a bit fair, Mae!

Discouraged,
R. CRANDLE.

Settling an Argument.

My Dear Miss Tinée: Being a constant reader of your column, and always abiding by criticisms of pictures you review, I am asking you to help me settle an argument much discussed. The argument is: Did not Frederic March take the part of Sarah's lawyer, whom she later married, in the picture "Sarah and Son"? Who took the part of her first husband, who died in the hospital?

I shall watch the paper for your answer and hope I shall read it soon—or I am not so sure it will not end in a combat between two hostile forces.

Thank you so much. DOLORES M.

BRIDE OF BOHEMIA

MARIA RAJDL
[Giogou Photo.]

IN that merriest of comic operas, "The Bartered Bride," Mme. Rajdl will sing the leading soprano part at the Civic Opera house next Thursday evening. Since it is the first time that the Chicago Civic Opera company has ever presented the opera, it will be the first time that Mme. Rajdl has done the character here. The work has a great store of some of the most attractive tunes that were ever put into stage use.

Concert of Stage Works.

It is perhaps not too early to anticipate the concert of stage works to be given by the Chicago chapter of the International Society for Contemporary Music at the Goodman theater, Feb. 8 and 9. Three works will be given, during which Rudolph Ganz will conduct an orchestra composed of members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

The first will be De Falla's marionette show, "El Retablo de Maese Pedro," in which Don Quixote will be the principal marionette, three singers will take part in the action, and there will be an orchestra of thirty-four.

This will be followed by Stravinsky's "The History of a Soldier." Stravinsky himself and a few players illustrated some of the music when he was in Chicago, a few years ago. A narrator recites the history, three dancers illustrate the action, and there is a small orchestra. The final piece will be Louis Gruenberg's "The Creation," in which a Negro preacher recounts the story of the creation of the world. It calls for a baritone soloist and an orchestra of eight pieces. All these works are, as far as stage presentation is concerned, new to Chicago, although bits of the music, as in the Stravinsky number, have been heard from time to time.

Music News for the Week.

This being the week that it is, concert music is accordingly cut down to the customary minimum. One hears of the first concert of the People's Symphony orchestra, moved over from the Eighth Street to the Civic theater, with P. Marinus Paulsen conducting as usual, Albert Kratochvil, violinist, and Sol Nemkovsky, violinist, appearing as soloists, and a billing of the first performances of "Fantasticus Nos. 1 and 2," by Henry Francis Parks, and "Swedish Dances," by Carl Fallberg, also the Franck Symphony in D minor as the principal number.

On the other side of the loop, at Orchestra hall, the Swedish Choral club will sing "The Messiah" under the direction of Harry T. Carlson. At 5 o'clock a program of Christmas carols will be presented at the Chicago Woman's club by Lilian Knowles, Ruth Bassett, Arch Bailey, Robert Long, and Helen Abbott Byfield. The orchestral concerts at the Art Institute directed by George Dasch, and a joint recital by Philip Abbas, cellist, and Esther Cadkin, soprano, at the Beachview club will complete the day's music.

Later in the week there is an announcement of the Yale Glee club at Orchestra hall Tuesday night, a "pop" by Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Christmas night, and the regular Friday afternoon and Saturday evening duplicated program by the same artists, all likewise at Orchestra hall.

Two compositions, both of them suites, would seem to be new on the Friday-Saturday concerts. At least one bears the label, "First performance in Chicago," and the other is not recorded as having had a past performance. The first is Arthur Honegger's "L'Imperatrice aux Rochers," the second is Henry Hadley's "Streets of Pekin." The symphony will be the opus 10 of Szostakowicz [select your own pronunciation], and in addition there will be Elgar's Introduction and Allegro for strings, and Liszt's "Les Preludes."

Showing that the experience of a teacher who has got into the limelight may proceed in divers directions, two news items regarding Yehudi Menuhin and Ruggiero Ricci, the two boy wonder violin pupils of Louis Persinger, reached the music desk almost simultaneously.

The first was a dispatch from abroad. It said that six famous European orchestras have agreed to alter long standing regulations so that in effect they will become Menuhin's accompanists. Instead of his playing one concerto, as he would if he appeared as the customary soloist, he can, if he choses, play three, thereby making himself the leading feature of the program.

These orchestras are the Hamburg Philharmonic, conductor Karl Muck; the Berlin Philharmonic, conductor Fritz Busch; the Leipzig Symphony, conductor Bruno Walter; the Budapest Symphony, conductor Erno Dohnanyi; the Paris Conservatoire, conductor Georges Enesco, and the Vienna Philharmonic, conductor Otto Schalk. Other orchestras in Holland, Spain, and Italy are also expected to yield to the musical blandishments of young Yehudi, who has just returned to America after a ten weeks' tour in Europe.

The second is a letter signed by Mr. Persinger and published in the New York Times. It would seem to bear an undercurrent of bitterness.

"I wish to disclaim any further personal responsibility for the musical guidance or playing of Ruggiero Ricci.

"My musical association with Ruggiero ended with the minutely detailed preparation of the Beethoven concerto for the performance of the work on Sunday evening, Nov. 30, 1930.

"Any sense of gratitude or intelligent appreciation for having developed Ruggiero's gifts during the past years to the artistic niveau displayed that evening one cannot hope for, under the circumstances.

"Res ipsa loquitur."

Later bulletins from the opera company regarding "The Bartered Bride" tell that Robert Ringling will be the circus manager of the scene in the third act. It will be his first appearance in that sort of business, although he is the son of the late Charles Ringling of Ringling Brothers' circus, and before he conceived and achieved operatic aspirations he used to do a little of everything in and around the tents from taking tickets to watering the elephants.

The company that he will manage on Thursday night will consist of a trained bear, some tightrope dancers [members of the company's ballet] and a dancing girl [Hilda Burke]. The setting will be a Bohemian

The MIRACLE

by Leslie Beresford

London's Dense Fog, a Street Accident, the Hospital, and Geoffrey Found His Idea of Freedom—Christmas Eve with the Blonde Buyer and Christmas Day with His Wife—Open to Improvement.

HE had been knocked down by a motor car.

Extraordinary! That it happened to people every day he knew from his newspapers, but that it should have happened to him! The fool was on the wrong side, too! Or was it one of those confounded one-way streets?

It was a miracle he was alive. Ballantyne had never been a believer in miracles. He had always said that he recognized only what he saw, listened to a half of what he heard, and acknowledged as solid only that to which he laid his hand and found to be so. The car which had knocked him down at the corner of Haymarket and Jermyn street had been very solid.

And now he was in some sort of hospital in consequence, with the doctor saying that he was "going," that nothing could be done for him, that it would be a perfect miracle if he even recovered consciousness. Ballantyne chuckled inwardly. He was conscious enough, any way, to hear that senseless remark. Conscious, and without pain. What on earth did the man mean? Going? Preposterous!

Meantime Ballantyne hoped to goodness they wouldn't be foolish enough to go worrying his wife with such a cock-and-bull story. He had heard them talking about searching in his pockets for means of identification. He did not want Eva to be told what had happened to him. So far as she was concerned he was not supposed to be in town at all. He was not in the habit of accounting to Eva for all or any of his actions. He had long since passed that stage.

However, when a man is supposed to be in the Midlands and his wife suddenly hears he has been run over in London, a lot of awkward and unnecessary explanation may be expected. The arrangement between them had been that he was returning to London in the morning and joining her about mid-day at her parents' home at Richmond to spend Christmas. While, on his own account, he was going to enjoy a Christmas eve dinner with that charming little blonde buyer.

Of course he would never explain that to Eva. He would merely have changed his plans. Come back earlier in order to spend more time with her. That would be the idea. Which, incidentally, showed him to be far more alive than the fool doctor had imagined. And the thought brought him still another idea. This, simmering in his mind, began at once to dominate him. He would just show that doctor and these hospital people how feeble were their professional intellects; how badly hospitals were run. He would go home to Eva. Conscious and without pain, what was to prevent him?

Alone in a tiny ward, he peered round. Empty but for his bed. No nurse. No one in sight. He had heard some one saying that a big fire was raging nearby, and an explosion had occurred. The hospital staff was short-handed, driven hard to attend to incoming cases, desperate ones. So that was why Ballantyne had been left for "as good as dead." And no one was there to interfere with him. The door opened on to a corridor. He registered the fact and its possibilities.

Escapes Unnoticed

Almost before he knew how he had managed it he was out in the corridor. At the [illegible] end of this a young nurse, or sister, or whatever she was, stood looking at the contents of an upheld, glass stoppered bottle, with her back to Ballantyne. And while she was so engaged a young man, possibly a hospital student, came out of a door with a piece of mistletoe in his hand, held it over the girl's head and kissed her on the lips.

Ballantyne, regarding this as another instance of how hospitals were run, had hurriedly left the corridor by way of some stone steps, which he descended quickly. People, quite a number of people, passed him. Surely, as they ignored him, he could not look so bad. Now, did the uniformed commissionaire at the main entrance trouble about him as Ballantyne sailed past. Took him, if he saw him, for a departing visitor.

Childish! Could a dying man turn out into the Strand and make his way westward across Trafalgar square to Leicester square and so into that hub of the world, Piccadilly? Absurd! Could a dying man amuse himself with the brilliance of the gayly lit shops making their eleventh hour bid for the last of the Christmas trade? That last [illegible] of illuminated, present-packed windows, reminded him suddenly that he had as yet bought nothing for Eva.

It was late to have left that inevitable tribute to matrimonial peace, and he was half disposed to repair the omission as he lingered for an instant outside a jeweler's lavish scintillation of precious gems. But upon second thoughts he hurried on. It would be just as well if he gave her money. Better, perhaps, for him. He would not need to give her as much. Meantime he needed to be home with her before those hospital people made bigger fools of themselves. Ballantyne wondered if they had as yet discovered how he had departed. What would they say when presently he rang them up from home and chaffed them about their error?

Chuckling, he descended into the new maze of the Piccadilly tube station, one of a ceaselessly moving throng. He had a season ticket and knew the man at this particular barrier quite well; but tonight no one worried about seasons, the crush was so great. It was even worse in the west bound train. Fat men with turkeys. Women made fat by parcels. Children—loads of children with loads of toys, sticky faces, shining eyes. People foolishly hilarious, perpetuating what, to Ballantyne, had always been an inane greeting:

"Merry Christmas to you!"

Ballantyne had never discovered why there should be a superfluity of merriness of Christmas; or, if one was merry, why the fact should be magnified into a seasonal communication. Incidentally, as he gazed along the carriage in which he stood, he recognized a business client, the corpulent Groucher. He looked merry in a banal way. He carried a turkey, what looked suspiciously like a straw basket of wine bottles, and had a thin wife, three children, and a terrier pup in tow.

Christmas Eve in London

A dreadful man, Groucher. A vulgar discarder of aspirates. Always grinning. Always talking about his family, his garden, and the joys of a nice little home just far enough out of London to be called in the country. That would have bored Ballantyne to death, just as Groucher always bored him. So Ballantyne was glad that the train stopped at his own station before Groucher happened to notice him. Ballantyne descended. Mostly affluent people descended here. The quintessence, Ballantyne called them.

Here it would have been an offense if the collector had asked to see his season more than once a quarter. He did not do so tonight. He kept on saying "thank you" and touching his peaked cap occasionally as people flooded past in a queue, taking tickets from the unknown, addressing the known with an automatic "Merry Christmas." Ballantyne, to avoid that slogan, slipped through the barrier with a lightning movement and nearly fell into a newsboy with a placard, yelling out:

Ballantyne blessed that fire without buying a newspaper to read about it. He owed to it an easy escape from the hands of a bunch of fools in league with the undertakers. He was laughing to himself as he passed out of the station. More streets. More shops. All of them so blazoned on Ballantyne's mental vision that he could have walked from the tube to his home any number of times blindfolded. He knew the landmarks by heart.

The large, ornate public house—called hotel—at the corner, with a milk and butter shop next to it. The red-faced butcher at the next corner, his immense carcasses all decorated up with pink and green frills. Farther on, where Ballantyne turned into a crescent, a baker's shop, with a news agent and tobacconist to follow. Then—at another corner—a milliner's shop, where a pretty girl always stood at the door making eyes.

All this in a commercial area before one reached the habitat of the quintessence. And tonight rather noisy. Somewhere in one direction a brass band was lugubriously blowing the bars of a long drawn out hymn. In another direction, in quite another key, some carol singers were piping shrilly:

"While—shepherds — watched — their —flock—b'—night!" All in one breath and raggedly. Horrible. Unnecessary. And across the way a man in black stood orating furiously in an effort to attract an audience.

"My friends," he was saying pathetically. "My dear friends. Let me remind you that in the midst of life we are in death."

Ballantyne passed him by, together with the blind beggar who hunched at the corner where this slight slumdom ended, always—with some match boxes for sale—saying the same thing over and over again:

"P'nny each. Pity the blind. P'nny each. Pity the blind."

Ballantyne's pity did not extend to

Connie's Christmas Visit

By Elizabeth Jordan

Once again this favorite of Tribune readers contributes an exquisite story appropriate to this time of the year. It tells of a ten-year-old girl's Christmas with her father—the first visit in six years.

Next Sunday

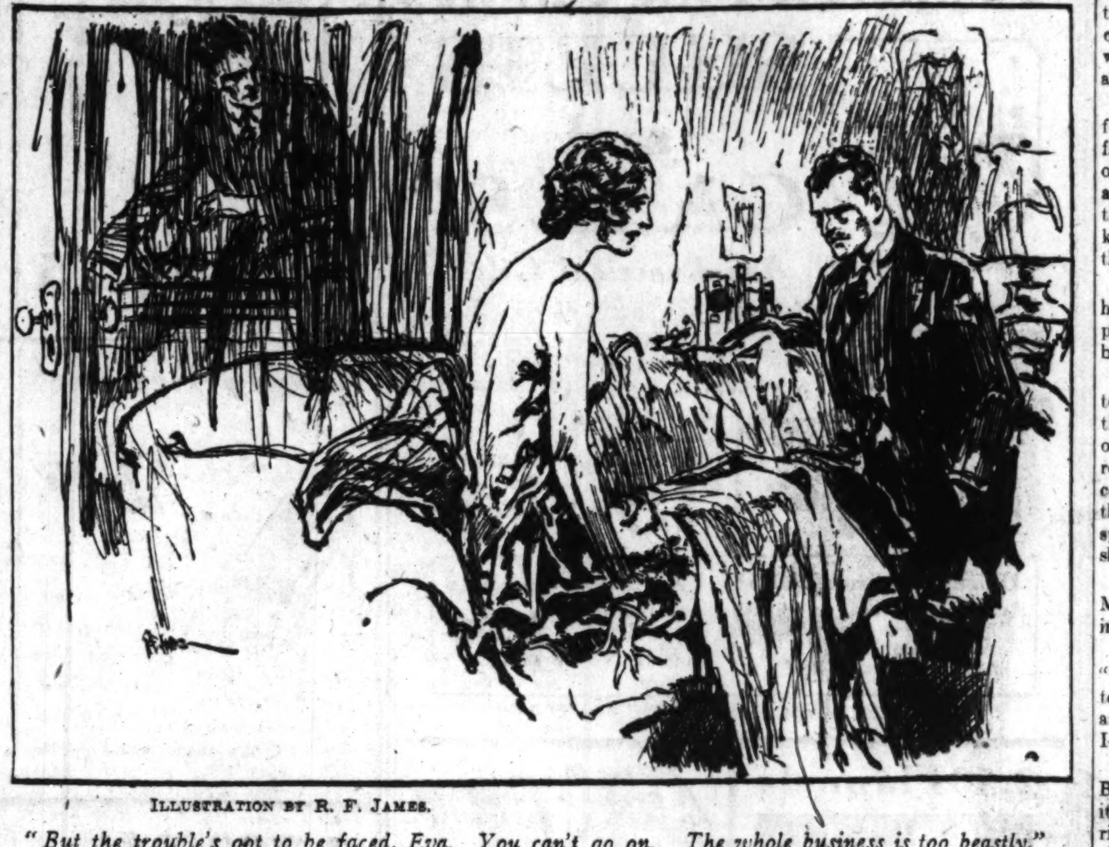

ILLUSTRATION BY R. F. JAMES.

"But the trouble's got to be faced, Eva. You can't go on. The whole business is too beastly."

material expression. He was quite sure that the blind beggar, when he left his pitch, went off to some secret place and changed his clothes, reëmerging no longer blind—to return to his sumptuous West End home and dine in the lap of luxury.

And meantime, with the elegance of his own mansion block looming suddenly out of the mist, Ballantyne's own home was at last reached.

His was the Windsor Court Mansions block, red brick with cream stone work, castellated so as to live somewhat up to its name. One saw from outside how those living here lacked nothing of worldly goods in moderation. Its façade was pin-pricked with lights behind art curtains. And, where the curtains were not yet drawn, one glimpsed light shades of elegance, expensive furnishings, suggestions of a belief in fine living. And that had always been Ballantyne's creed.

The Superior Atmosphere

Not that he had ever been rich. No. For everything he had worked, and worked hard. But that had always been his aim. The superior atmosphere, from which he stepped always at the same hour on six mornings in the week, and to which he returned each night—if not absent from London—at what particular hour it pleased him so to do.

And usually, in the crimson carpeted hall by the lift, an attendant in resplendent uniform would be waiting to say a deferential word of greeting to those known to him, to question the unknown, to separate the sheep from the goats. But tonight the attendant was not there. Ballantyne could, however, hear his heavy voice ascending from the unseen depths of the basement, answered by the soft coo of a girlish voice, both of them laughing in an inane way which suggested flirtation, talking about Christmas and kissing under mistletoe.

Ballantyne, in any case, never used the lift. His flat was on the first floor and he ascended to it, noticing how the mist had begun to percolate into the building from the outside. Mist and mistletoe. Up the lift-shaft there drifted to him the sound of kisses, the cooing laugh of the girl. He knew that laugh. It belonged to the trim maid Eva had engaged some time ago. She was a pretty maid. But—this basement kissing business. That would not do.

Because of it she had, he discovered, left the flat door ajar. He stepped in, to find that the lounge hall, with its pile carpet, thick and soft to the tread, was empty and only partly lit. Eva, of course, would not be expecting him. She never did till he arrived. Freedom. He believed in it for the man in the home. For the woman as well, so far as that went. He never asked how Eva spent her time, where she went, what she did. Tit for tat.

Unseen Listener

Meantime her voice drifted to him. Ballantyne turned to a partly open door which led into what, because of its bookcases, writing table, and so forth, he called the library. This room was ochre lit, warm, intimate, and towards it, across the soundless pile carpet of the lounge, Ballantyne walked slowly. Behind the partly open door Eva was talking in her silken, charming contralto voice.

"Sometimes," she was saying, "I find myself arguing that it wouldn't hurt me at all—it might even be a great relief if he never came back here. You see, in a way I admit that it has reached that stage with me. Yet, I suppose, it's wicked to talk like that. When one is married——"

"To the right man!" interposed a voice which, directly he heard it, caused Ballantyne to remain still. A name came to his tongue, but remained unspoken. An understanding dawned in his mind. The first—John French. The second—that it would be wiser to listen before trumpeting his return.

"To the right man," repeated the smooth male voice, faintly caustic, emotionally penetrating. "It's only in that case, Eva, that marriage becomes binding. But the right man isn't in question here at all. You know what I've discovered. It's monstrous. I can prove it to you. Birmingham? He's in London. Gadding about with that woman buyer."

Ballantyne was frankly amazed. He had been spied upon, actually spied upon. This John French—he was an old friend of Eva's. One of your army type of men. Toothbrush mustache and an intense adhesion to what would be called "the right kind of thing." Ballantyne had tolerated him because, well, he came admittedly of good family, had money, a country place, was always eager to invite Eva and himself about. A convenient person. But—not as a spy.

There reigned a silence in that library, at the part open door of which Ballantyne now stood, so that he could see inside how Eva and this John French sat cozily over the bright fire blazing in the grate. Eva, with a cigaret between her lips, lazily beautiful, not at all agitated, quite calm, dissecting logically the problem she was considering. She was wearing a frock of green chartreuse color which suited her. The ruddy gold of her hair and the dazzling whiteness of her skin faintly disturbed Ballantyne's thoughts. They were not quite the negligible quantities he had considered them to be.

"It sounds pretty ghastly," he heard her saying. "Sordid, anyhow, but it isn't unexpected. No, I've felt it in the air. Geoffrey. Well, no wife loses her hold on her husband as I seem to have done without some one taking her place. She must expect it."

"And—when it happens?" clipped the military voice.

"I don't know. One has to think that over carefully, John. I'll answer that—after Christmas. One has to tide over Christmas without trouble."

"But the trouble's got to be faced, Eva. You can't go on. The whole business is too beastly, from my point of view. Do you think—if you'd been my wife when I asked you long enough ago—I'd have treated you like that?"

His Wife's Verdict

"Because, John, your nature isn't like that of Geoff. What's more, you live by a code. Geoffrey has never been quite open with me. Somehow I always felt that, and——"

"Then why in blazes, Eva, did you marry him?"

"I didn't. He married me. Perhaps at the time I'd a hungering for uncertainty. I can't say. Women do chase after shadows, or rather let the shadows enfold them. I let Geoff marry me with a peculiarly happy mind. And, I suppose, I must put up with the consequences."

"Nonsense. You don't yet know what the consequences will be. Lord knows; I can't dictate to you. I suppose, in a way, I ought not to have told you what came to my knowledge about your husband. It slipped out. I've always loved you. There's no harm in repeating what you've always known. It's the kind of love, anyhow, that couldn't harm you—only help you, if you'd let me. I've seen how you and he, poles apart, have been drifting. His—his insufferable superiority, patronage, beastly selfishness. You putting up with it, pretending not to see it——"

"Why, no. That's not right, John. I have seen it. I know Geoffrey inside out. He's one of those grown-up men who remain babies. All that male arrogance, John, it's been rather amusing. It hasn't been nearly as difficult for me as this—this little buyer. I hope, at least, that she isn't too awful. Somehow I don't think she can be. Geoff has taste——"

"Eva!" protested the military voice. "Aren't you going to take this thing seriously?"

"Very—when Christmas is over. Then I'll give Geoff his choice. Of course, I'm not playing second fiddle to anybody. You know that. If I must divorce him—well, I'll make it as light for Geoff as I can. He can be free. And then——"

A Fool's Freedom

She rose from her seat with that slow grace which, when he first met her, Ballantyne had found so attractive; a lazy, luring movement with all the rhythm of muted music. She dropped her cigaret into the fire as if she were deliberately putting away from her that for which she had no further use. One of those slim, white hands of hers fluttered to her throat.

"And then," she repeated, "after the hurt is over I shall wait till—Geoff comes back to me!"

"Good heavens! You believe that?"

"I do, John."

To all of this Ballantyne had listened in amazement, not interrupting, not angry; merely stupefied. Learning something, too. Insufferable superiority; selfishness; not open. Nice things to hear? And a form of mild amusement to Eva. That bit deep. Meantime there was the little blonde buyer. A molehill being turned into a mountain. That could be easily explained. Divorce? He had given no cause for such a thing—had never dreamed of such a thing. Yet——

Ballantyne was forced to admit at the same time that he had been exceedingly foolish. He had dallied with danger. He had set too much store by that freedom for himself and, in that matter, for Eva, too. Freedom? The fettered freedom of the fool. He saw that now. He saw, too, how clearly Eva had read him, as though his soul were naked to her. Come back again? He had no intention of leaving her, and he must make that clear at once.

So he stepped into that room of warm, ochre shades, bright red glow of burning coals, thick carpet, book-lined intimacy. He stood there, did Ballantyne, feeling suddenly like an outcast come prodigally home for forgiveness, still unobserved by those two on the hearth. They both had their backs to him and were standing side by side, looking down into the flickering flames.

"You've a wonderful faith, Eva," said that crisp, regretful voice.

"It's pretty nearly the only thing left to women in these days, John, that's worth while. If I hadn't believed in Geoff, do you think I could have stood it so long? And now——"

Jangled raucously a telephone bell. The instrument stood under a cover on a small table near the wall by the fire.

Eva turned to it abruptly. Ballantyne, unnoticed in the background, was about to intervene, but remained still. When he did make his presence known it would be to restore that mountain to molehill proportions. Nothing else mattered.

Eva's voice, in a lazy contralto, spoke into the instrument:

"Hullo! Yes, that's right. Mrs. Ballantyne speaking. What? Who did you say you were? Who? The Charing Cross——"

"He's Gravely Hurt"

For a long time she merely answered in monosyllables, asking an occasional question, faintly agitated, listening intently. And in the background Ballantyne knew quite well to whom she was speaking. Knew, with a grim amusement, that she was about to be surprised. He watched her as she hung up the receiver in that careless way of hers. Watched her fling round on John French, urgent yet calm, still unaware of Ballantyne's presence, possibly because his end of the room was in such comparative darkness. She spoke jerkily under her breath.

"It's Charing Cross hospital. About—Geoff."

She turned again and grabbed up a fur coat which was lying on a settee near by, slipping an arm into its depths, struggling with it, while John French laid a hand on her shoulder.

"What's wrong?"

"He's been run over and taken to the hospital in an ambulance. John, they say he's gravely hurt. While we were talking about him here——"

"How awful!" With a shocked face French was helping her into the fur coat. He went to the telephone. "I'll come with you, Eva. We can't go till we've got a taxi. I'll call up the rank——"

"No," interrupted Eva over her shoulder. Helped by the overmantel glass, she was ramming a hat well down upon ruddy gold hair. "There's a new night and day garage just round the corner. I discovered it only yesterday. We'll waste less time. Think of it, John. I'm trying hard not to scream and be silly. While I was thinking of Geoff with that woman he was lying there, dying maybe. No, it can't be as cruel as that. He must live. I don't want to lose him—not that way—not any way——"

It was here that Ballantyne stepped forward, with pity at his wife's white face and eyes of horror, with shame of himself for all those things he had and had not done, with anger over those hospital people who did not know even now that he was gone from them.

"You're not going to lose me, Eva!" he said jerkily. "It's a shame to telephone all that rot. Here I am, come back to you, safe and sound."

Eva's eyes, wide and scared, seemed to pass right through him as he stood there, hands outstretched, his attitude one of eagerness to be recognized, reconciled. She did not attempt to come to him; simply stared at and through him. It was not to him she spoke, but to John French over her shoulder.

"Ready, John? Let's hurry. I'll find Mary and tell her where we're going——"

"Going?" exclaimed Ballantyne. "Going where, Eva? What's the matter with you? Have you gone blind and deaf all of a sudden? Here have I——"

And then a shock of horror gripped Ballantyne's mind, stunning it, leaving it a momentary blank. He had stepped right in front of Eva and up to her, right between her and the door. Yet, while he was speaking, she had moved. She had stepped towards him. She was, as he swung around, actually passing out through the door. She had passed right through him.

He followed, clutching at her furs. Impotent. His fingers made no contact. He was unable to hold them. Ballantyne stepped back, staggered and scared. Stepped back and stood there, out in the open and under the lights while John French joined Eva, hat and stick in hand, and she talked in low tones to the maid. He stood there, did Ballantyne, absolutely unseen as though he were invisible.

Hears Voice of Faith

And that, he had suddenly begun to realize, was precisely the reason. He was invisible. He was—had the doctor at the hospital not been such a fool after all? Had he been dying? To be unseen, unheard. Was he—dead? To be losing Eva just when they needed each other most? Dead? With that molehill left at mountain size forever to rankle in her mind against him? Impossible. Dead? When he had come all this way here, stood here now in raging impotence watching Eva and John French and the maid at the open door?

"I am not dead! I tell you I am not dead! I will not die! I am living! I am going on living!" He screamed in a frenzy, rushing towards the open door and the strands of mist that crept in through it, his vision gone from him, his scream finding no echo, his mind blank.

Again that doctor's voice, the voice of the prophet who was fooled.

"Yes, he'll live now if there's no relapse. I'm frankly amazed, Mrs. Ballantyne. It's a miracle—an absolute miracle. He must have had a tremendous will to live. Something stupendous. He literally fought himself out of the grasp of death. Must have had something to live for, Mrs. Ballantyne."

"Perhaps he knew how badly I wanted him, doctor," said that soft, caressing contralto of Eva from somewhere by the bed. But Ballantyne could not lift his head. He could not speak. Even his eyes were bandaged. He could only hear. He heard the voice of Eva; the voice of infinite faith, supernal love; the merry pealing of distant bells.

Christmas time. For long years he had forgotten the meaning of the season. The bells—the bells with their message of new birth.

Young Chicago Pianist Makes Gotham Debut

By Joan King.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Chicago offered another young artist for this town's entertainment and approval recently with the New York debut of Ralph Dobbs, pianist. Mr. Dobbs chose Bach's Toccata, Adagio, and Fugue in C minor; Schumann's F-sharp minor Sonata, opus 2; Brahms' Intermezzo, opus 118, E-flat minor; Kodaly's "Meditation on a Debussy Motif"; Dohany's "March Humoreske"; Tcherpnine's "Along the Volga"; Rachmaninoff's "Moment Musical," opus 16, D-flat; Otterstrom's "Trabel On" ("American Negro suite," according to the program), and the Liszt-Busoni "Fantasy on Themes from Mozart's 'Marriage of Figaro.'"

Immediately it became evident to the young Chicagoan's hearers that he is a young pianist of unusual gifts. He has excellent technical equipment, a lovely tone, a true sense of style. He made an outstandingly favorable impression and his sizable Town Hall audience was warm in its reception, staying for a number of encores, although the written program was in itself formidable.

Arturo Toscanini is now back at the helm of the Philharmonic after his visit to Philadelphia, and once again the big orchestra is playing at top-notch pitch. It was an interestingly varied program that Mr. Toscanini chose as his first offering to his Carnegie hall admirers on his return.

Symphony Program.

It comprised the "Pastoral" Symphony of Beethoven; the transcription recently made by Ottorino Respighi of Bach's organ Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor; the little Overture to Wolf-Ferrari's one act opera, "The Secrets of Suzanne," and a "world première" by Zoltan Kodaly, consisting of some linked "Dances of Marosszek" (a province of Hungary). Originally, according to program notes, these dances were half a dozen piano pieces. Kodaly has woven them together and orchestrated them. They illustrate the post-Lisztian music of Hungary, of which Kodaly and Bela Bartok are protagonists.

The cheering of the evening was occasioned by the Respighi work, which the Philharmonic itself introduced, under the direction of Mr. Toscanini, last spring. It was the batonist himself who requested the composer to write the piece. He calls the result an "orchestral interpretation." It is indeed a magnificent interpretation, though in no wise an attempt to make the orchestra mimic an organ. The Philharmonic gave an impressive performance.

The most popular figure of them all, he who is always a sell-out, who always is attended by a crowded stage, whose every motion is breathlessly awaited, played once more at Carnegie, Friday evening of last week. Of course it is Fritz Kreisler of whom we speak. On this occasion, which was the famed violinist's final American concert of the year, he was at his own superlative best. He played an exacting program, comprised of Handel's Sonata in A major; Bach's Partita, E major [for unaccompanied violin]; Bruch's Concerto, G minor.

Plays Own Compositions.

Then, following the intermission, a group of his own works—The Romance, E flat major; Shepherd's Madrigal [old German] and the Gypsy Caprice. The written program ended with two Caprices, B-flat major by Paganini and A minor by Wieniawski.

As usual, the audience shouted and applauded until the sounds of approval seemed to come back from the lofty rafters of good old Carnegie. Mr. Kreisler was not quite as generous as is customary, but he did grant four of five favorites after considerable urging. According to the box office records there were 3,200 persons present to wish bon voyage to their favorite.

This week's modernistic concert representative was a league of composers' offering to a Town Hall group of those inclined to favor dissonance. There was dissonance enough to please every one. From Roger Sessions' Organ Prelude the program continued through Milhaud's Symphony No. 3, Hindemith's "O Herr, Geb Jeden Mann Sein Eignen Tod," sung on the occasion for the first time anywhere by the Emanuel choir; excerpts from the Cantata Pantomime, "The Daughter of Jeptha," by Saminsky [first time in America]; Kaminski's Prelude and Fugue [first time in America]; Marion Bauer's Carol for women's voices; Bax's Carol for men's voices; Petyrek's Hallelujah, also the first time in America, and Salzedo's Concerto for harp and seven wind instruments, with the composer the conductor of the occasion.

Strauss' Opera Given Jumbled Disk Recording

But Melodies and Humor Are a Delight.

By Edward Moore.

[Tribune Music Critic.]

IF IT WERE not for a mismanaged order of pieces, Columbia's Masterworks set, No. 148, would have taken a high rank among the many fine recordings that are being put out these days. The set is the orchestral suite from Richard Strauss' comic opera, "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme," an arrangement made by himself, played by Walter Straram and the Orchestre des Concerts Straram in eight parts on four double faced records.

Never was Strauss any more sprightly and witty in his music. Originally this was incidental music for Molière's comedy of the same name, and never did composer poke fun any more delightfully than Strauss did at Jourdain, the shopkeeper, who suddenly became rich and determined also to become a social success in oldtime Paris. The arrangement would seem to be for a chamber orchestra of medium dimensions, small enough to permit a piano to sound in the orchestra tone, large enough never to permit the tone to become thin. The melodies are charming, the dances are a delight, the humor is incessant.

Not Always in Order.

But as stated above, the pieces are not always in order. The Courante, which should be the sixth number on the suite, comes in the second; number 3, the scene of the fencing master, is tied on to the end of number 4, the dance of the tailors; the finale of the dinner table music and dance of the young cooks runs through two faces of the records, then suddenly breaks off in the third for the interpolation of the Minuet of Lully, which should have been the fifth of the suite, then picks itself up for its own conclusion.

This is a bit maddening for one who likes to take his music in the order set by the composer. Evidently the one who held the stop watch on the performance got mixed in his figures and was unable to lay out his schedule correctly. Just the same, the set is delightful Strauss.

Victor brings a Christmas remembrance in No. 7316, where Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia orchestra play the Pastoral Symphony, which is a musical interlude in that famous of all oratorios, "The Messiah" by Handel. Conductor and orchestra are at one in projecting the lovely simplicity of this little piece. The other side of the record is an arrangement for orchestra of the Prelude in B minor from Bach's Well Tempered Clavichord, volume 1, No. 24. According to the catalogue, Stokowski made the arrangement himself, and in fact there is internal evidence to support the statement, for Stokowski has never been quite as successful as some of the other transcribers in getting the best orchestral tone for Bach.

Pleasant Importations.

Brunswick continues to import some pleasant things from Europe. In No. 90103 Alexander Brailowsky, a brilliant pianist now touring in this country, plays two Chopin etudes, opus 10, No. 3, in E major, and opus 25, No. 4, in A minor. In No. 90104 Heinrich Schlusnus, one of the finest of the baritones and also seeking the acclaim of American audiences, sings Beethoven's song "Adelaide," its extent requiring the full surface of the two faces of the record. Both are first class of their kind.

Two orchestral works, one each from Victor and Brunswick, may well be grouped together here. In the Victor Nos. 7321 and 7322, Walter Damrosch and the National Symphony orchestra have assembled a suite of "Airs de Ballet" of a former age, all by Gluck and consisting of excerpts from "Iphigenia in Aulis" with an added gavotte from "Armide." These take three sides. The fourth is Bach's Gavotte in D from his sixth sonata for cello solo, arranged for cello solo and orchestral accompaniment by Leopold Damrosch, the conductor's father.

Turn then to Brunswick's No. 90099, the "Minuet Antique" by Ravel, played by Albert Wolff and the Orchestre de l'Association des Concerts Lamoureux of Paris. It is antique only by courtesy of title, but it follows the antique model as conceived by a modern mind. Once again it is desirable to applaud both recordings.

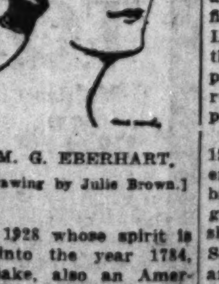
THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

IN CHICAGO.

"Berkeley Square" comes to us on Christmas night. It is a perfect play for such an evening. It had more real charm than any play of the season last year in New York. It had atmosphere, a subtle quality which is neither fantasy nor reality, but which gave reality to its fantasy and fantasy to its reality. It concerns an American of 1928 whose spirit is projected back into the year 1784, when his namesake, also an American, first visited the ancestral home in Berkeley square, London. The drama is at the same time strangely intense and delicately flavored, the way a dream so often is, something realer than reality.



M. G. EBERHART.

[Drawing by Julie Brown.]

Armchair playgoers may read the play in its acting version; it was published coincidentally with the New York premiere in November of 1929. Before that the play had had a long run in London, 200 odd performances. It had as many in New York.

Although the play was first produced in London, and was written in England, the author is an American, John L. Balderston, born in Philadelphia in 1889, and so averse to the idea of the play's being called English that he refused to allow it to appear in an anthology of English plays. For the first time in theatrical history, the London Times said when discussing the play's New York production, a play by an American enjoyed a long run in London before its American presentation.

Mr. Balderston has been ever since 1915 an American foreign correspondent in Europe, which accounts for the birthplace of the play. The author got the idea for the play from a short story by Henry James, "The Sense of the Past," not the plot in any sense, but the impetus to conceive it. He says that J. C. Squire was of great assistance to him in its actual working out.

There was, just about the time that "Berkeley Square" first appeared, a sudden eighteenth century madness all over London. The Queen Anne, was the smart period of the moment. Whether "Berkeley Square" was the cause or the result, or a mere accidental accompaniment of that madness, nobody has ever decided. It is an interesting phenomenon, anyway. The setting, as produced in New York, was perfect Queen Anne, a room so lovely as to transport the audience as it did the hero of the play.

And speaking of Americans and their plays being produced in London, announcement has just been made that "The Patient in Room Eighteen" is being dramatized and will be produced almost immediately in London. "The Patient in Room Eighteen" is, in case you don't know, the first mystery story written by M. G. Eberhart, and was chosen by the Crime club as its book of the month for February, 1929. M. G. Eberhart is a young woman, now living in Oak Park. Since her first she has published two other thrillers: "While the Patient Slept," which won the $5,000 Scotland Yard prize offered by the Crime club this year, and "The Mystery of Hunting's End," a best seller of the present season.

DEBUTANTE DANCES ENLIVEN HOLIDAYS

MISS CONSTANCE HASLER, MISS ANN ASHCRAFT, GEORGE BENT, SOLOMON B. SMITH, MISS CAROLINE B. SMITH

MISS JOSEPHINE DENNEHY

MISS GHITA WATSON

MISS FAYETTE SMITH, CHAPIN HUNT, MISS ELIZABETH B. SMITH, MISS RUTH CROSSETT, WILLIAM HUNT

THE holiday balls that bring the debutante season to a glamorous finale are monopolizing the social calendar just now. Among the debs and their escorts who attended the ball given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy for their daughter, Miss Josephine Dennehy, on Dec. 13 at the Blackstone were Miss Ghita Watson, Miss Constance Hasler, Miss Ann Ashcraft, Miss Caroline B. Smith, and her brother, Solomon B. Smith; George Bent, Miss Fayette Smith, Miss Ruth Crossett, Miss Elizabeth Smith, and William and Chapin Hunt.

Miss Watson's mother, Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, and Miss Fayette Smith's parents, the Alexander Smiths, are to give a ball for their respective daughters on Tuesday at the Blackstone, following the Yale Glee club concert at Orchestra hall. Miss Hasler's godmother, Miss Gwethalyn Jones, is to give a ball at the Blackstone for her the following night, and on Christmas night Mr. and Mrs. Solomon B. Smith will give a ball, also at the Blackstone, for Miss Caroline Smith.

Younger Folk in Town for the Holidays

New York Calendar Filled with Dances, Parties.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—[Special.]—This week was the preliminary to the big week that begins tomorrow and runs a dizzy pace right through to the new year, and, even though it embraces two whole weeks, to the debutante horde of New York it is the big week and nothing else. There has been at least one party every night since Thanksgiving, but that was merely the cocktail that precedes the banquet. Last night there were no less than seven important deb parties, and Saturday to come, not to mention the days of the holiday week, which will have an equal number of debutante and undergraduate shindigs.

Thursday really began the week's round, for on that night the spinsters' ball took place at the Park Lane and the Edgar Palmers of Princeton gave their ball at the Ritz in honor of their daughter, whose name is Zilph. It was, so far as the Tiger young men are concerned, entirely a matter of interest to Jersey stags, but I must insist that there were quite as many lads from New Haven about the festive bowl as from the vicinity of Palmer stadium.

Four Deb Dances.

Friday had four deb dances, the day commencing with the breakfast-dance Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Evans gave at Sherry's for Muriel Evans from 11 until 3 in the afternoon, going on with the tea-dance given at the Riding club by Mrs. John Moorehead, and culminating in the supper-dance at Sherry's given by Mrs. John Claflin.

The town, you gather, has been given up to the younger element. The lads are all home from college for the holidays, with their Christmas allowances burning holes in their pockets and a positive itch for dancing in their feet. One simply can't get near one's favorite table at the Plaza at teatime, though the Plaza still runs second to the Biltmore as a meeting place for the debutantes and their attentive escorts. With tea dancing once more in full swing, the hotels are being literally besieged by the undergraduate horde.

Inherits Thoroughbreds.

Every one is intensely interested in the fact that Mrs. George J. Atwell Jr. has inherited the famous racing stables of her father, the late Gifford Cochran, and that she has every intention of racing her thoroughbreds under the Cochran colors. Mrs. Atwell is the former Jean Cochran, daughter of Mr. Cochran and the present Princess Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst, who eloped with the tall, blond son of New York's most famous contractor, much to the dismay of her mother. Mrs. Atwell is now the leader of the younger marrieds and is more than a bit pleased at her sister-in-law, the one time Mary Atwell, having married Frank Hitchcock, son of the Thomas Hitchcocks.

While neither Bud Atwell nor his sister Mary have ever been noted for their interest in horses, the Cochrans and the Hitchcocks are both famed for their hunting, polo, and racing flair. The blue-eyed Jean has two brothers, Gifford Cochran Jr. and Drayton Cochran, but neither of them ever showed one-tenth the interest in horses Jean has showed all her life. As a result it was significant that Mr. Cochran left his stables to his daughter rather than to either of his sons or his nephew, Thomas Ewing Jr.

Younger Folk Run Stables.

There have been several stables of horses passing from the hands of the older generation into those of the younger folk. Jock Whitney is, of course, the most shining example, for the son of the late Payne Whitney, even with his mother's intelligent hand to guide him, is going in wholeheartedly for racing and turf matters, with his wife, born Altemus and equally mad about horses and dogs, to aid and abet him.

Then the passing of Harry Payne Whitney has brought the second Whitney stables into the hands of Jock's cousin, Cornelius V. Whitney, who is determined to carry on in the steps of his father.

The spring will see a lot of spirited competition between the three stables run by these comparatively youthful people and this winter they will all be much in evidence at Aiken. The junior Hitchcocks will rally round the Thomas Hitchcock, Sr. homestead for the polo and the riding to hounds.

Hotels versus Houses.

There is not much doubt that it is unfashionable to live in a house these days. What with the servant problem and the great amount of detail necessary to run a big house, society is going in more and more for living at hotels while in the city, with all the bother of keeping up the place left to the efficient hotel stewards.

An excellent case in example is that of the William Fahnestocks, who have one of the show places in town and yet put up at a hotel when they are here. Their home on Madison avenue was reconditioned only a year or so ago. It has a remarkable French drawing room, hung with priceless Flemish tapestries, and is also adorned with the portrait of Mrs. Fahnestock done by Zuloaga.

The dining room has Louis Quinze furniture, every piece of which is authentic. There are old Chinese screens and walnut paneling, and the rest of the house is correspondingly magnificent. And yet Mr. and Mrs. Fahnestock never stay there. Besides the town house the Fahnestocks have a villa at Newport, Boise Dore, and a house at Katonah, in Westchester.

All three of these houses are empty now, for the Fahnestocks have left for St. Augustine, Fla., where they spend the winter. Truly, they are all pied-a-terres, and the only home the Fahnestocks have is a suite in a hotel.

Land and Sea Sports Start at Palm Beach

Breakers Opens Doors for Season.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Running second only to the opening of the Breakers hotel as a favorite topic of town gossip is the season program of land and sea sports which loomed up in definite form this week. Beginning of a new round of gayety at the Breakers, where dozens of Chicagoans have reservations, brought an end to early season quiet. At the hotel and elsewhere about the island preparations for many Christmas festivities are being rushed.

One party expected to bring together a group of Chicagoans is that to be given by Mrs. Charles M. Hayes, who has been occupying her Ocean boulevard home for several weeks.

Beginning its winter along with the Breakers was the Sailfish club of Florida, probably America's most exclusive angling organization. Mayor John Shepard and Mr. and Mrs. James R. Emery of Chicago were in a group of members and their friends who attended an informal opening in the club's rooms at the Breakers' casino and heard announcements of valuable silver trophies offered by Maj. Shepard, Col. E. R. Bradley and other sportsmen for this year's deep sea fishing contests.

Start Contest for Cups.

The annual contest of the Palm Beach Anglers and Sports club for gold and silver cups worth several small fortunes and bearing such titles as the "Queen of Greece Trophy," and "The President of Mexico Cup," also got started last week. This is the club that will stage the regatta later in the season with the Lipton outboard cup as the outstanding target.

The Poinciana golf course, which features a woman pro, Miss Bessie Fenn, opened and the pro at the Palm Beach Country club began to get things straightened up in anticipation of the annual artists and writers' tourney there, a few weeks in the future. No less than seven championship golf and tennis tournaments, not to mention the artists and writers' and the old guard golf tourneys, will be fought out on local courts and links.

Plenty of Golf Tourneys.

In golf the Lake Worth tournament is set for Jan. 26-30; the south Florida championship, Feb. 9-13; the women's championship of Florida, Feb. 16-20, and the championship of Palm Beach, Feb. 23-27. Making up the big time tennis program are the women's championship of Florida, Feb. 23-28; the men's championship of Florida, March 2-7, and the southern professional championship, March 10-14.

Diana Fishwick, British champion, and five other feminine British stars who will begin are expected to start a golfing invasion of the United States here when they come to qualify for the Florida women's championship matches.

Colony's First Grand Opera.

Things musical are going to be pepped up in 1931, too. As Miss Muriel McCormick goes ahead with her Palm Beach playhouse enterprise of introducing drama here, Mrs. George Dobyne, one of the leading local hostesses, is arranging to bring in Palm Beach's first grand opera. At least, she will bring in Ernesto Dodds, the Argentine baritone, now on his first

Duhamel's New Book Startles French Capital

Chicago Figures Largely in Disputed Work.

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—George Duhamel's latest work, "Scene de la Vie Future," freely translated as "What Is the World Coming To?" is provoking a curious reaction in France. Making Chicago an epitome of American civilization, the author indulged in so many animadversions that Le Figaro, the leading newspaper here, is conducting a symposium. After many writers have defended Duhamel, others are found to be combating him, though with strictures. This book, in which Chicago figures so largely, is bound to excite a controversy on both sides of the Atlantic.

Be that as it may, several artists of European origin are soon to appear in Chicago. One, Maria Kurkensko, already known as a guest artist of the Chicago opera and through numerous American concerts in the last five years, has just had two performances in Paris, both of which were highly praised. She has just applied for American citizenship.

Will Sail in January.

She will sail for America on Jan. 7 and will appear at Carnegie hall in New York on Jan. 23 with celebrated artists, including Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Spalding, Zecchi, and Jose Iturbi, and then begins an extended tour embracing Chicago and principal cities in the United States and Canada.

Another gifted European sailing for America late in December is Teresina, the Spanish dancer, who appeared in Paris two years ago. She has just repeated a success here dancing to the music of Enrique Granados, Albeniz, Falla and Claude Achille Debussy and others who have caught the light and fire of Iberia. Hailing from Barcelona, she weaves Catalan fun, irony, passion, and coquetry marvelously, with vivid effects heightened by grace and striking costumes with a sense of line and color. Although her style is vastly different from Argentina it does not suffer from comparison. On Jan. 1 she appears at the Town hall in New York and will then go on a sixty day American tour, including Chicago, Philadelphia, and Washington, the details not having been arranged. Her immense vitality and artistic power are enchanting.

Chicagoans Abroad.

Among the Chicagoans moving about Europe are Mr. and Mrs. Clark J. Lawrence of Hubbard Woods, who have returned to the Hotel Maurice here after doing Italy and central Europe. Miss Rosemary Lytton, whose mother sailed recently for Chicago, left the George V. hotel here bound for a sojourn in Metz. Charles S. Dewey, after some activity in Paris, including a speech at the American club, is sailing today on the Leviathan after the completion of his financial task in Poland, his wife and son preceding him a few days.

An exhibition showing at the Orangerie museum and the Tuileries Gardens contains sketches of Hubert Robert, painter of the great show place in south Paris built for Laborde, financier for Louis XV. and Louis XVI. The artist not only helped design the grounds of this show place at Mereville, but adorned it with numerous paintings, some of which were dispersed in 1900 and were acquired by the Chicago museum. The present owner of Mereville is John Kelly, a Philadelphian.

French Painter Here for Work on Portraits

Boutet de Monvel Joins Modern Movement.

By Cousin Eve.

NOBODY need leave town for beauty these early days of winter. One may travel for climate, but not for beauty. I do not insist that Chicago has an ideal climate, but I do proclaim that it is becoming more and more beautiful every day.

Take last Sunday in the afternoon. What a day for a modernist! Snow covered ground, dark masses of the lake—people etched in black, atmosphere full of concealed light behind frosty clouds!

And what a modernist was here to enjoy that day. Bernard Boutet de Monvel in person. Yes, he, too, has gone modern, very much so. I have never been to his charming house in the outskirts or environs of Paris, which was once upon a time filled with the tapestries, and petit point and gilt and glitter, and Aubusson and Sevres, so dear to the hearts of the French. Veritable Louis the Fourteenth street they call it in New York.

Becoming dissatisfied with his elaborately trimmed abode, M. de Monvel ripped the interior all out, and now every inch of it is modern. That is what modern art does to you; it makes you dissatisfied with what you once held dear. And you sell all the petit point to those who like it for a great price.

Present at Showing of Portrait.

M. de Monvel was here to be present at the showing of the portrait, done some time ago in Paris, of Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, who gave a Sunday tea in his honor at 2430 Lake View avenue. There the pretty world not only saw the charming portrait but the enchanting apartment in which it hangs, and which for the occasion was decked with great bouquets of calla lilies, that being the favorite flower of modernistic thought.

The dining-room with its black floor inlaid with silver bands and its white walls caught everybody's fancy. Very chic. Present were many women with beautiful faces set off by becoming furs—among them the blonde Mrs. James Ward Thorne, who is acclaimed one of Chicago's fairest, a blonde with delicate features and a lovely expression. She is to be M. de Monvel's next sitter.

A Globe Trotter.

Mrs. Goodspeed is one of the really brilliant members of the younger married set. She was Elizabeth Fuller, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Charles Fuller, and has already been president of the highly intellectual Friday club, although in her earliest thirties. Her childhood name is "Bobsey," and it still clings most appropriately, for who has bobbed about more over the earth's surface? With her husband, popularly called "Barney," she has visited the antipodes, and in very good company.

To the arctic circle they went yachting with the John Bordens, to the South seas in a party with the John T. McCutcheons. To South Africa solo, I believe, with a trek northward on foot, to the head waters of the Nile. Again across the Siberian steppes, and another time to Java and Borneo and Siam.

Among the chic creatures painted in Chicago by M. de Monvel are Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, whose delicate features have a frame of bronze brown hair with dark eyes; Mrs. Howard Linn, whose prematurely gray hair, great dark eyes and young face are painted against a pink background; the lovely Mrs. Walter Wolf, whose skin is flawless as ivory, is painted with a challenging white ground, and sweet young Helen Blair, who died last June, was done in profile against blue. Mrs. Edward K. Welles, daughter of John W. Scott of Winnetka, and Barbara Wendell were both subjects, I believe, although I have not seen them. M. de Monvel is a delightful person and goes about while in town, partout.

Another Sunday Tea.

Miss Clara Kretzinger was another artist from Paris who had a Sunday tea and exhibition of her work in the Palmolive galleries. The artist has a real studio in Paris in the Rue Schoeffler, Montparnasse, where her Chicago friends meet many interesting foreigners of that quarter.

Montparnasse has driven Montmartre out of the picture as an art center, but, alas! Montparnasse may soon lose its elusive charm, for the railroad station of that name will soon be running over with trans-Atlantic passengers, instead of Gare de St. Lazare, as in the past.

Miss Kretzinger's work has a decorative quality quite lovely, that has been acknowledged by the French Salon many times during her ten years in Paris. Her painting has latterly been called for in murals, for, oddly enough [the same thing is true of many another artist], since the crash people are not buying many pictures, but they are having their bathrooms painted. That is the first cry for 1931—a distinguished artist to paint the bathroom!

Receiving with Miss Kretzinger was Mrs. Hayden Harris and calling were many, including the Edward Swifts, Mrs. Waller Borden, the Huntington Henrys, Maxim Karolik, Marchesa d'Ivanrey, her daughter, Miss de Soriano, the Rinakers, the Boysens, Mrs. Paul Shorey, Wolfgang von Hagen, and others; a crowd, in fact.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

"Martha" in Person

Readers of "When Chicago Was Young" will be interested to know that "Martha Esmond" is to give a review of early social life in Chicago, called "Dear Julia," in the Drake hotel ballroom on Sunday, Jan. 4, at 3 p. m. Tickets are $2 and may be bought at the door.

A son of Johnny Hand, with two men from the old Hand organization, will play familiar melodies while pictures of Chicago pioneers and old buildings are thrown on the screen.

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Nov. 7, 1875.

DEAR JULIA:

We have just returned from Milwaukee, where we spent two days, young Martha staying with mother and father in our absence. Will had a legal case there and wanted me to go up with him. It is a lovely city with much wealth and culture.

We saw such a wonderful new house, which is the talk of the town. We have nothing finer in Chicago. It is being built by a man named C. T. Bradley on Martin street, and its taste and magnificence would impress even an easterner, I am sure. The accomplished architect, E. T. Mix, designed it and critics say it surpasses the gorgeous Immanuel church nearby. We were especially interested in seeing the interior, because Peter Almini, a Chicago artist, is doing the frescoing and he did the ceiling of our Rush street house. Of course, the work he did for us is trifling compared with this, for we had only two rooms frescoed. The Bradley house is immense and his work is seen in almost every one of the rooms.

The hall is classical in design with a carved staircase, the carving done by a man named Gustave Haag of Milwaukee. In the billiard room the frescoing is in Egyptian style. The associate architect, who showed us around, told us that Shakespeare attributed a knowledge of the green baize table and the cue to the Egyptians when he made Cleopatra say: "Let us to billiards, Charmion," so I presume Egyptian style frescoing is appropriate, but I was not quite so pleased with it as with the rest of the house.

Dear me! I've blotted that word. Young Martha is playing and singing a crazy song in the parlor and it would drive any one out of his head. She sings it over and over. It is so ridiculous I will copy it for you so you may laugh over it. It is called "Ossian's Serenade."

O, come with me in my little canoe,
Where the sea is calm and the sky is blue!

O, come with me, for I long to go
To those isles where the mango apples grow.

O, come with me and be my love!
For thee the jungle depths I'll rove;
I'll gather the honeycomb, bright as gold,
And chase the elk to its secret hold.

Refrain:

I'll chase the antelope over the plain,
The tiger's cub I'll bind with a chain,
And the wild gazelle, with its silvery feet,
I'll give thee for a playmate sweet.

In a second verse the ardent lover makes a still more startling offer, for he says:

I'll climb the palm for the boa's nest,
Red peas I'll gather to deck thy breast;
I'll pierce the cocoa's cup for its wine,
And haste to thee if thou'lt be mine.
Then come with me in my little canoe,
While the sea is calm and the sky is blue,
For should we linger another day
Storms may arise and love decay.

Will teases Martha a great deal about the song and tells her it must have been written by P. T. Barnum's advance agent and that if he sees a little canoe approaching on Lake Michigan he will go out and shoot the one who paddles it, for he simply won't have a collection of elks, antelopes, tiger's cubs, gazelles, and boa constrictors on the premises. This reminds me to tell you that Will pointed out the great Barnum on the street the other day. He is staying at the Palmer house and I suppose he is getting ready for another season with his show.

I wonder if you have seen Whittier's new poem, "Mabel Martin." I found it at Jansen & McClurg's [our best book store] today and bought it, thinking I would give it to some one for a Christmas gift, as it is in a beautiful binding. I believe Mrs. William Blair would like it, for I know she is fond of Whittier. I called on her yesterday and asked her if I might tell you that her son, Ed Blair, is at Yale, and that if you are in need of dancing partners for your party for your niece you couldn't do better than to write him and his roommate, John V. Farwell Jr. Both are nice young fellows, very gentlemanly and in every way suitable to meet the young ladies you will be asking to your German.

They [these two boys] are of

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MRS. WILLIAM E. COCHRAN.

[Gibson Photo.]

The marriage of Miss Artha McConoughey to William E. Cochran was solemnized on Thanksgiving day at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Marsh McConoughey of 4441 Lowell avenue. Mrs. Cochran attended Northwestern University Law school and is a Beta Kappa Pi and a member of the D. A. R. After a trip to Bermuda Mr. and Mrs. Cochran will reside in Paducah, Ky. month, I should say. And all the world divided into two unequal parts, those for it and those against it!

I must say, en passant, that it was most unwise of Madame Garden to have resurrected and purchased Sarah Bernhardt's identical, original wig, for the uproar excited by this hirsute topknot has drowned out all mention of the opera itself, the diva, the supporting cast and the talented composer, Hamilton Forrest.

The wig, a strange, blonde, rococo affair like nothing before seen on land or sea, has, it seems, been perpetuated in a portrait of the great Frenchwoman which Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick appears to have seen. But news that this was Sarah Bernhardt's wig In Person, and not an understudy, was conveyed to me by the well known lawyer and vestryman of St. Chrysostom's, Frederick C. Norcross; so I believe it, and it shows that interest about it is widespread.

It was a brilliant audience for "Camille," the best and brightest of the winter, but with all agreed that it was not in the picture, to return to Sarah the Divine, with the rest of the cast of a jazz opera in bobbed hair.

Capt. Molyneux of Paris designed Miss Garden's costumes. The gold lamé in which she navigates down, then up the stair, is an odd creation of many tabs, en traine and strewn with wild poppies.

Dashed Hopes.

I had been led to hope that Camille passed away in green satin pyjamas in the odor of highest fashion. But no, she died in white—white flannel from all I could see from a front box, and tailored probably by Capt. Molyneux. However, her pink telephone was nice, and expecting to hear her intone 'allo 'allo into it, the disillusion was great when she merely murmured "C'est vous, Comte?"

And the pink silk sheets of the death bed were not new to Chicago. No, they have already been done heavily, here sponsored long ago by such a chic young woman as Mrs. Wolcott Blair, the daughter-in-law of Mrs. Watson F. Blair, who came here from New York on her marriage.

Madame Garden has frequently stated that "Camille" needs French understanding to be truly successful, and French treatment. In her present vehicle the author is American, the cast is mostly American, and Miss Garden herself is American, also the debut. An amusing paradox in this situation, one would think.

Hamilton Forrest is a genius. Everybody says so. But to really enjoy his music one has to be young, very young. They used to write that same thing about "Traviata," eighty years ago, I am told.

Old and Young at Chauve Souris.

Anybody who misses the Chauve Souris, Saturday mornings at the Selwyn, is missing something. Our very young set assembled there last week in force was twittering like an aviary at the opening of the new Junior League show. It was a very gay and amusing children's revue, never over their heads and yet interesting to the oldsters present. Gloria Chandler, in Balieff's former rôle, was marvelous; in preposterous male attire and a gambler's mustache, she kept the audience in a tumult of joy, and the beautiful Mme. Rosa Raisa herself, who sat in Mrs. William Scriven's party, heartily applauded the sweet voice of Louise Badgerow, one of the big cast.

The Junior League of the present day has an enormous amount of talent. Edith Fairbanks, beautiful granddaughter of a former Vice President of the United States, was an organ grinder, harboring on her shoulder a tiny monkey, Bacteria by name, from the University of Chicago laboratories. Paula Wilms, a drummer, and Frances Oliver in this sketch were professionally clever.

Some of the excellent scenery had come from the Petrushka club, but the loveliest was done by Mrs. Philip Maher and Mrs. Walter Paepcke, and the lyrics by Mrs. James W. Rogers, all three daughters of University of Chicago professorial families, namely the Michelsons, William Nitzes and James W. Linns. Several musical numbers came from the brain of Helen Rend, and, in fact, I found so many charming friends involved in this revue, from Mrs. John Finlay at the ticket booth, Angela Johnson counting the gross receipts, and Marcia Masters, daughter of the celebrated poet, Edgar Lee Masters, doing a toe dance, that I was delighted to have gone to it.

The leaguers divide up their season's receipts, which are very big, among Chicago charities. Mrs. Scriven, following the play, gave a large luncheon at the Casino for Mme. Raisa, who was luxuriously arrayed in minks over a dark morning dress.

An Interesting Musicale.

On Monday afternoon in the Drake ballroom the second of the Friends of Opera musicals took place, with many present, as usual. Mrs. Arthur Meeker, president of the Friends, presided, and Mrs. Charles Swift, looking charming in a long pale blue tunic and sables, ran the musical end, home at last from a wide concert tour. Charles Marshall, Mme. Rajdl of the Dresden opera, and Hans Nissen of the Munich opera gave a fine program. Mme. Rajdl is young, pretty and slender, which is unexpected in a German prima donna. After the music, Mrs. Meeker with a humorous smile announced a surprise number by William Tyroler, accompanist. This proved to be a skit, a musical portrait of a great tenor running over his rôles, with piano accompaniment. Pretty soon everybody was laughing until tears came, including Charles Marshall, who seemed to recognize the portrait and find it rather good, as he dried his eyes.

A Celebrated Coat.

Church paraders on Lake Shore drive last Sunday morning were exhilarated by the sight of a handsome and distinguished young man, walking briskly along in an outer garment that, while unusual, was distinctly interesting. The garment in question was a coat, the man in it was Maxim Karolik.

Some years ago Mrs. Samuel Insull, meeting Mr. Karolik in New York, where he had lately come as a Russian émigré, suggested that he go to Chicago and try for the Civic Opera. He went to Chicago, made many friends, but did not make the opera. During this period he worked very hard, and things were rather gloomy.

Finally, returning to New York, he met another influential friend, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend of Washington. She invited him to come to Washington and give some morning recitals in her drawing room. These were a great success.

Through them Mr. Karolik met a well known patron of music from Boston, Miss Martha Codman, one of the wealthiest women in the United States. Miss Codman invited Maxim Karolik to give recitals in her Newport house, the following summer. He went to Newport and made a musical as well as personal success, and his career as a concert singer began. Some time later Miss Codman became Mrs. Karolik, and the Russian émigré is now head of a splendid establishment in Washington, another at Newport, and one in Beacon street, Boston.

Washington Electrified.

I had often heard that Washington was electrified by Mr. Karolik's appearance, so dark and distinguished, in a glossy Persian lamb cap, much frogged and furred short coat, and high black boots, dashing around the national capital with two men on the front seat of his great car. He is considered the handsomest man in Washington.

But how nice for Chicago to have him here wearing the celebrated but not long coat with deep cuffs of sable, a sable rever and collar, and otherwise normal costume! Maxim Karolik, who gave a Russian concert Monday night in Orchestra Hall before a large assembly, is boyish and unspoiled by his great fortune. He laughs mightily about his furred coats.

Here is his favorite story: A Washington dignitary, meeting him on the street in the glorious furred jacket, which really makes him look like a prince out of one of Tolstoy's novels, thumped him violently on the chest: "Men don't wear things like that, my dear fellow—they really don't."

"No," said Karolik, "men don't, but tenors do. I'm a tenor."

Mr. Karolik closed his Chicago visit with a dinner party at the Drake, followed by the play, to a number of his old friends.

At the Drake also are Dr. and Mrs. Arnold Klebs of Nyon, Switzerland. Mrs. Klebs, who was Harriet King, of a well known Chicago family of other days, is having many luncheons in her honor day by day. Over the week-end the Klebs' stayed with the William Burrys Jr. in Lake Forest. Young Mrs. Burry is a daughter of Mrs. Klebs. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill had a dinner for the Klebs' on Tuesday night.

VARIED EXHIBITS MARK HOLIDAY SEASON

Current Shows Afford Interesting Contrasts in Art as Expressed by the Different Nationalities.

By Eleanor Jewett.

IT seems to me that it might be amusing once in a while to tabulate the current exhibits something in the same manner in which a schedule is kept in a sick room, remembering of course that art was never healthier than it is today, with a series of pungent, practical paragraphs that have for their base nothing but a sincere wish to get you to go and see the exhibitions. For instance:

Chester H. Johnson gallery, Fine Arts building, weather clear but storms brewing; atmosphere heavy. Salcia Bahnc, lately returned from Paris, opens an exhibit of paintings in which are two conflicting schools of thought. The one is that of the exquisite: the other that of the Rabelaisian. Her still life of flowers, including nasturtiums [No. 10], is extremely lovely, beautifully handled, amazingly light, resonant, and sound. Excepting the Chinese figure, which leans slightly to the strata whereon blow opium fumes, the other three still life pictures are surpassingly fine.

Turning to the company of whom Rubens and Rabelais are the invisible leaders we find ourselves plunged into a maelstrom of the flesh. The "Bathers" has a fine piece of foreshortening in the figure of the diver. It also has a bewitching setting of lake, trees, and apt color. The more oppressive nudes have not as much to commend them to those of a more austere taste. They offend by the exuberance of their flesh. Miss Bahnc comes into her own again, however, with a masterly head, "Weeping Woman." This is among the most brilliant paintings we have seen in Chicago at any time and in any exhibition.

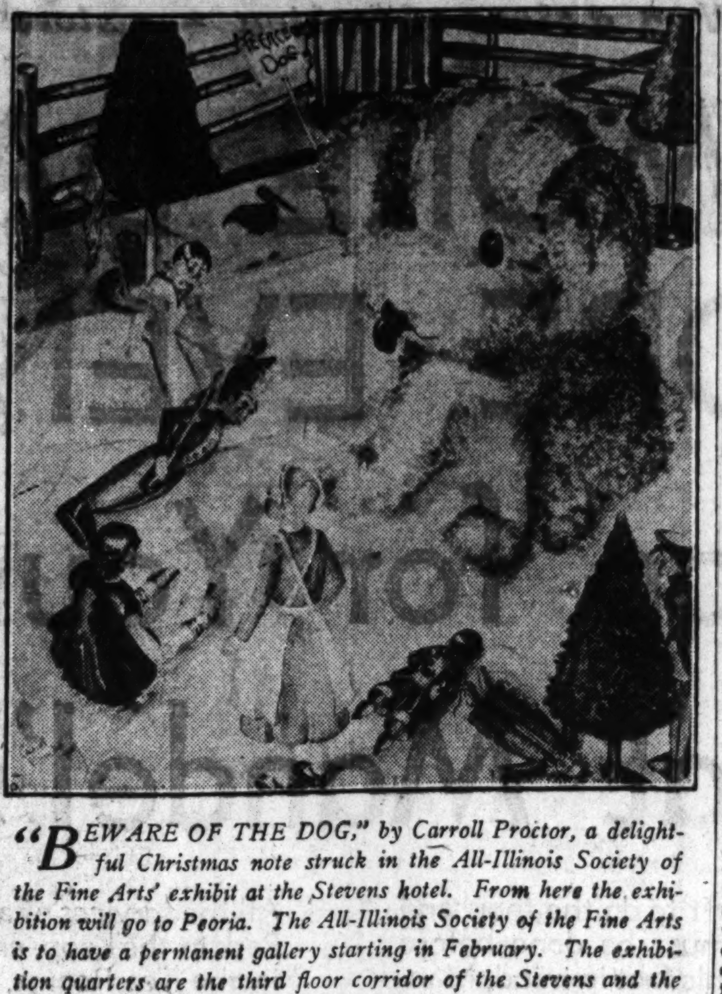
Winter Landscapes.

Traffic club, Palmer house: Maud Miller Hoffmaster, Michigan painter, with an exceptionally fine exhibit of winter landscapes. Mrs. Hoffmaster is unusually gifted in her ability to transmit the changing beauty of the seasons. She has an uncanny power in the painting of snow. Just as real snow has different qualities and characteristics in the early winter, in midwinter, and in spring, so her snow at Thanksgiving is dry and powdery; at Christmas is rich and deep and crusted; in the spring is soft and wet with tears of its running damp under its surface.



"BEWARE OF THE DOG," by Carroll Proctor, a delightful Christmas note struck in the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts' exhibit at the Stevens hotel. From here the exhibition will go to Peoria. The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is to have a permanent gallery starting in February. The exhibition quarters are the third floor corridor of the Stevens and the exhibits will change from month to month. The society is doing a fine piece of work and is getting the loyal support of Illinois artists, all of whom are contributing their best work in each show so that the spirit of the organization may draw strength from their strength.

Compare her "Thanksgiving Time" with her "Christmas Morning" and "Spring Is Near." The different seasons do not need their titles to proclaim themselves. From these turn to the delicate and lovely still life, "My Blue Vase," in which purple and white lilacs mingle; then go to the "Abandoned to Vetch," an old farm still beautiful in the courage of the tiny wayside flowers; and from it turn to "Overhanging Bough," with the moon making a silver path on the quiet water. Two large canvases complete the essential features of this exhibit. The one is "Snowshoe Trail," a forest cloaked in snow, and the other is "Blocking the Trail," again a scene in the pine woods, but with the snow in its splendor falling, falling, striking like swift feathers through the great conifers, a magnificent storm captained by a magnificent silence.

Water Colors and Sculpture.

Midland club: Oscar Yampolsky, water colors and small sculpture. Color and more color, delicate and penetrating; perhaps a little too much. A clear background for some of the flower paintings would come as a relief. A feeling for architecture saturates many of the landscapes. "Cherry Valley" is a wide reach, bewitching in its complications, its far horizon and manifold variations.

"Sunken Garden, Fort Wayne, Ind." is lovely. "Russian Fantasie," a vibrant and dramatic chord to which themes of folk songs sing, is particularly effective with its castle and mountains and imaginative details. The "Vase with Peonies" is loosely handled and possibly for that reason is one of the strongest flower paintings in the room. "Laughing Child," sculpture, is charming.

The Palmolive gallery: Paintings by Clara J. Kretsinger, a combination of interesting and beautiful painting. The "Portrait of My Mother" is delightful, simple, sure, and direct. The "Decor" in which a blithe young thing rides cheerily upon a unicorn to the appreciative surprise of an Indian, who by some mischance has mixed himself up with a fountain, is an entertaining fantasy.

"Her Mother's Doll" is a charming dusky painting of a little girl with a regiment of dolls, the best beloved, we suppose, the one that used to be her mother's. "Day Dreams" shows us a wistful young woman looking into the future. The "Nu," discovered on the seashore, is a gentle lady and so is the delicate "Nu" who rests her white limbs on a soft couch much in the tempo of a Persian kitten replete with cream. Of the tiny sketches of women the most exquisite are "Jeune Fille en Mauve" [No. 1] and "Jeune Fille en Jaune." Through some anatomical oversight the arms of the woman in "Green Dress" reach on and on in a muscular splendor which we hope is accidental.

Scandinavia at Home.

Café Idrott, 5248 North Clark street: Paintings by Signe Palmblad, who has done a great deal in the last few years to encourage Swedish art and artists in Chicago. Mme. Palmblad is over sixty and last winter she was laid up with a broken arm, but in spite of what others might consider handicaps she has gone gallantly on, painting good things of her own and never ceasing in encouraging others. This is her first one man show of the winter and it is full of worth while canvases.

Mme. Palmblad excels in painting the picturesque costumes and customs of the Scandinavian at home. She has done delightful things with the games and dances of Sweden. In more serious mood are her paintings of trees and landscapes, and her occasional venture into portraiture. We can most gladly support her in this present exhibition.

The Walden-Dudensing gallery—Here are found two exhibits, one of original drawings, lithographs and etchings by such men as Picasso, Davies, Rockwell Kent, Bonfils, Laboureur, Maillol and Rouault, and the other exhibit of small water colors and oils by modern Americans—Wilts, Vukoviç, Rackow, Mangravite, Nura, and Young.

The Knoedler gallery—An arresting exhibit of important portraits by Reynolds, Romney, and Hopper, in addition to a fascinating group of English sporting paintings.

The Arts club—These exhibitions opened last Tuesday and are, the one of paintings by Valentine Prax, a new name, and the other of drawings by William Littlefield, another unfamiliar name.

Work of Bohemian Artists.

Sekera Furniture building, Cicero, Ill.—Fifth exhibition by artists of the Bohemian Arts club of Chicago, an extremely good show. We scarcely realize in the ordinary run of events how much Chicago owes to her Bohemian artists. The names in this exhibit give us pause and force upon us a consciousness of the ability and genius of these men, whom we casually consider Americans or Chicagoans, leaving out of all consideration the fact of their true origin. Here then are some of our talented Bohemians reclaiming Cicero from the talons of Capone and proving that more things are possible in Illinois than are sometimes registered in our philosophy:

Frank J. Gavencky, Anthony Buchta, Rudolph F. Ingerle [I thought this would surprise you], Charles Ropp, Antonin Sterba, Josef Svoboda, Josef Tomanek and Charles Wilimovsky. Naturally with those men there the exhibit is exceedingly good.

In the list of sculptors the name of Albín Polasek glows like a star. The others, those names with which we are not familiar, stand for good work, too. The Bohemians are among the most gifted peoples of the earth. Transplanted to Cicero, their gifts do not fail them. If the club could arrange a Chicago exhibition it would be mightily welcomed by all of us who cannot manage to reach it where it now is.

The Society of Medalists has just issued the second medal, the work of Paul Manship. Manship has taken Dionysus for his theme and he has made a gem of Puckish humor out of it. Laura Gardin Fraser executed the first medal for the society and now we have Paul Manship's work to treasure with hers. Membership in the society, which brings you the medals, is only $8 a year and I warn you frankly that you are losing an inestimable amount of pleasure and interest and beauty in not joining and making for yourself a collection of these twice yearly medals. They in all probability will be among the lasting values of our generation.

The prize awards made in the second International Lithograph and Wood Engraving exhibition now at the Art institute are the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan bronze medal with $100 to "Hop Pickers," by Clare Leighton, English; the Logan $75 prize to "Interior," by Victoria Ebbels Hutson; the Logan $50 prize to "New York," by Saul Raskin; the Walter S. Brewster prize of $50 for a lithograph to "Minetta Lane," by Glenn O. Coleman; the Brewster prize of $50 for a woodcut to "The Flight," by Ostap Chrostowski; "The Olive Grove," by John Copley, and "Brooklyn Bridge" by Louis Lozowick were considered of unusual quality but were ineligible for prizes, having taken prizes last year.

The Polish Arts club will hold its fourth exhibition of paintings and sculpture by Polish and Polish-American artists from Dec. 27 to Jan. 4. The jury of admittance is composed of Minnie Harms Neebe, Clara A. Kra and Jane J. Palezynski. It is rather unusual to have a jury composed entirely of women but the show may be all the better for it.

Chicagoans Are Prominent in Miami Affairs

Yachting Club Numbers Many of Them.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Chicagoans will head the list of social activities at this southland resort, guest and club announcements during the last week indicate. Cocolobo Cay club, millionaire yachting society, opened last Sunday with a number of the Chicago members listed as present or expected. Among those were: John Hertz, Webb Jay, Frederick H. Rawson, C. E. Dashiell, and Theodore Dickinson.

Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Elston Jr. arrived here last Friday. They have taken a furnished cottage on the bay side, but expect to live aboard their yacht Ilderim. Mr. Elston is a member of the Bath club and the Committee of 100. Incidentally, the Bath club, with Fred A. Poor of Chicago as its president, and numbering many Chicagoans as members, is preparing for another series of social functions.

Sensuous, Shimmering Rio Is Like Setting for Wagner Opera

Fascination of Revolutionland Belies Its Name

Darrah Tells of Leisurely Pace of South America.

(This is the second of a series of articles on the South American countries and their problems, by The Tribune's Rome correspondent, who arrived in Brazil a few days before the military junta in Rio overthrew the Washington Luis government.)

By David Darrah.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

RIO DE JANEIRO.—[Special.]—To reach "Rio" and its amphitheater of natural wonders we had steamed three days down the eastern fringe of Brazil, a silent, greenish coast of hills screening a country larger than the United States, and the home of forty millions of people.

Far to the west near the Amazon river head lay Para, once prosperous from rubber plantations, boasting itself the Paris of South America's jungle; then Maranhao, with its people calling their town the Athens of Brazil; Natale, just on the shoulder of South America; and below it Pernambuco, traversed with canals like Venice, and fought over for years by the Portuguese and the Dutch.

Sensuous Shimmering.

Passing Cape Frio, the first glimpse of the Corcovado (Hunchback) mountain emerges into view, then into the harbor under pouting, misty skies, rounding into Guanabara bay over swells of green sea through fantastic, sporadic islands flung fantastically around the bay and coast. As we approach, the semi-circular white sweep of Copacabana beach stretches away to the left; to the front the Sugar Loaf, a curious chocolate drop of rock and earth covered with vegetation, and thence into the harbor toward the dock, through forts and palm gardens straight as a twenty-four storied skyscraper which sticks up like an ivory tusk against the skyline of green and orange roofs, gingerbread houses, domes, minarets, and spires, balconies and grotesque architectural confections.

Heterogenous "Rio," trickling up its mountain valleys through its drained swampland, sensuous and shimmering in its tropical light; gorgeously wearing its brilliant, luxuriant vegetation, flower gardens and royal palms; its glimmering bay, its weird mountain background dim and purple against the horizon, a setting for Wagnerian opera.

First Impressions.

The big liner wallows across Guanabara bay, landlocked inside the isthmus and the islands, and aided by tugs groans into its berth at the docks at the Praca Maua and the end of the Avenida Rio Branca. A cruiser lies at anchor in the bay, and, as we dock, out comes a swarm of small boats selling pineapples, oranges, melons, and tropical fruits. Ferry boats are hauling Sunday crowds across the bay to Nictheroy.

At 4 we dock. Half an hour and a taxi lands everything at the hotel in the Avenida Rio Branca.

A colorful thoroughfare is the Avenida, a mile and a half long, with trees down the center as well as along the side, plethoric with American automobiles, employing the red, yellow, and green light system of direct traffic, lined with new eight to ten story business buildings and also the faded structures of Spanish colonial or Portuguese aspect. Everywhere café terraces and motion picture shows with American films; almost every star in Hollywood seems to glitter along the white way of the Avenida before the picture palaces at night.

Sweltering Heat.

Sunday crowds fill streets and avenues everywhere, flowing out of the tiny Rua Ouvridor, the capital's narrow business street, where all the de luxe shops are, and where the ladies spend their money on dry goods. Beyond the Monroe palace is a large square, flanked by high buildings and hotels, with the shops flaming with posters of a dozen movies. Thence to the Avenida Beira Mar, its open square full of flower beds with rich red and yellow flowers and the magnificent Casino behind it.

The people filling these streets are heterogenous mixtures in race, some dusky, some undistinguishable from people on the streets of any other capital in the world, some dressed in ordinary clothes, but most wearing white duck, for it is hot, sweltering hot, with a sticky, muggy heat.

Beyond the Avenida Beira Mar, which looks out over the shimmering bay of Rio de Janiero, is the Gloria park, an open square with green palms and flowers, and running up to it the Botafago beach, where today the young bloods of Brazil have been bathing and playing water polo. In the streets families of Brazilians out for a Sunday evening walk, sitting on the park benches, strolling along, an easy going, tolerant, unhurried, courteous people, not interested in rushing anywhere, eager for amusement and enjoyment, but not too much—something passively sensuous about both this evening's scene and about the people.

Brazil, like all other countries, has been hit by the economic slump. Coffee has dropped in price, but here in this tropical exuberance of vegetation and climate there seems an abundance both of natural and of man made things.

The shops along the mosaic streets, paved in black and white small stones, like the bottoms of bathing pools, are all stocked with an abundance and wide variety of goods, displayed with alluring and adept advertising methods. Much of the lower end of the Avenida is taken up with shipping and transportation company establishments. Electric signs gleam from the large buildings housing General Electric's offices and those of General Motors not far away.

American magazines are on display in the Avenida kiosks; American movies dominate the brilliance of the picture shows. The Brazilian prefers the American movies because they make him laugh; he goes to the theater for amusement and fun and not for the tragedy themes which the European movies give him.

"We Should Worry."

In the Avenida there are swarms of American automobiles, all makes, mostly open models, for torrid Brazil does not yet take to the closed model. Luxurious, high priced cars with chauffeurs, not in uniform, but dressed as if for a Sunday outing, move forward with the American mechanical light traffic system. Aimlessly back and forth the crowds move, pleasantly, unhurriedly; groups of young men standing on the corners critically and intently surveying the young ladies who pass, a flirtatious, colorful, carnivalesque medley on this hotly perfumed Sunday evening. Revolution in the offing, yes, but tonight who cares?

The night waxes merrily and riotously along in the Avenida—orchestras playing languorous music amid the clatter and pellmell and hum of human voices, the shrill shrieks of automobiles and the roar of the omnibus motors changing gears. Boisterous, exuberant, youthful Rio celebrates its Sunday night with gusto. But at midnight it goes home and an hour later the Avenida is hushed.

One Crowded Week.

Five days before the garrison of Copacabana fortress revolted and the junta took power, forcing Washington Luis into retirement, the city of Rio de Janeiro began a week of uncertainties. It went to work that Monday morning with a premonition that the week would not be concluded without momentous events. On the surface, the city appeared as usual—the same bustle of movement, shops, and business houses operating with mechanical indifference. There were signs on the streets everywhere warning against spreading alarming news and the government was announcing victories and reëstablishment of order throughout the country and the defeat of the rebels. Every one knew this was untrue. Revolt was in the air and, as a matter of fact, the rebels (now the government) were battering at the gates.

Warships of the various nations were rushing to Brazilian waters; the Pensacola was at Bahia; all that week the city was a prey to rumors; it was not a question of whether or not something was going to break, it was a question of when.

On Oct. 23 E. V. Morgan, American ambassador, and Maj. Lester Baker, American military attaché, arrived back in the city from Europe, and the next day, when all the police were removed from the streets and firing was heard at Copacabana fortress, every one knew that the expected had happened. The four or five days of revolution were on.

Communications were maintained between Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo throughout the revolution, and immediately upon Vargas' installation as chief of the provisional government they were quickly restored on all other lines.

After the first week in November one could travel anywhere in Brazil where one had been able to travel before, and the city of Rio de Janeiro quickly resumed its normal aspect after the arrival of the Gauchos.

Modern Sao Paulo.

Sao Paulo is a thriving city which has grown in recent years like a mushroom over night. Modern, alert, intelligent, it stands out with an importance of its own. Situated on a high plateau in a fertile country where the soil is dark red [as in Oklahoma], it has its own distinctiveness. Its main business is coffee, but it has numerous other industries and it pays about half of the revenue which goes to support the federal government.

The shape of Sao Paulo is irregular, a splotchy polygon in the red landscape. The hub of the city is a deep, flowery, verdant gorge, spanned by a high bridge and surrounded by high buildings, making a sort of triangle in which the city's business is transacted. There are fine monuments, many beautiful parks, and an excellent municipal theater.

Santos, the great coffee port, is two hours from Sao Paulo. Out over the red distances covered with tropical or subtropical greenery we proceed for an hour and then reach the eminence overlooking Santos. Then down, a drop down of 2,000 feet over a looping roadway which is one of the marvelous engineering feats of the world. Santos is on an island three miles up from the sea, on a green, flat lowland flanked with high hills jumbled all about, inclosing it in a circle something like Rio de Janeiro on a minor scale. It has its miles of sandy beach, which serves Sao Paulo as an Atlantic City; there are casinos where the coffee kings play at games of chance for high stakes.

In the Land of Coffee.

But Santos reeks of coffee—the greatest coffee market in the world. Into its harbor, past the narrow neck and channel, come ships from the far corners of the world, hauling away annually millions of bags of coffee. Brazil's main export item. Everywhere there are coffee and coffee talk; along the miles of docks husky "cargadores" [laborers] in endless line tote sacks up gangplanks of waiting ships, carrying it from the long line of warehouses back of the docks where are stored millions of sacks, two years' supply ahead, according to estimate, held that way under the coffee valorization or defense scheme for better prices.

Santos in itself is drab; it sprawls out over the flat country, incoherent and chaotic, but growing and developing fast. It is one of the oldest settlements made by the Portuguese in Brazil. An old Spanish baroque church bears the date mark of 1640, and it was built when Santos had been a settlement for a century. Near this church is the coffee bourse, where more coffee is bought and sold between 10 in the morning and 3 in the afternoon than in any other place in the world. The hours are made short for the Sao Paulo commuters.

At dusk we slip down the harbor, glide by the old fort, outdistance a couple of Brazilian coastwise ships rolling and tossing in the heavy, swelling sea. Then we swing and turn to keep in the narrow channel until finally the open sea is reached, and three days later Buenos Aires.

Palm Beach Plans Wheel Chair Drive for "Afromobiles"

PALM BEACH, Fla.—(AP)—The easy riding "afromobile" is slated for a comeback here this season.

Mrs. George A. McKinlock, leader of the Chicago colony, is sponsoring the return to popularity of the vehicle which threatened to become extinct.

For many years the "afromobile" or Negro propelled wheel chair, was a distinctive feature of resort life. Then came autos with gas fumes which made riding in the wheel chairs unpleasant.

Now the Lake trail, from which automobiles are barred, is being extended for exclusive use of "afromobilists," and another "wheel chair drive" has been set aside.

Chicago Boy Finds Thrills in Far South

Skips Out Just Ahead of a Revolution.

By Kathleen McLaughlin.

ONCE upon a time a saintly old monk named Pedro died and came to the golden gates. When St. Peter asked him, "What have you done?" Pedro said, "Only good." But when he said, "What did you learn?" he answered, "Nothing but doing good. I spent all my days in the monastery." So he was sent back to earth for ten years, to travel and find out something about the sphere in which he lived.

Pedro is on his travels now, in the person of a Chicago boy, Guy Ederheimer, 20 years old and a Yale student. Fascinated by the legend of the old monk and its moral, Guy set out last October to spend a year chronicling the wanderings and adventures of the mythical Pedro in a book which he is writing as he goes. He and his companion, a Cincinnati boy, saved some money and earned a few hundred more for the trip by tutoring other students.

For a New Perspective.

They shipped aboard a freighter bound for the Caribbean, to save money and to get a novel perspective on things. They have touched at numerous South American ports and visited many cities, having left the ship at Calloa, and skipped out of Lima, Peru, two days before the outbreaks there. Air mail letters reaching Guy's parents in Chicago five days after being mailed in South American ports give much of the color of the journey, which will take the boys across Africa and up to the northern coast. Excerpts fro mthe letters follow:

"Oct. 20, aboard the Nosa Chief. Dear Ones: Forget you are in Chicago. Imagine yourself propped against a lifeboat in a rythmically rolling little freighted somewhere in the Caribbean. Our fifth day out, and we've got three more before we tie up at Colon, Panama. Every sailor aboard has his tongue flapping in anticipation of the Panamaian wine, women and song. From what we've heard, the Canal Zone is a melting pot for the ships of the world. More about that later."

And a Bottle of Rum.

"Oct. 23 (same). Three cheers and a bottle of rum! We get into Cristobal tonight. Cristobal is in American jurisdiction, while Colon is in Panama—the dividing line the middle of the street. You can stand on one side and drink yourself under, but cross the line in the middle of the main drag and you'll be arrested and fined.

"We'll probably land in Calloa, the port of Lima, about Nov. 3. We'll proceed to Lima (half an hour away) and spend a few days there. There is a chance that we'll be in Guayaquil, Ecuadore, for a while, as well as Buenaventura, Colombia, so you'll get letters all along the coast."

"Oct. 29 (aboard). Last night I woke with a start—the ship fairly leaped in the air and bounced down on the water. A crash! A typhoon? Noises, cries and orders all about us. 'We have hit the line!' So my story goes. However, last night about 3 in the morning we did pass the equator and I arose, not amidst cries and hubbub, but out on a deck flooded with tropical moonlight that momentarily blinded you. The temperature has been most surprising. Around the equator I could imagine nothing but terrific sirocco heat, but it has been cool at all times. At present I'm writing in the saloon and there is a fresh, invigorating breeze, caused by the Humboldt current that runs along the coast of Peru and Chile, often going as far north as Ecuador.

"The Brazilian trouble seems to be all cleared up; so by the time we get over there we might be able to liven things up a bit. Everybody down here thinks it's all over now but the burying."

All for 80 Cents.

"Oct. 30.—[Aboard.]—At present I'm sitting at the captain's desk while the good ship Nosa Chief slips down the Guayaquil river and thence to the Pacific. Today has been a gala day for us worldwise weisenheimers. This Ecuadorian ville, Guayaquil, is the greatest place we've hit so far and this is the reason: our lunch—melon, shrimps, soup, wine [quart of red Bordeaux, 1925—the finest in Guayaquil]; fish, spaghetti and cheese, chicken and beans, steak, potatoes, all tropical fruits from prunes to alligator pears; coffee, cognac. For four Ecuadorian lucoes, or 80 cents!

"Guayaquil is really the finest city, except Panama, that we have seen. It is quite modern in places, but still flooded with atmosphere. The natives are all extremely dark and at all times asleep on the sides of the streets. Never have I seen so many bananas in all my life. We returned to the ship late this afternoon, to find the entire forward deck on both sides of the hatches, as well as the forecastle, covered by bamboo shacks sheltering thousands of bunches of green bananas."

"Pension Savoy, Lima, Nov. 4—Arrived in Calloa yesterday. Had to sign off the crew at the consulate, where we got our seamen's discharge papers. We are men of fine character and excellent messmen, so it states. Through the consul we got a pension and here we are, right above the main street intersection of the town, in our suite of rooms. Believe it or not, we have a parlor and a bedroom, and three meals a day all for six sols a day, or $1.90 in our money."

Two Live Skulls.

"Nov. 7 (same). This afternoon we got our Bolivian vises and will probably leave here to go to Mollendo by boat and thence to Cuzco, the Inca city, and thence down to Lake Titicaca to La Pas. Wednesday, with Markoff as guide, we played typical tourists, visiting the cathedral here where Pezano (1535), founder of Lima, is entombed in a glass case; and the St. Francis monastery, where no women, except an American flapper disguised in male attire, has ever entered. We were met at the door by an old monk dressed in flowing brown robes that nearly covered his bare, sandaled feet. Never had he bathed, yet he was surprisingly clean. During the Spanish civilization an atrocious criminal and murderer took refuge in the monastery, where because of his sanctuary protection it was impossible to touch him. He was given a job sorting thousands of tiles, and worked ten years before he died, his job almost completed. Today these artistically arranged tiles adorn walls and gardens.

"We went Inca hunting and returned with two pre-Incan skulls to liven up our rooms. Bones, bones, bones! That's all we saw. Between here and Calloa are the ancient burying grounds of the Incas. This evening we're visiting the opium dens with Markoff and a Peruvian journalist."

Like a Big Show.

"Nov. 9 (same). The political situation here at present is very touchy. About the middle of last August Peru had her last revolution, and Leguia, the president, who has been in power for years, a short, white haired man, about 68, was imprisoned. Ever since then the military government has controlled the country, and all over the city one finds soldiers in their snappy brown uniforms, with pistols and swords, parading the streets and directing traffic.

"Our room looks out over the main intersection, and this crossing was the center of the last revolution—most of the residents in the pension having had wonderful seats for the display. It was something like a theatrical presentation, as far as I can find out. However, at present there seems to be another movement on foot, this time communistic, but there is no telling just what will come of it. Everything on the surface is normal, but underneath and back inland there is great unrest. Brazil is now settled down—the American government even acknowledging the new government—so we ought not to have any trouble getting into Rio."

George Cardinal Mundelein will celebrate solemn pontifical mass in the Holy Name cathedral at 11, Christmas morning. Assisting him will be the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis A. Purcell, rector of Quigley seminary, the Very Rev. Msgr. James J. Horsbaugh, the Rev. Francis C. McCarthy, the Rev. Gregory Cloos, the Rev. Donald A. Temple, the Rev. Joseph P. Morrison, the Rev. John W. Barrett and the Rev. Patrick J. Hayes.

The Proper of the mass will be sung by the Quigley seminary plain chant choir and the Holy Name cathedral men's choir and boy choristers, directed by the Rev. Philip F. [illegible] and accompanied by an orchestra of sixteen pieces, will sing Gruber's Jubilee mass. The Rev. Lawrence [illegible] Smith, professor of sacred eloquence at St. Mary of the Lake seminary, Mundelein, will preach the sermon.

The first mass Christmas morning will be at four o'clock and will be celebrated by the Rev. Joseph P. Morrison, assisted by the Rev. Gregory Cloos and the Rev. Patrick J. Hayes. The cathedral men's choir and boy choristers will sing Pietro Yon's [illegible] mass. Low masses will be offered at 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 o'clock. The children of the Holy Name parish school will sing Christmas carols at the [illegible] o'clock mass.

A Christmas program will be given this afternoon by the children of the Children's Receiving Home, Maywood. The home is operated by the Lutheran Women's league of Chicago and vicinity. The program will begin at [illegible] o'clock, according to the announcement made by Mrs. G. P. [illegible]

Mrs. Hoover Will Distribute Food Baskets to Poor

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(AP)—Several capital poor families this year will set their Christmas dinner tables with food distributed by Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

The President's wife will hand out the first baskets of food at the Salvation Army hall the day before Christmas. Nearly 600 baskets, each containing enough for five persons, will be given away by the Salvation Army.

When Chicago Was Young

our best families and if they are allowed to go to New York I feel they would be a great addition to your list of masculine guests. The young men are freshmen and Mrs. Blair doesn't know what privileges are allowed. It is hard to get the right young men, I find, when I give any little company, so I am glad of suggestions and thought you might be, too.

Will was pleased at a notice I read him from the society column in one of our daily papers today. It said: "The engagement of Mr. John H. Roberts of this city and a lady from Washington is announced." He thinks the groom is so little noticed at a wedding it's a pleasure to find the bride, for once, referred to vaguely.

We attended a lovely party last Thursday evening at Mrs. Jesse Whitehead's, in honor of G. P. A. Healy, the eminent portrait painter, who formerly lived in Chicago but who has been in Paris for some years. He is internationally known, as you know, and has painted crowned heads beside most of the generals in the Union army during the civil war. Every Chicago family of note has had one member painted by him.

Every one of consequence was at Mrs. Whitehead's party. I saw Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, Gen. and Mrs. Philip H. Sheridan, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Blair, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Le Moyne, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Medill, Mr. Bronson Peck, Dr. Charles V. Dyer, Arthur Caton, and others.

All the young men were casting glances of admiration at Delia Spencer, but handsome young Arthur Caton seemed to be the favored cavalier, and I don't wonder. His tall stature, courtly manner, and immaculate dress make him a noticeable figure on the street. Will tells me that this latter characteristic—his fastidiousness in dress—is emphasized by his habit of using only the crispest of paper money. He always has on hand crisp bills to give as tips to waiters or in dismissing cabs or for any other expense. I shouldn't wonder if we'd hear of his engagement to Delia Spencer soon.

I have just had a call from Mrs. Allan Pinkerton. She and her young daughter, Joan, have just returned from Europe. It is pleasant to see friends who have spent the summer abroad returning. They have so much of interest to tell. I often feel I am terribly dull in conversation because I have not seen the Old World. Will says he will take us abroad as soon as Martha finishes school.

Much love from your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

G. P. A. Healy's daughters are Mrs. Lysander Hill and Mme. Bigot of Chicago.

Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, a beloved resident of Chicago, is spending some time in the city this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Blair were parents of Mrs. Chauncey Keep of Chicago and of the late Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams.

Arthur Caton married Delia Spencer, as "Martha" predicted. After his death she married the first Marshall Field. She lives in Washington, D. C.

Thanks to Evalyn Walz, who sends us "Maggie May," a ballad of early days.

Mrs. Allan Pinkerton's daughter, Joan, became Mrs. William J. Chalmers.

Land and Sea Sports Starting at Palm Beach

American appearance, to sing the rôle of Tonio in a production of "Il Pagliacci" at the Everglades club between Jan. 1 and 10. Gagliano, one of the Metropolitan coaches, will be down to conduct the performance and the Everglades will supply Bernar Barzelay and his symphonic orchestra, which will be at that club this season.

Most of the other singers will be members of the Romany chorus, singers of gypsy melodies, sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Dobyne and John Charles Thomas, the baritone.

The charity ball at the new Palm Beach roof was a major event of the week. Sam H. Harris, the producer arrived for the winter with Edgar Selwyn and Denid O'Brien, who will be his house guests.

Founds Women's Club to Aid Indian Tribes

DELAND, Fla.—(AP)—Aid for the American Indian is the goal of a new women's organization.

Marion Campbell of Cleveland, O., is the founder and head of the new group, the Woman's National League for Justice to the American Indians.

The organization, first of its kind Miss Campbell says, is now relieving sufferers of the Seminoles of Florida. Already, she says, it has the promise of a 1,200 acre reserve on high and dry land from Barron G. Collier of New York, who owns a whole county in Florida.

Miami to Canal Air Line Opens First of Year

'Twill Be World's Longest Oversea Project.

By Robert Wood.

THE longest regularly scheduled over-water flight of any air line in the world will be open to travelers Jan. 1, when Pan-American airways will begin to carry passengers on the mail route from Miami, Fla., across Cuba and Jamaica and over the Spanish Main to the Canal Zone.

This route is 1,385 miles long and the greater part of it, 1,315 miles, is over the water. The longest hop from land to land is 674 miles. The elapsed time required for passage between the Canal Zone and Miami will be 26 hours southbound and 28 hours northbound. Since Pan-American planes do not fly after dark, this time will include a night which passengers will spend in a hotel on the island of Cienfuegos, off the coast of Cuba.

Base on Biscayne Bay.

The Commodore flying boats, which have been used in carrying mail over the new route since Dec. 1, will use the waters of Biscayne bay as the Miami base. The planes will take off at 3 in the afternoon and fly across Cuba, arriving at Cienfuegos, a little more than two hours later. The hop for Kingston, Jamaica, a distance of 448 miles over water, will start at 6:30 the next morning, with arrival in the Kingston harbor scheduled at 10 a. m.

Half an hour later the third leg of the flight and the longest over-water hop, 674 miles without sight of land, is started. It ends at the Canal Zone at 5:30 p. m. A similar schedule is maintained on the northbound flight.

The schedule calls for two flights southward from Miami weekly on Tuesdays and Fridays and two flights northward from Panama weekly on Sundays and Wednesdays. Change of the route from that formerly flown on this division of the air line so as to take in Jamaica gives to this British possession its first addition to steamship lines as a means of connection with the outside world.

This new line does not rob Central American countries of air service, since Pan-American will continue to fly its planes twice weekly over the countries first served when the Canal Zone and Miami line was inaugurated by Col. Lindbergh. The other air trail blazed by Lindbergh from Miami by way of Cuba, the Isle of Pines and Puerto Cabezas to the Cana Zone went out of operation with the opening of the new mail line Dec. 1.

Two Safety Factors.

In starting scheduled operations of over-water flights of great length, Pan-American relies chiefly on two safety factors. One is the PN-type hull construction of the Commodore flying boats. This type of hull was developed for the navy and is said to enable the boats to remain afloat for long periods without sinking. The other safety factor is the two-way radio contact which keeps the planes in constant touch with the extensive system of ground stations maintained by the air line.

Each plane carries a radio operator as well as pilot, co-pilot and steward, and the radio man is in touch every fifteen minutes with at least two of the ground stations receiving weather reports, direction signals and other messages.

Poinsettia Tells South That Christmas Is Approaching

LELAND, Fla.—(AP)—No calendars or mysterious packages are needed in the south as reminders that Christmas approaches.

For the poinsettia is in bloom—and that's enough.

This star shaped flower with large, blood red petals is as symbolic of Christmas in many places as mistletoe and holly.

Perhaps its significance is best explained by a legend of old Mexico, where it originated.

It was the custom years ago, as it is today, to lay gifts each Christmas morning at the feet of the image of the Christ child.

Christian Miracle.

One peasant maiden, unable to do so, paused by the wayside on her way to the cathedral. Bemoaning her poverty, she knelt and prayed to the Blessed Virgin for assistance.

Raising her head with a reverent amen she was surprised to find that her tears had turned the upper leaves of a straggling weed to a brilliant crimson color. Eagerly she plucked a bouquet, took it to the cathedral, and laid it beside gifts of the more fortunate.

And ever afterward, goes the legend, the top leaves of the plant turned a deep red with the coming of Christmas.

Given His Name.

John Roberts Poinsett, South Carolina globe trotter and diplomat, not only brought the plant to this country but gave it his name. He was born in South Carolina, educated in Edinburgh, Scotland, and traveled extensively in Asia and South America.

Later he served as United States commissioner to Mexico and in 1825 was appointed special minister to that country. He brought home some roots of the shrub, a member of the spurge family, which now bears his name. It flourished and spread rapidly.

Today it forms a riot of color in thousands of spots from the lower Pacific coast to the south Atlantic shores.

St. Augustine Hotels Plan Yuletide Fun

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—Final arrangements have been completed for the formal opening of the Hotels Alcazar and Cordova to take place on Monday. Both hotels, managed by James K. Hyde, will have a special Christmas celebration. Mr. Hyde announced that the Alcazar will open with a dinner and dance.

A number of guests have already arrived at the Alcazar. Among these are W. P. Conway of New York, Mrs. Conway and their sons, Philip and William P. Conway Jr., who arrived this week. Others are Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Mitchell, Miss N. R. Caterton and her mother, Dr. Philip Leach, Dr. and Mrs. William P. Pool, and Dr. and Mrs. Frederic A. Lund of New York, Mrs. Lester S. Carroll of Evanston, Ill., and Miss A. I. Meigs of Philadelphia.

Ponce de Leon Opens Soon.

The Alcazar is attractively decorated for the holiday season. A huge Christmas tree stands in the main lounge. It is adorned with countless old fashioned ornaments and glitters with small colored lights. The great tree of balsam was brought here from Vermont, Mr. Hyde's home state. The main rooms, hung with Christmas wreaths and garlands set off by the natural growing poinsettia blossoms and brilliant red hibiscus, give a true Yuletide spirit.

The formal opening of the Ponce de Leon will take place on Jan. 10, when an elaborate dinner and dance will take place. A New York orchestra will play. This is the first of a number of entertainments to be held throughout the season.

The social life is delightful at the Ponce de Leon. Weekly card parties and tea dances in the Palm Grove are attended by the winter colonists and all year residents, as well as the hotel guests. Among those who have been guests for many seasons at the Ponce de Leon and who have made reservations for early arrival are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Merriam, Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eych Wendell, and Mrs. James H. Benedict of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Herman F. Erben of Schenectady, Walter H. Wilson of Chicago, George Worthington of Cleveland and Bennington, Vt., and George W. Hartnett of St. Louis.

The St. Augustine links is now open for play. The clubhouse is framed in a setting of huge oak trees hung with Spanish moss and is the center of outdoor life. Luncheon and tea are served under brilliantly colored French lawn umbrellas. Dances are held here weekly.

Tennis continues to hold its share of popularity. Both the Ponce de Leon and Alcazar have excellent clay courts. Capt. Valerian Yavorsky, tennis professional, is in charge.

Visitors Increase in Number.

Mrs. George T. Smith and her daughter, Miss Alleyne Smith of New York, have returned and are now established for the season in their home on Marine street after a summer in the Carolinas and a motor trip through the north. Mr. and Mrs. Warren Miller and their son, Purviance, of Gloucester, Mass., have returned for their second winter in St. Augustine and are in one of the Valencia cottages. Mr. Miller is widely known as a writer of adventure stories and has gained fame especially through his war and navy stories and those of the orient. He has spent much time with the French Foreign Legion in northern Africa.

Mrs. Miller, better known as Susan Barst Miller, is prominent in art circles and her paintings hang in some of the best and largest exhibitions in the country.

The coming week is anticipated as one of the gayest of the season. Hundreds of visitors will attend the first winter turf meeting in Florida on Christmas day at St. Johns park, near this city. The inaugural feature is the Christmas handicap. The meet, which will run eighteen days, has attracted an unusually fine list of thoroughbreds from the leading stables. These will compete later at Miami.

See Europe and Die—After You Have Paid for It

How It's Done Cheaply and Painlessly.

By Frederic Babcock.

OUR courier was an English gentleman. He had seen service with Gen. Allenby, and had helped wrest Jerusalem from the Turks. He said he was going to write a book: "Yanking Yanks Through Europe." He didn't say which he preferred: Yanking Yanks or fighting Turks.

We were on a student tour—the inexpensive way to see the old country. We had traveled Tourist Third across the Atlantic, and had no regrets. So far as we could observe, we had had all the fun, and those in first class had done all the posing, all the dressing up, and all the looking bored.

Paris was a disappointment. About all we saw were other Americans trying to look like un-Americans. Those who had been there for a day or longer were inclined to turn up their noses at us. But after we had been there a day, we could turn up our noses at those who had arrived the day after we did. So the honors were even.

On to Paris.

My knowledge of French was limited to "Parlez-vous" and "Oui, oui." We drove to Rheims in an open car. It was too cold. I decided to go back by train. Our party had quite a few young ladies. They knew more than I did. They told me what to say.

I left them at the champagne works and started for the city. I saw a traffic cop and said to hime something like "LA gare." He pointed out the station.

As I came near the station I found what I took to be a short cut. I took it. Pretty soon I noticed that a gendarme was following me. I quickened my step. He did, too.

I hurried into the station and tried to remember what the girls had told me. I stopped at the ticket window. The gendarme came up behind me and spoke a few choice words, with gestures. I replied with something like "Jeh neh compray Fronsay." He grew louder. So did I. Both of us shouted in our native tongues. I judged he was calling me a number of things, but I had no means of knowing, and no way of answering.

It was a draw. After a while, he grew weary of battle, and withdrew.

Midwestern French.

I wondered if I would have as good a time with the ticket agent. I knew my pronunciation of middle western American French must be perfect. I said:

"Oon billay a Paree."

He gave me it.

I said: "Koam bee-en?"

He told me. But he did not inform me.

I took out some shin plasters and handed them over to him. He handed some of them back.

I said: "Kell air?"

He replied. But, somehow, I did not understand him. I thought maybe I had slipped a bit. I tried again:

"Kell oor?"

He replied again. I got desperate. I began shouting my favorite: "Jeh neh compray Fronsay."

After a while, he took pity on me. He said:

"O, hell; 4 o'clock."

The Room of Mystery.

The other high light came in Naples.

There were seven unattached males in our party. We were determined that we should see everything. The courier was determined that we should not.

I am not up on my "Last Days of Pompeii." But I have been given to understand that that was where the rich Romans made whoopee on Saturday night. The present day Romans, not so rich, have dug up a lot of dirt about their ancestors. It is pay dirt. The American tourists do the paying.

Most of the interesting exhibits of what the people did and thought before Vesuvius padlocked the place have been removed to a little room in the museum at Naples. Only select groups are allowed to go into the room. We decided we were one of those groups. We hung back until after the girls had gone around a corner, and then we called a native guide and made for the room.

Only four persons are allowed to enter at a time. We were seven. So three of us stayed outside while the other four went in. They had not been in there long when our courier rushed up and spoiled everything. He threatened to have the guide fired, and all of us kicked out of the party and several other things.

It ended by our rejoining the ladies. Four of us came away wiser; three of us, like Omar, might have come out the same door we went in, only we didn't even get to go in. I was among the three.

* *

Sorrento at Sunset.

I felt better about it after we got to Sorrento.

I had seen the grand cañon of the Colorado, and the grand cañon of the Yellowstone, and Chicago from out in the lake at night, and New York from below the Battery, and Niagara Falls all lit up, and Seattle and Washington and Denver. But I had never seen Sorrento.

We dined at sunset. We looked across the bay of Naples, and saw the city and, far above it, Vesuvius. Vesuvius was thinking of erupting. It was giving off a glow.

If you don't get what I mean, it's because you never have sat in Sorrento and looked across the bay at sunset.

That Superior Feeling.

We did Rome and Venice and Stresa and Lucerne and Heidelberg and the Rhine and Brussels and Amsterdam and London and the Trossachs. And we felt properly broadened. We who had been to college in America found we knew nothing about college until we got to Heidelberg. We liked everything in England except the English.

We came home feeling greatly refreshed and altogether superior.

But I'm still wondering what that gendarme said to me at Rheims, and what was in that little room in Naples.

SKIMMING FUN FROM THE WAVES

GERTRUDE EDERLE, noted swimmer (left), and her sister, Helen, ride the shoulders of two boy friends in an exciting aquaplane jaunt on the California shore. The sport, however, is not limited to athletes. It's one of the most thrilling diversions of the winter resort beaches.

British Mountain Climbers to Scale Peak in Himalayas

LONDON.—(AP)—A group of British mountaineers is planning a new assault on the home of the Buddhist gods.

Plans are almost complete for an expedition early in 1931 to Mount Kamet in the Himalayas, second highest peak in the British empire and yet unscaled.

If the climbers succeed they will have reached a higher summit than any other party of mountaineers.

Led by Frank Smythe, a member of the expedition which was defeated on Kinchenjunga slopes last year, the party will leave London for India late in February.

Smythe will be accompanied by Squadron Leader E. B. Beauman, R. L. Holdsworth, and Dr. Raymond Green, an Oxford doctor.

"We shall start from Almore at the eastern base of the mountain," Smythe said in outlining plans for the expedition.

"We shall, of course, have to encounter the opposition of superstition.

"Buddhists believe that the mountaintops are the homes of the gods and that a strange race of extraordinary ape-like men—the snowmen—inhabit the mountains. I hope to be able to break down these beliefs."

"Model Stores" Aim to Reduce Cost of Living for Italians

ROME.—(AP)—"Model stores" that sell foodstuffs at low prices are working to reduce the cost of living in Italy.

The merchants themselves started the movement. Certain storekeepers are designated to set the pace, and they are pledged to cut prices below prevailing standards on most foods that are considered necessities.

Eventually, it is expected, competitors of these "model stores" will have to meet lower prices, too.

Season Opens at Southern Pines

SOUTHERN PINES, N. C., Dec. 20.—[Special.]—The season here opened with the doors of the Mid Pines Country club, which began its tenth season. Among those who arrived this week at the Southern Pines hotel were Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Drynan of Chicago.

Archery is one of the favorite sports of the visitors here and among those on the range thus far have been Mr. ad Mrs. A. W. Corwin, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Comstock, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Abbott, Mrs. David Sloan, and Mrs. Maude Parker Child.

MANUFACTURER'S SACRIFICE SALE

The description given below does by no means begin to describe the sacrifice that we are making to turn this stock into cash. We manufactured these radios for one of Chicago's leading music houses who since placing their order with us have been declared bankrupt and are no longer in business, leaving us no alternative other than disposing of this stock manufactured for them direct to the public—a sale never to be duplicated again.

For example—beautiful hand carved French period solid walnut cabinets [these cabinets alone were manufactured to sell for $165], equipped with nationally known 7 tube A. C. screen grid radio complete with electrodynamic speaker, at $59.75.

We can furnish other standard makes of radios such as R. C. A., GENERAL ELECTRIC, HOWARD, ATWATER-KENT, etc., with the above mentioned cabinets.

Any of our beautifully carved solid walnut period cabinets can be had without chassis at prices that warrant you discarding your old cabinet. These cabinets will fit any standard radio chassis.

Open Sun., 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

A Christmas Gift of Lifelong Value.
This Christmas give a certificate good for a course of instruction in French, Spanish, German, Italian or English at the Berlitz School. Here is an ideal gift—one both unique and practical—that every man, woman or child will appreciate.
You give them hours of pleasure when you give them a course in language instruction at this school. The famous Berlitz Method of Language Instruction makes mastery as easy, fascinating and simple as a pastime. Mere presence in the classroom and participation in the conversational practice assure learning any language just as naturally as English is learned by American children. Language course certificates will be made out for any length of time you desire.

Territory Managers

Manufacturer established over 30 years with highest grade credit rating, on account of large expansion program, offers a very few men who can qualify an unusual opportunity. We are not selling house to house, and are interested only in men who are capable of intelligently calling on merchants. Therefore you must be well dressed, have strong personality, between 30 and 55 years of age, and with car; able to qualify for bond and interested in making more than bread and butter livelihood. The position offers a remuneration big enough to interest the highest class salesmen; prefer men with meat and grocery experience or experience selling mechanical refrigeration, freezer counters, coolers, grocery boxes. This is not necessary if you can qualify as we fully train all men before putting them into the field. Only interested in serious minded men who want to make a permanent connection. Appointment by telephone only. Call Mr. J. E. Mayer, Hotel Sherman, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. Monday.

PACKARD CLUB
Model 640 de luxe club sedan. This car's owner believed in having every comfort together with smart appearance, such as the season's outstanding color style—jet black with gray striping, 6 wire wheels, 6 tires, trunk rack and many other features. You have undoubtedly noticed cars of this type on the street. This Packard has actually been driven very little, in fact, it is still 98% new. We believe that in selling the car at our low price we will make a friend of whoever buys it and that it will be the means of selling many more cars for us. For this reason you will have to act quickly as you cannot buy Packard cars that have the appearance of new and that carry our standard warranty very often at our specially reduced price of $1,950, terms, trades; picture upon request. BY ARTHUR CRAW
[Chicago Tribune Press Se

Washington, D. C., Dec. cial.]—Enactment of the dollar emergency construct paved the way for the earl of $1,200,000 toward cons the Illinois waterway.

Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, gineers, who has tentativ upon this allotment, is rea specifications to cover bid struction of the first unit nois project. Contracts wil ed within a very few we Gen. Brown's program, an tion work on the project, discontinued by the state considerably more than a when its funds ran low, sumed at the earliest pos Although congress last spr ized the expenditure of $7 the completion of the state tween Lockport and Utica, tions under the authoriz heretofore been lacking.

Dresden Lock First in

The first federal contracts nois project will apply to th island lock and dam, which the five major structures the building of the wate others being at Lockport Road, Marseilles, and Star The total estimated cost of den island lock and dam is about half of this amou having been expended by Work on a $1,300,000 contr lock and dam was 49 per pleted when construction w tinued by the state in the f Another state contract, tot 452, for metal work at Dres was 42 per cent complete tract for dredging in the island pool, totaling $339,5 per cent completed. Nothin done under a fourth contra 000 for machinery.

The tentative schedule fo tion as mapped out by G contemplates completion of Illinois waterway project period of about three years

Three Millions for Ill

It is planned to allot at le 000 from river and har priations for the fiscal ye the Illinois waterway which $1,200,000 allotted from the fund, will make a total of or more available up to Ju This would leave a balance 000 remaining to be appr the authorized $7,500,000.

The $1,200,000 for immedia ture is to come from the appropriated for river and provements in the 1:3 mi emergency construction bill terday by President Hoover

Under tentative allotmen by Gen. Brown a total of of the $22,500,000 will be work in what is designated Mississippi valley divis includes the Ohio and Miss as well as the Mississippi.

Mississippi Appropria

The allotment for work sissippi river between the Minneapolis is $2,400,000 $1,800,000 is for work on sippi between the Illinois Minneapolis, and $600,000 b Illinois and Ohio rivers. Th includes $950,00 for the R lock and dam, $700,000 fo City lock and dam, $100,0 new dredges, and $50,000 fo the Minneapolis harbor.

The tentative allotment t lakes division is $1,157,000 cludes $322,000 for the Ca bor and river, $68,000 for t river, and $8,000 for the C bor. Also included are $ Milwaukee harbor, $137,000 troit river, $90,000 for the perior harbor, and $8,000 f river in Wisconsin.

Of the remainder of the fund, $4,200,000 will go to Atlantic division, $3,141,500 Atlantic division, $2,821,440 of Mexico division, $1,555, north Pacific division, and the south Pacific division.

Three Million for F

Besides the $22,500,000, th gineers will have charge penditure of $3,000,000 for ing of levees for flood con Mississippi.

If Illinois desires to borro federal government for hi struction under the provisio section in the 116 million its apportionment of the fund for this purpose will 116. The apportionment fo is $2,521,282; for Indiana, for Wisconsin, $1,992,410, an $2,112,319.
